BRUNETTE OBTAINS THOUSANDS IN LOOT

Cashier and Bookkeeper Are Left Locked Up in Vault—Girl Misses One Money Package.

Austin, Texas, December 11.—(AP) Rebecca Bradley, 21, graduate of the University of Texas and a stenographer in the office of Attorney General Dan Moody, was arrested tonight and charged with robbing the Farmers' Exchange bank of Buda, Texas, today.

The bank was looted of between $1,200 and $2,400 at the noon hour by an unmasked girl, who entered the building on the pretense of using a typewriter and when all but two bank employees had gone to lunch, cooly produced a revolver and forced them into the vault, escaping in a motor car.

Miss Bradley Identified.

J. M. Littlepage, Austin chief of police, said Miss Bradley had been identified as the girl bandit by S. A. Jamison and Raymond Howe, cashier and bookkeeper, respectively, at the bank, who were the victims of the holdup.

The girl was rushed to San Marcos, south of here, in the county in which the robbery occurred to forestall habeas corpus proceedings filed in the district court here by her mother, Mrs. Grace E. Bradley. The proceedings were dismissed late tonight when the court was informed that Miss Bradley had been formally charged with robbery in Hays county.

Miss Bradley laughed and joked when taken into custody, officers said, but would not admit the robbery.

The girl received her bachelor of arts degree last June and had been working on her master of arts degree.

Her mother, an employee of the state insurance department, declared the charges were "ridiculous."

The Bradley family is a prominent one in Texas. Miss Bradley's father died some time ago, and she and her mother are reported to have been in straightened circumstances.

Mrs. Bradley said prominent citizens of Austin had agreed to go on her daughter's bond.

TEXAS BANK LOOTED BY FLAPPER BANDIT.

Austin, Texas, December 11.—(AP)—A mere slip of a girl, about 17, alone and unmasked, today robbed the Farmers' Exchange bank at Buda, a typical "Main street" town, near here, of an undetermined amount of money.

Calmly the girl walked into the bank, posed as a newspaper woman and borrowed a typewriter in the rear of the building. When all but two employees had left for lunch, the girl whipped out a revolver from a coat pocket and robbed the institution. After locking Cashier S. A. Jamison and Raymond Howe, book-

Atlanta May Get General Offices Of Southern Road

With Government Seeking Present Washington Site, Move Started for Location Here.

ATLANTA PLANNING TO MAKE "MASS BID"

Success of Plans Would Mean Addition of Thousands of High-Salaried Workers to City.

Crystalization of a movement to launch an intensive drive to bring to Atlanta the general headquarters of the Southern railroad is in progress among civic and business leaders of Atlanta, it was disclosed Saturday, as the result of a definite trend in Washington looking to acquisition by the government of the site of the present headquarters building on Pennsylvania avenue as a part of the national capital building program.

Henderson Hallman, head of the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, has begun to lay the foundation for a mass bid from Atlanta to the Southern to remove its great headquarters here in event the Washington building is condemned by the government—which now appears certain in the early future.

The chamber and its industrial division will keep in close touch with the situation at all times, and when the time comes for a decision on the part of the Southern authorities as to the matter of relocating its headquarters, Atlanta will be in readiness to present, in the strongest possible manner, the many advantages held forth by Atlanta.

Federal Plans.

The federal government is moving, under the capital building program, to acquire at an early date practically all land lying south of Pennsylvania avenue to the Mall for new government buildings.

Conspicuous in this tract and fronting on Pennsylvania avenue in a strip of territory now occupied by private business houses is the mammoth office building of the Southern system, covering a vast area and towering 10 stories high. The structure was erected only a few years ago and is one of the most magnificent in Washington, but steady progress on the capital building program has brought conditions to such a point that early condemnation of the site now seems definitely assured.

The last congress voted a fund of $50,000,000, a large part of which is to be used for construction of a great building program for the national treasury, and actual need for the land lying about the Southern headquarters building is soon to arise. Condemnation proceedings are pending in a bill before congress, and while no definite action to this end has been taken, it is regarded as inevitable that it will develop in a very short time.

Employ Thousands.

The Southern headquarters building affords a place of daily employment for thousands of workers connected with the administrative department of

MEXICO PREPARES FOR NICARAGUAN ATTACK, DIAZ SAYS

Calles Government Outfitting Vessel With Armed Expedition To War on Nation, He Adds

Managua, Nicaragua, December 11. (AP)—President Adolfo Diaz, of Nicaragua, today issued a manifesto in which he renewed his accusations that the Mexican government is actively supporting the present liberal revolutionary movement in this country.

He charged that reliable information indicated that officials of the Mexican government were outfitting a vessel which, with an armed expedition, would proceed shortly to Nicaragua under the escort of Mexican gunboats to make war against his government.

Diaz Offers Peace.

Asserting that successful Mexican interference in the government of Nicaragua would mean the confiscation of private property, the denial of religious freedom, communism and political disorder, President Diaz called upon the liberal revolutionists to make peace with his government. Peace, general amnesty, compensation for revolutionary losses on the basis of political fairplay and a national government in which the liberal party would be assured equitable participation are promised to the revolutionists.

Soliciting the cooperation of all Nicaraguans and the moral support of the nations of the world President Diaz warned Central American governments that their sovereignty would be menaced if Mexico were to obtain a foothold in Nicaragua by materially aiding in the overth w of the present

WILBUR'S REPORT SCORES COOLIDGE ECONOMY ON NAVY

Congress Also Rapped for Not Providing Larger Funds for Repairs and Alteration.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, D. C., December 11.—How Coolidge economy has cramped and crippled the navy is disclosed in mild but unmistakable terms by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur in his annual report made public today. As a result of the retrenchment in naval expenditures, decreed by the president in the budget and approved by congress, the military efficiency of the nation's first line of defense has been seriously impaired. The secretary's report is in reality an indictment of the policy of starving the navy. Here are the counts in the Wilbur indictment:

1. Because of lack of funds for repairs, replacements, and alterations the navy is not in condition for the most effective use in an emergency. Not only is the navy unprepared for war, the report indicates, but it would take months to prepare it for war.

Shortage of Officers.

2. Because of limitation of funds for the Naval academy there is a shortage of officers.

3. Because of reduction of the enlisted personnel the navy is undermanned.

4. Because of the lack of funds worn-out shop equipment at navy yards, vital to efficiency of the fleet in time of war, has not been replaced.

"On account of the expense which would be required for the complete upkeep of the fleet," says the secretary, "it has been necessary to apply available funds chiefly to repairs and to limit the alterations to be undertaken on any ship to those for which special allotments were made by the bureaus concerned. Instructions to this effect were promulgated August 14, 1924. The general result has been that the material condition of ships in and out of commission as a whole has been improved somewhat. Many alterations of military value have been held in abeyance, however."

Deterioration of Ships.

That the condition of our fighting ships has deteriorated, and that they are in a state of unpreparedness, are implications of the secretary's state-

British Writer Discusses Lure of Printer's Ink

:: PACE, NEWS SENSE AND ROUTINE, TAKEN UP ::

(Editor's Note—Thomas Cadett, of The London Times, is the holder of the Walter Hines Page newspaper fellowship, and is spending a year in America under the terms of the fellowship. He has temporarily joined the staff of The Constitution. Mr. Cadett has served on the staffs of The San Francisco Chronicle and The Chicago Daily News. The Constitution was selected, without its knowledge, as the representative southern newspaper on which he is to serve in getting a national acquaintance with American conditions.)

BY THOMAS CADETT.

There is a subtle and peculiar poison contained in printer's ink. The drug addict has a roseate future, salvation looms large on the horizon, if his plight be compared with that of the lowliest hack who ever filled a column. Journalism is a bitter affair that rends and rewards with the same hand; material reward has nothing to do with it, or newspapermen would long since have been plasterers. Like the stage, once its mordant delights have been tasted, the palate refuses all else.

The public knows nothing of these things. Why should it? Few of us ride in a motor car, live in a house, or use any manufactured article with a single thought for the man who made it. Nevertheless, the press knows the world, and the world knows not the press. If my own country is any criterion, general interest in the machinery, literal and figurative, is curiously lacking; in order to make certain the failure of a play or novel, for example, it is only necessary to take newspaper life as its theme.

Yet the truth is that it is the most vivid of professions, with a breadth of interest and human experience that leaves even the practice of medicine far behind. It is a robust faith in humanity that survives in such a case; only, when it does survive, there attaches to it something that is nearer the answer to the riddle of life than all the academic philosophy and ethics in the world.

Getting and Giving News.

The getting of news, however, which incidentally provides this wide acquaintance with the many sides of human nature, is only the first step on a long journey. The presentation of news is the logical sequence which affords to the journalist certainly an equal measure of interest, and an even greater array of difficulties. Sisyphus, rolling his stone uphill for all eternity, was undoubtedly preparing for a future reincarnation as a member of the press.

Newspapers throughout the world can no longer afford to close an eye at any moment of the whole 24 hours. It is undoubtedly American journalism, however, which has to meet the greatest demands, the greatest strain. With a public avid for news, with competition notable even in the greatest competitive atmosphere in the world, there can be no slackening in tension that will not be immediately reflected in the newspaper's disadvantage; moreover, there is a pride, based not at all in material things, which will not allow failure even to be considered.

To describe the organization of a newspaper is to attempt the imprisonment of a vital element in dreary words; let others try—I shall not. But a shred of imagination gives at least a hint of what is surely the most remarkable mixture of romance and prosaic hard work in the world. A man gives a few cents to a dirty little boy, little reckoning that the sheets of paper he receives in return represent the expenditure not merely of millions of dollars but what is worth so much more, the ingenuity, industry and devotion of the hardest-worked men in the world. For him, and the millions like him, the doings of the world at large and the incidents

Advertising Will Aid You If You Give It A Chance

This issue of The Constitution carries a large number of advertisements, in which are offered practically everything that any person may want to purchase.

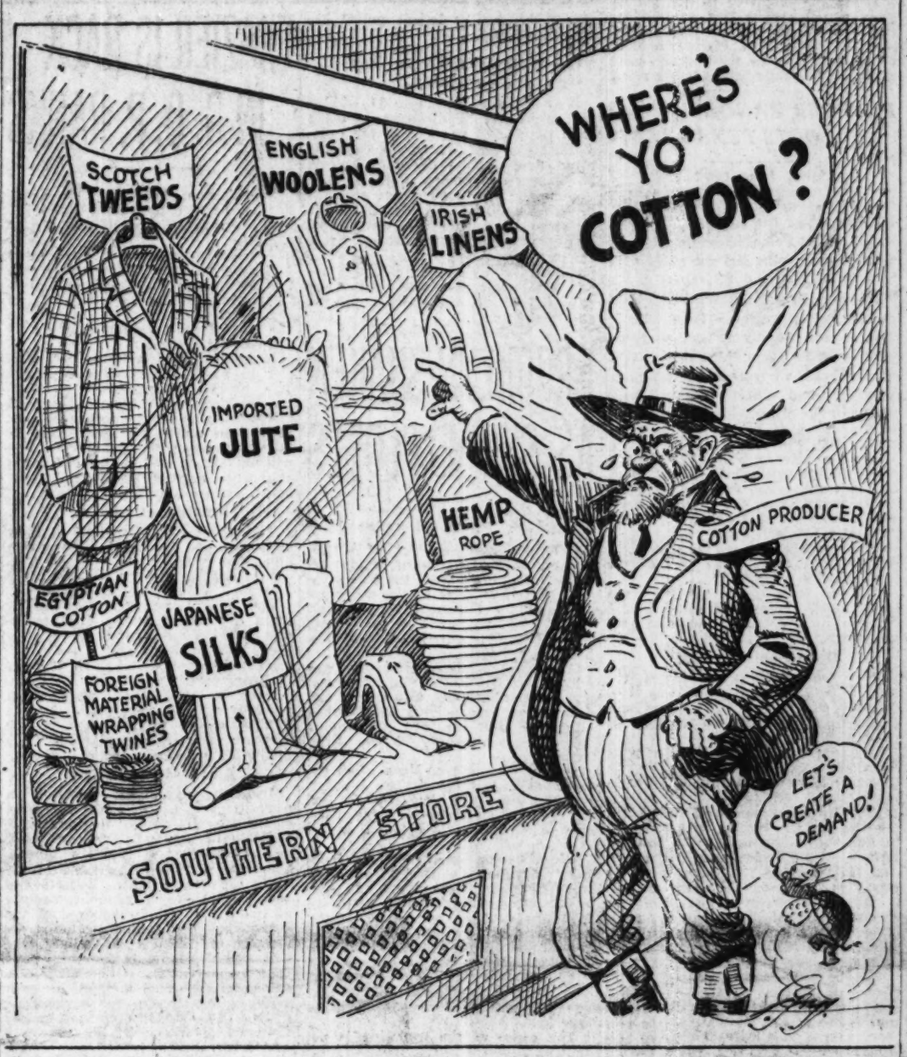

Their purpose is to tell you where you may buy what you desire. In most instances a complete description of each article is given and the price quoted.

That is all helpful to you. In the quiet of you home you may canvass the entire city by aid of these advertisements, and in the end you may be able to make your purchase by telephone and have it delivered at your door; but at most you know just where to go to get what you want, and that saves time.

Never neglect to read the advertisements in The Constitution, for—

SUSPECT JAILED IN TULLY DEATH

Lee Kinney Captured in Barricaded House as Hit-and-Run Driver of Death Car.

Lee Kinney, suspected of being the driver of the hit-and-run automobile, which struck and killed Thomas E. Tully, 62-year-old clerk, on the night of November 15, was arrested in a house surrounded by armed officers at Jefferson, Ga., according to telephonic advices to Police Chief James L. Beavers late Saturday afternoon.

The message was given by Sheriff Culberson, of Jefferson, who said that Kinney was arrested at the house, only after eight armed men had surrounded the building. He will be brought to Atlanta tonight by Detectives M. P. Warren and J. J. Chester, who have been investigating the accident.

Chief Beavers turned the information over to the detectives Saturday afternoon and instructed them to leave for Jefferson at once with a warrant for Kinney. The warrant was signed by Judge Luther T. Rosser, Jr.

According to information given to Detectives Warren and Chester, soon after the accident, Kinney was the driver of the death machine and he has been sought since the accident.

Tully was killed just before midnight on Peachtree street, near Pine street. He had just finished some auditing work at the United States Veterans' bureau, where he was employed, and was about to board a Peachtree street car at the time of the accident.

He was struck by a light touring car, which contained four men. The car dragged his body for about 50 feet, then ran about 200 yards farther, where it was abandoned by the men. Several broken whisky bottles were found near the abandoned car, which was seized by police and taken to the station house, where it has been held since.

NEW TRIAL ASKED FOR SHOVEL KING'S LOVE BALM CASE

Pittsburgh, Pa., December 11.—(AP) John W. Hubbard, wealthy Pittsburgh manufacturer, who was ordered by a federal court jury to pay Anne Caldwell, New York show girl, $50,000 for breach of promise to marry, will seek a new trial, his counsel said today.

New Governor Will Put Ban On Dress Suit

Dillon Refuses To "Put on Dog" at Inaugural Ball.

Santa Fe, N. M., December 11.—(AP)—Out here where gorgeous wooly chaparrajos cause no comment and the abbreviated costume of the Indins causes not so much as the flicker of an eyelash, a great stir is being raised over formal evening dress.

Governor-Elect R. C. Dillon is the center of the controversy. He says he will not wear full evening dress to the inaugural ball on New Year's eve.

The executive committee in charge of the ceremonies says that the governor-elect must conform to custom.

The matter rests there and the outcome probably will not be known until the festivities start.

Governor-Elect Dillon has stated he would prefer to have no dance rather than to have it formal. "I've never seen the necessity for wearing a dress suit in my life and I hardly want to begin 'to put on the dog' at my age," the next chief executive of New Mexico said.

The committee in charge of ceremonies has countered with a statement that "the ball will be strictly formal" and that "Mr. Dillon will not direct our actions until after the first of the year and until that time he is our guest and must conform to custom as well as everyone else."

92 CITY WORKERS TAKEN OFF ROLLS

Action Necessary To Keep Garage and Construction Departments Operating.

Ninety-two employees of the city shop and garage and construction departments will be laid off Wednesday in order to permit operation of these two departments of the city government, it was announced Saturday by B. Graham West, city comptroller.

Curtailment of the activities of these departments is necessary to keep them operating for the remainder of the year, it was stated, and the order to reduce the forces was issued Saturday by Mayor Walter A. Sims, Mr. West and Councilman A. J. Orme, who form a special supervising committee to direct department affairs for the remainder of the year. They were empowered to do this by a special resolution passed by city council.

This decision on the part of the committee will permit emergency repairs and replacements of motor equipment of Grady hospital, police and sanitary departments and assures that these will remain operating for the remainder of the year.

Reports Wednesday were that the garage and shop department would be forced to close unless funds to purchase supplies were raised. This action on the part of the committee solves, at least for the present, the financial crisis.

Passage of the $4 minimum wage bill by city council was said to have caused depletion of funds of the construction department and garage and other departments of the city government, as well as advances in costs of supplies. The main cause of the latest crisis in the garage department was diversion of a $3,000 fund from this to pave Foundry street.

Seventeen men were stricken from the shops and garage departments and 75 from the construction department. Most of those in the construction department were truck drivers and laborers.

William A. Hansell, chief of construction, announced that all work which is being done by prison labor will be continued and only those employees who were on the payrolls will be dropped until January 1.

MINE BLAST DEATHS REACH TOTAL OF 31

Princeton, Ind., December 11.—(AP) The death of Jesse Williams, of Francisco, this afternoon increased the fatalities as a result of the Francisco coal mine explosion last Thursday to 31. There still are 25 injured men in the Methodist hospital here.

DEMOCRATIC PLEA FOR $335,000,000 FUND IS REFUSED

Republicans in House Ways and Means Committee Vote Solidly Against Measure.

TAX CREDIT PLAN ALSO KNOCKED OUT

President Coolidge Asks Congress for $175,000,000 Appropriation To Pay Refunds.

Washington, December 11.—Tax reduction at this session of congress was definitely killed today.

The house ways and means committee voted to table all tax legislation for the remainder of the session. This means the end of President Coolidge's proposal for a credit of 15 per cent on next year's taxes as well as the democratic plan for reduction of corporation taxes and repeal of automobile, admissions and stamp taxes.

Democrats on the committee attempted to make their program the order of business, but were defeated.

Hawley Moves to Table.

After the democrats had failed to get recognition for their plan, Representative Hawley, Oregon, republican, moved to table all tax reduction proposals, including that of the president. This was carried on a strictly party vote, 14 to 10.

Revenue legislation has to originate in the house, so that the action today is final. The ways and means committee is charged with initiation of all tax legislation.

As a result of this action, the surplus for this year will be used for reduction of the $19,000,000,000 public debt. President Coolidge estimated this surplus at $383,000,000 in his annual message to congress. Democrats contend it will reach $500,000,000 or more.

The action of the ways and means committee was forecast by the statement earlier in the day of Republican Floor Leader Tilson, of Connecticut, who advocated application of the surplus to the public debt.

Shelving Expected.

Shelving of the president's proposal was generally expected, as republican leaders in congress received it coldly when it was first announced several weeks ago, and have continued to find fault with it since.

This lack of cordiality was so evident that Coolidge, in his annual message, did not insist upon his plan, but left to congress whether they should adopt it or apply the surplus to the public debt. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, it is known, preferred that the surplus should be applied to the debt, but he supported the tax credit plan as "feasible." Coolidge first suggested a "rebate" on taxes for the current year, but Mellon later substituted

DENSE FOG TIES UP NEW YORK TRAFFIC

New York, December 11.—New York, the New Jersey coast and southern New England shifted into low gear today as a dense fog, intensified by smoke, added new hazards to the speed with which this section usually races through its last business day of the week.

Street cars, elevated trains and motors crept through the mid-day and late afternoon darkness with their headlights making only a dim blur in the heavy pall of fog which had turned day into night.

Weather bureau observers ascribed the phenomenon to a lack of wind. Smoke from the New Jersey side rolled across the river and mixed with the fog and until sundown there was not enough breeze to clear the atmosphere.

Incoming ships dropped anchor in the bay off Staten Island and waited for the air to clear before attempting to dock. Ferries and tugs set up a bedlam of foghorns and sirens. The former ran from 10 to 15 minutes behind schedule throughout the day.

The United States liner President Harding, the Holland-American liner Amsterdam and five freighters were fogbound at quarantine.

Manhattan with its usual snarl of traffic even on bright days was almost paralyzed by the curtain of darkness. Automobiles and street cars clogged every important intersection along Broadway. Traffic policemen worked bravely to untangle the congestion but their signals were obscured by the darkness and several of them gave up in despair and joined the fog soaked crowds on the sidewalks.

LIVE STOCK RATES IN SOUTHEAST CUT

BY SAM W. SMALL,
Special Staff Correspondent.

Washington, December 11.—New rates on cattle and hogs in carloads from western markets to the southeastern states have been prescribed by the interstate commerce commission. The White Provision company, of Atlanta, was one of the complainants against present rates from the western markets to Atlanta and Moultrie, Ga. The commission has decided that the rates are unreasonable and ordered reasonable and lower rates to take effect on and after January 20, 1927.

In its report it says that "during recent years complainants at Atlanta and Moultrie have found it necessary to buy a large part of their supplies, particularly hogs, in western markets. The reason given is a rapid decline in that commercial supply in the southeast. The necessity of going to the western markets occasioned their complaints. Complainants also seek a reduction in the rates from Chicago so as to make that market available to buyers in the southeast." This last sentence refers to complaints by the Chicago Live Stock Exchange and Swift & Co., of Chicago.

These complaints and the action of the commission to satisfy them should be a stimulus to the cattle and hog producers of Georgia especially. It is neither logical nor economic for Georgia's packing industry to have to import beef cattle and hogs from Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and other western supply depots. The grazing lands and farms of Georgia could not only easily supply all home demands but capture some large place in the export trade.

This phase of Georgia production should interest more deeply than ever our state economists.

SLAIN GANGSTER HURLED FROM CAR

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 11.—A big automobile roared through the 110th street arch under the Park avenue viaduct of the New York Central at 3:27 this morning, and turning south, dashed past Policeman Albrecht, of the East 104th Street station, before he had a chance to stop it for speeding.

Albrecht, rapping with his club to attract the attention of policemen down the avenue, saw a door of the car fly open at 108th street. A man was thrown out and rolled along the gutter. The car, increasing its speed, shot down Park avenue.

The policeman ran to the man and found he was dead with bullet wounds in his neck and at the waist band. Later, the dead man's finger prints were taken to police headquarters and identified as those of Dominick Albero, of First avenue, whose police record shows fourteen arrests and a term at Sing Sing for highway robbery.

Detectives inquiring among his associates today said they expected to find that Albero had incurred the enmity of a band of highwaymen or bootleggers and, in the Chicago gang language, they had "given him a ride."

FLAPPER BANDIT LOOTS TEXAS BANK

keeper, in the vault, the flapper bandit escaped in her coupe.

Girl Gets Thousands.

Officers said the girl got away with between $1,200 and $2,400.

The woman was described as a slender brunette, weighing from 110 to 115 pounds, quietly dressed and not over 16 to 18 years old. She appeared at the bank an hour before the robbery and told officials she had been sent to write an article about the town of Buda, which has a population of about 300. She chatted with half a dozen or more visitors and waited until all customers had left at noon. Jamison and Howe were preparing to go to lunch when she suddenly drew a gun from her coat and commanded: "Stand where you are!"

Jamison was just coming out the vault. Howe was in his cage at the bookkeeper's window.

"Mover over closer to him," she commanded Howe. He obeyed. The woman then ordered both men into the vault.

Orders Safe Unlocked.

She told Jamison to unlock the safe. "Dig that money out," she commanded, her gun leveled at Jamison's head, with Howe also in front of its muzzle.

Jamison handed out two packages of currency, each containing $1,200. Another he dropped to the floor without the girl seeing it.

She then slammed and locked the vault door, leaving the men inside.

Persons on the street, who had not suspected the robbery, said they saw her calmly enter her coupe and drive away on the Post road toward Austin.

With a screwdriver, Jamison and Howe succeeded in opening the vault door from the inside within 10 minutes and immediately telephoned officers at Austin and other towns.

Austin police and Travis county officers set watch on roads between Buda and Austin for the girl, but did not intercept her. As news of the robbery spread, hundreds of curious persons crowded into the town to see where the flapper bandit pulled her single-handed job.

TWO UNMASKED BANDITS GET $1,184 PAY ROLL.

New Orleans, December 11.—(AP)—Two unmasked bandits escaped today with the $1,184 pay roll of the Commercial Crescent Warehouse company after holding up William J. Falcon, bookkeeper and cashier of the firm.

Stepping from a street car near the company's office, Mr. Falcon was approached by a man who commanded him to surrender the satchel containing the pay roll. A moment later an automobile driven by another man stopped, and the bandit, possessed of the pay roll, stepped into the machine and the pair drove away.

BROOKLYN SHAKEN AS SHIP EXPLODES

Brooklyn, N. Y., December 11.—Fifteen members of the crew aboard the oil tanker Agwisun, which exploded in drydock here tonight, probably owe their lives to the quick resourcefulness of Thor Brage, an oiler aboard the ship, and the nimbleness with which they negotiated a life line, hand over hand.

A terrific explosion amidship was felt all over Brooklyn. The decks were ripped, the ship burst into flames and dense black smoke from the burning oil poured over the area surrounding the Robin's drydock, in the Erie basin.

Brage, who was on deck when the upheaval rocked the tanker, threw a line to a tug 30 feet distant. He and his companions made their way, hand over hand, to the tug before a second explosion occurred.

Windows in houses around the docks were shattered by the blast, which was felt for miles around. Persons in the streets nearby were showered with debris and one man, John Walter, a shipyard worker, was thrown to the ground and his leg broken. Four other persons were cut or bruised.

Firemen controlled the flames an hour after the explosion and no fear was felt for three vessels in docks near by.

The cause of the explosion is not known.

Work To Start Soon Upon First Unit of Greater Wesleyan College

Bids are to be opened during January for the erection of the first unit of the Greater Wesleyan college buildings to be erected at Rivoli, just outside of Macon. Work upon the unit of buildings shown in picture will begin early in 1927 and will cost approximately $3,000,000.

FRAZIER IS BACK IN G. O. P. RANKS

Washington, December 11.—(AP)—Senator Frazier, the North Dakota insurgent, is again a republican in good standing.

He was invited back into the party fold today by organization leaders who two years ago banished him from their councils and deprived him of committee plums because he was in the La Follette camp during the 1924 presidential campaign.

Republican leaders asked Mr. Frazier to again attend their caucuses. The republican committee on committees decided to restore his committee assignments. This means that he will be placed on the Indian affairs committee among others which will put him in line for the chairmanship when Senator Harreld, of Oklahoma, retires March 4.

Frazier Is Receptive.

The proposal that he return to party councils found the North Dakota senator, who recently was invited with other colleagues to a white house breakfast, in a receptive mood.

He insisted, however, that he be given his former status on committees on the ground that he had always been a republican and his ejection from conferences and loss of committee standing not justified.

After a republican caucus which probably will be held Wednesday, he will be moved up from the bottom of the committees and take his place in line as a majority member.

Another Fight Blocked.

Decision today of the committee on committees to assign Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, to the chairmanship of the judiciary committee, as the successor of the late Senator Cummins, of Iowa, also dispelled another threatened fight. Reports had been emanating from republican sources that he would be deprived of the chairmanship as punishment for his support of William B. Wilson, the democratic candidate for the senate from Pennsylvania. Other chairmanships agreed upon included Senator McNary, of Oregon, for agriculture, Phipps, of Colorado, for irrigation, and Couzens, of Michigan, for education and labor.

Assignments to fill vacancies included Senator Gillett, of Massachusetts, on the foreign relations committee to succeed his former colleague, William M. Butler; Bingham, of Connecticut, on appropriations, and Edge, of New Jersey, on finance, succeeding the late Senator McKinley, of Illinois, and Gould, of Maine, on the District of Columbia committee to succeed the late Senator Fernald. All those effected by the assignments are republicans.

OLSON BELIEVED HIDING IN CANADA

Prairie du Chien, Wis., December 11.—The Canadian royal mounted police who "always get their man" may be enlisted to bring in Erdman Olson, 18-year-old college boy, who is accused of murdering his sweetheart, Clara Olson.

Officials tonight said they were in possession of evidence which indicated Erdman probably was hiding somewhere in the Canadian northwest. They are inclined to believe the youth turned north immediately after disappearing from his home. He left in October, a few weeks after Clara had disappeared. Her body was found in a shallow grave a little more than a week ago and a coroner's jury charged Erdman with the murder.

Reports of Erdman's capture continued to come in from various parts of the country today but officials doubted that any of the suspects held was the fugitive.

SUSPECT HELD AT ALMA, GA. NOT OLSON, BUT DESERTER.

Alma, Ga., December 11.—(AP)—James Pittman, who was being held in Bacon county jail, suspected of being Erdman Olson, wanted in Prairie du Chien, Wis., for slaying his sweetheart, Clara Olson, is not Olson. Sheriff W. L. Johnson tonight received a message from the sheriff of Crawford county, Wisconsin, stating that the youth is not the one wanted here.

Bacon county officers stated tonight that Pittman has confessed that he recently deserted from the United States army at Fort Slocum, N. Y., where he had enlisted three months ago.

The youth said his home was in South Carolina. He also told Sheriff Johnson that he tired of army life shortly after he enlisted so he left the army post without the knowledge of the officers.

The youth was arrested when a man who worked nearby Pittman, employed as a hired hand on the farm of T. A. McNeel, 12 miles from Alma, telephoned the sheriff that Pittman fitted the description of the youth wanted in Wisconsin, and the tales he told of his wanderings furtherd the suspicions.

Pittman will be returned to the army authorities at Fort Slocum.

Mrs. Chaplin Planning Suit For Divorce

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood, Calif., December 11.—Mrs. Lita Grey Chaplin next week will file suit for divorce and custody of their two children against Charles S. Chaplin, millionaire moving picture comedian.

Mrs. Chaplin's counsel, Attorneys George Beebe and Edwin McMurray, made public the following statement after a conference tonight with their client and her mother, Mrs. Lillian Spicer.

"Mrs. Chaplin will file suit for divorce and custody of her babies immediately. Negotiations pending have failed to result in any reasonable or adequate proposal on Mr. Chaplin's part for support, maintenance and education. He has refused to relieve their present inconvenience and necessity. He has even made it a condition of settlement that she give up her youngest baby. This, Mrs. Chaplin positively will not consent to under any conditions.

"It remains to be seen whether or not his apparent concern for possession of one of the babies is merely for effect."

The statement was signed by Attorneys Beebe and McMurray. Efforts to communicate the statement to Chaplin and to Chaplin's lawyer, Loyd Wright, of Los Angeles, were met with the statement that both were out of the city.

Mrs. Chaplin announced her determination to file divorce papers after rejecting a money proposition which her lawyers termed "inadequate." Chaplin's proposal was submitted by Loyd Wright, Chaplin's attorney, this morning. Wright said, "I made them on Mr. Chaplin's behalf what we consider a fair offer. They turned it down."

It is understood that Chaplin's included an offer of $300,000 as a cash settlement and a demand that the father receive the custody of the younger child, known as Sydney Earle, eight months old.

SWAIN SENTENCED TO DIE IN CHAIR

Macon, Ga., December 11.—(AP)—Judge H. A. Mathews, in Bibb superior court, today sentenced James A. Swain, convicted of killing J. Walter Johnson, 18, in December, 1924, to die in the electric chair at Milledgeville on December 31. It was the second time that the death penalty had been imposed upon him.

Swain appealed his case after his conviction but a new trial was denied. Last week, his attorneys argued a petition for clemency before the prison commission in Atlanta but no decision on the petition has been announced.

Swain shot and killed Johnson on the street here and then drove his automobile home and is alleged to have attempted to kill his wife and mother-in-law.

The petition of clemency was filed on the grounds of mental deficiency jealousy and self-defense.

BRITAIN AND JAPS AGREE ON CHINA

BY JOHN POWELL.
(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Shanghai, December 11.—The British and Japanese governments are in agreement to being about a division of China, with separate governments for the north and south areas, each recognized by the powers. This is disclosed by the negotiations of Miles Lampson, the British minister, with the southern government officials at Hankow.

The British-Japanese action, while contrary to the American policy for a united China, is considered inevitable because of the impossibility for Cantonese to control the whole country.

At the present time the Canton nationalist government controls practically all the territory south of the Yangtze, while the northern militarists dominate most of the northern provinces an Manchuria, resulting in a political division of the country into two sections, with the Yanktze river separating them.

According to a high American authority the British-Japanese recognition of the Canton nationalist government is bound to produce a critical situation for American interests in China through the downfall of the Washington conference treaties and the possibility of turning Cantonese antagonism toward America.

According to the authority quoted, British-Japanese recognition of the Cantonese will amount to a reversion to the old sphere of influence policy, with Great Britain the dominant factor in south China and Japanese dominant north of the Yangtze.

Although the details of the British negotiations with the Cantonese are not disclosed, Mr. Lampson's conciliatory attitude already is producing fruit in the stoppage of the anti-British both in Canton and Hankow.

Reports have long been circulated that the civil war may suddenly be terminated through the friendly mediation of Great Britain and Japan based on agreement that Canton's control in south China be undisputed, while General Chang Tso-Lin will rule in the northern provinces.

13 JURORS READY IN MELLETT CASE

Canton, Ohio, December 11.—(AP)—After six months' investigation into the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton editor, the state Monday will lay its case before a jury in the common pleas court of Judge Edwin W. Diehl.

Prosecutor C. B. McClintock in his opening argument will tell the jury he seeks to prove that Patrick Eugene McDermott, first of three codefendants to be tried, was an underworld hireling who joined in the counter attack of organized vice against the editor's crusade.

Defense Contention.

The defense, counseled by E. L. Mills, James Emsley, and Homer C. Durrend, will declare that McDermott not only did not kill Mellett but that he does not know who were the conspirators.

Thirteen jurors, selected in a week's tedious struggle, are locked under guard, although the only "evidence" thus far in their possession is the memory of a trip yesterday to the murder scene. They face the possibility of not being able to quit their task until after Christmas. Prosecutor McClintock said that he expects seven days to be taken up by the testimony of the state's 40 witnesses. Probably only a single day will be required for defense testimony, Mills has said.

Eighteen of the 40 witnesses for the state were named in subpoenas issued today, but only a few of the names were revealed.

Thee Defense Witnesses.

Three defense witnesses have been subpoenaed—Tom and Bernard McDermott, the brothers who surrendered Put three months after the nationwide search for him was begun, and Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective, leading investigator for the prosecution. In addition to the defense was announced, it will summon B. Rudner, Nassilton, and Louis Mazer, Canton, McDermott's co-defendants, and alleged underworld leaders.

KING FERDINAND MUCH IMPROVED

Bucharest, Rumania, December 11.—(AP)—King Ferdinand has improved, following his surgical treatment early this week for an intestinal ailment, to the extent that the doctors have decided to issue no more medical bulletins.

The last bulletin, given out at noon today, says:

"The king continues to improve. Temperature 97.9, pulse 68."

Discussing as to the advisability of removing King Ferdinand to Paris for radium treatment at the Curie institute has been resumed in government and royal circles.

When Professor Rigaud, of the Paris Pastuer institute, came to Bucharest a few days ago he proposed that the monarch be taken to Paris. The government, however, at that time was not willing to acquiesce, Professor Rigaud has returned to Paris and it is understood he is discussing with the Curie institute arrangements for the treatment of the king, who has been variously reported as suffering from an intestinal ailment and cancer. Radium is extensively used in cancer cases.

EVIDENCE IN MELLETT CASE BEGINS MONADY

Canton, Ohio, December 11.—(AP)—Both prosecution and defense in the trial of Patrick Eugene McDermott, charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, were preparing today for the start of testimony on Monday. The jury was completed yesterday. There was a recess today.

Most of Monday, says Prosecutor C. B. McClintock, is to be used in presenting to the jury the story of how Mellet, crusader against the underworld, was slain at his garage door shortly after midnight on July 16.

RADER TO RESIGN LOCAL PASTORATE

In order that he may enter full time evangelistic work, the Rev. Luke Rader, pastor of the Central Baptist church, has decided to resign his pastorate January 1, it was announced Saturday night by M. L. Thrower, close personal friend of the pastor.

Rev. Mr. Rader will enter evangelistic work with his brother, Rev. Paul Rader, who is known throughout the United States as an evangelist, and who has filled some of the largest pulpits in the Baptist denomination during revival campaigns.

Formal announcement of the resignation is expected to be made Sunday morning at the regular service when the Rev. Will Huff, visiting evangelist, who has been conducting a revival campaign at the church for the last week, will preach. Rev. Huff will preach Sunday night also, this meeting being the final service of the revival.

Here Three Years.

Rev. Rader came to Atlanta about three years ago and assumed the pastorate of the Christian Alliance church, an interdenominational institution located on Capitol avenue. After a short time at that church he was invited to assume the pastorate of the Central Baptist church and since has acted in that capacity.

During his ministry in Atlanta, Rev. Rader has been one of the most active pastors in the city, according to M. L. Thrower, of the Business Men's Evangelistic club.

"Rev. Rader has made it a hobby to preach at least one time every day since he has been in Atlanta," Mr Thrower said. "He has held many revival meetings throughout this section of Georgia and last summer was guest of the Business Men's Evangelistic club at its three-day camp at Clayton, Ga., where he preached several times daily.

Goes to Chicago.

Rev. Rader will go to Chicago from Atlanta, it is expected, and there will join forces with his brother. They will make Chicago their headquarters and will conduct evangelistic services at the Moody institute there and at other places.

As vice president of the Baptist Ministers' association, Rev. Rader has been actively interested in its work and is closely affiliated with all religious movements in Atlanta, according to Mr. Thrower.

NOTE TO GORE SAYS JACK WILSON 'GANG' DID NOT KILL CHEEK

A note believed by Fulton county officers to have been written by a crazed person was received Saturday by Mell Gore, under death sentence for his part in the killing of W. H. Cheek, saying that neither Gore, Jack Wilson, Theodore Berry or Ruby Ray killed Cheek, but another person, who was standing behind the door of the little Peachtree grocery last December.

The note was mailed at Cedartown and was written partly in type and partly in a scrawling pencil. The writer was a woman, who said she was a fingerprint secret service agent. She promised to have the murderer in court soon. The letter was sent to Gore at Milledgeville, but was forwarded to Fulton tower, where Gore awaits a supreme court decision regarding his fate.

'SAFETY THINKING' URGED AT YULETIDE

"Do your Christmas safety thinking early," pleads the Atlanta Safety council, in a bulletin on holiday accidents in homes. "The Yuletide season has certain peculiar hazards not found during other months of the year."

"Eliminate the old-fashioned candle from your Christmas tree; substituting electric lights, which are safe when watched carefully. Be sure the connections are safe and the insulation of the wires is not broken. Fires originating in Christmas tree candles, or inflammable decorations have caused the deaths of hundreds of children.

"Youngsters love Christmas trees but hundreds of fires take place every year because of carelessness, such as using candles; failure to place the tree on a firm ba , and using tissue or crepe paper for decorating purposes. Non-inflammable snow flakes should be substituted for candles.

"When trimming the tree, use a step-ladder, not a rocking chair or box.

"Wrapping paper and excelsior should be disposed of immediately.

"Dispose of the tree before it has dried out, it is highly inflammable.

"Allow nothing to mar the Christmas holidays, especially a so-called "unavoidable" accident.

"Give your children the toys they need and all you can afford but buy wisely. Be sure that tiny tots aren't given small articles that they can swallow or inhale. Look out for pins in cheap dolls.

"A number of children were seriously injured during Christmas week last year by shots from rifles, and through the explosion of fire works. In many of the cases, children lost one eye and in some instances became totally blind.

"Christmas, the happiest festival of the year, should not be the anniversary of the loss of a loved one.

"'Play Safe,' and have a merry Christmas!"

Efforts Succeed In Giving Away Old Street Cars

"Well, that's that," sighed the Georgia Railway and Power company Saturday, as it gave away those two street cars for Christmas presents. And the pretty part of it all is, they didn't just "pass them off" on some innocent person. They gave those two street cars to people who could use them to advantage, even if they didn't have any handy motormen, conductors, tracks, wheels and other odds and ends that make up trolley equipment.

Frank Dabney, who lives on the Atlanta and Northern route—at about Pleasant Hill—got one of the Christmast street cars. He filed the first application, following the announcement that the power company stood ready to present two street cars to whoever might want them.

There was a deal of sentiment about Mr. Dabney's application, according to power company officials. He'd seen old Betsy, or whatever her name was, pass by his house for these last 20 years, and he'd like to have her for his own, to give her a good home and care for her during her declining years. Mr. Dabney is going to fix the car up right in his yard, and the Boy Scouts and the community ladies committee are going to meet in her whenever they want to.

The other car goes to Frank Neely, general manager of M. Rich and Brothers department store. Mr. Neely is going to present the car to the Hebrew Orphans' home for a playhouse.

The power company used to burn their old cars. Recently it hit upon the plan of doing a lot of good and saving a lot of trouble by simply giving the old ones away. More than 20 applications were received. One man called up Saturday to cancel his application, saying that he had taken his wife a box of candy the night before and that she had become so suspicious he didn't dare take home a thing as big as a street car.

These two cars ran more than a million miles during their service on the Marietta, Ga., line and transported millions of passengers to and from the two cities. They deserve a rest

SMALL BURGLARIES REPORTED SATURDAY

Four minor burglaries were reported early Saturday morning to police. One of the robberies occurred within a block or two of the station house.

The Service Market, at 33 Butler street, near the police station, reported the loss of $4.41 in cash, a pistol, and three dressed chickens.

The restaurant of Charles Arnold, at 743 West Fair street, lost a quantity of silverware, hams, oysters, coffee, lard, flour and other property to thieves who entered through the front door with the aid of a passkey, it was reported.

The cafe at 10 North Forsyth street reported the loss of $29 in cash, together with an amount of cigars, cigarettes, etc.

The Goodwill Salvage company, at 150 Peters street, was entered through a vacant store next door and was thoroughly ransacked, though no report was made of the amount of the loss.

Mail Carrier Arrested.

Eugene Lindner, letter carrier of Sarasota, Fla., Saturday was arrested in that city on charges of theft of test letters, according to a wire received by Joe P. Johnson, postoffice inspector in charge, from Inspectors Ackerman and Reese. The telegram stated that Lindner made a full confession and that a part of the contents of the test mail was recovered.

GOVERNOR URGED TO OFFER REWARD IN NEGRO'S DEATH

Governor Clifford Walker Saturday received a request by telephone from residents of Harris county asking him to offer a reward for the arrest and conviction of men charged with shooting and killing a 14-year-old negro boy in that county Thursday night. It was stated in the message that a group of men was searching for a negro charged with shooting a white man, and that during the search they met the negro boy. After some questioning it was stated that one of the men pulled out a pistol and shot the boy to death. The governor was asked to offer a $500 reward for the arrest of the man who fired the shot.

After receiving the request Governor Walker said he would wait until Monday to receive a request from some official of the county that a reward be offered. He said the law required that such official request be made, and that as soon as he received this request he would offer the reward.

SALM SETTLEMENT REPORT DENIED

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 11.—"Just too ridiculous for words."

That's what Herman Goodstein, counsel for Count Ludwig Salm in his suit for a separation from the former Millicent Rogers, thinks of all these vulgar reports about a money settlement between the tennis player and his millionaire father-in-law.

It there is any truth in the report that Colonel Henry H. Rogers would gladly pay $500,000 to have the count abandon his claim to the custody of Peter Salm, II, Goodstein professes to know nothing about it.

All that Goodstein knows is that trial of his client's action was postponed last Thursday until January 27, but why the adjournment was obtained is not for the public to know.

The count was not in his suite at the Gladstone hotel today. He was seen to leave early in the day without his tennis racket.

The report that if he did not get a large money settlement, the count would threaten Colonel Rogers with a $1,000,000 alienation of affections suit, was branded by the count's lawyer as untrue.

Detroit, Mich., December 11.—Charged alternately with throwing hot and cold water on Wreatha Baker, 11 because the girl failed to boil eggs to suit her, Mrs. Bessie Whittaker was released on personal bond for trial in circuit court. The young complaining witness testified at preliminary examination that Mrs. Whittaker, with whom she lived, stripped her clothes off and poured the hot and cold water on her naked body.

50,510 AMERICANS SLAIN IN WORLD WAR

Washington, December 11.—A final recheck of world war records shows that the United States army alone suffered 50,510 battle deaths and 244,173 battle casualties, the war department announced tonight.

There were 5,016 shellshock cases. Of 37,568 killed in action, 1,656 were officers.

The Meuse-Argonne offensive was by far the most expensive operation, with 26,277 battle deaths and 122,063 casualties.

The first division had the greatest number of deaths and casualties during the war, with the 42d division following in the list. New York led the list of states, with Pennsylvania second.

The tables show that of the total number of wounds 61.6 per cent were caused by gun shot; 3.4 per cent by gas; 4.5 per cent by shell; 0.1 per cent by air raid, and .07 per cent by bayonet.

Eighteen men were wounded four different times, 436 men three times, and 10,535 men twice.

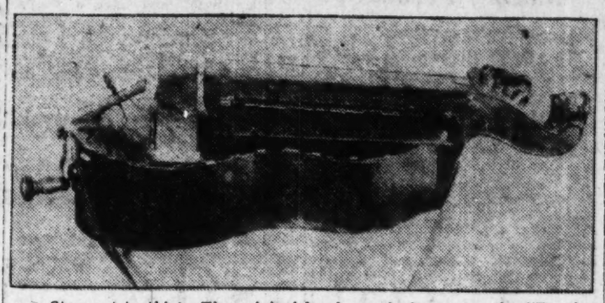

Marine corps and naval statistics are not included.

NANCY HILL HAS CHANCE TO RECOVER AFTER AUTO CRASH

Sarasota, Fla., December 11.—(AP) Nancy Hill, Atlanta society girl injured in an automobile accident here Friday night, is expected to recover, according to her physician tonight.

Miss Hill was an occupant of a car which overturned at the end of a road, going over an embankment 30 feet high. Injuries sustained were both hips broken, skull slightly fractured and internal injuries. Although still in a serious condition, the physician tonight said that chances are now good for her recovery. The only danger feared now is that Miss Hill may be permanently crippled.

Grandfather of the Violin Found in Georgia Village

Step out to this! The original hurdy-gurdy known as the "Turning Viol," a museum piece which dates back to the 16th century which has been recently discovered in Georgia and will be played by Miss Madeline Keipp, noted Atlanta musician, at a recital on Wednesday. Note the carved head, ivory inlay and crank which turns the wheel, which is rosined like a bow.

BY ROSEMARY STEVENSON.

On August 8, 1926, The Atlanta Constitution published in its rotogravure section a page of very rare and antique museum pieces, entitled "Jazz Makers of Olden Days." One of the early musical instruments shown was the first hurdy-gurdy, a viol, which, while slung from the shoulder could be ground with one hand and played on keys with the other.

Miss Madeline Keipp, noted Atlanta musician, has in her possession an exact replica of this rare and valuable instrument, which was recently discovered by a friend of hers in a small Georgia village, its owners having no knowledge of its significance or value.

"As soon as I saw it," said Miss Keipp, "I went to the library, but I couldn't remember or even copy all the things that have been written about it? It dates back to medieval times and was a feature in the Watteau fetes, when country gardens were the scenes of rustic dances. It has been extensively used in Italy but originated in southern France. In French it is called 'vivielle a roue,' the turning viol; in Italian, 'lyra rusticana,' the rustic lyre and 'lyra pagana,' the pagan lyre and in German, 'bettler leir,' the beggar lyre. In the latter country it was a peasant instrument and used for street dances.

The viol is in a perfect state of preservation and Miss Keipp will play it at the morning musicale of the Atlant Music club on Wednesday at the Woman's Club auditorium at 11 o'clock. It has a human face beautifully carved for its head and is artistically inlaid with ivory. There are six strings with small keys on one side which press on the strings. The wheel passes under the strings and is rosined and has the effect of a bow.

From the 16th century when sandalled feet danced beneath the most picturesque gown in history to its lyric tunes to its appearance in a sedate Atlanta club is a long story, that probably always will remain—a mystery!

WEALTHY RETIRED TEXTILE FACTORY HEAD FALLS DEAD

Chester, Pa., December 11.—(AP)—John P. Crozer, retired manufacturer, multi-millionaire and philanthropist of Upland, Pa., fell dead of heart failure at his home tonight. He had just returned from a hunting trip in Virginia.

He was 69 years old and was born and reared in Upland, a town founded by his grandfather. He retired from the textile manufacturing business three years ago. He was known for his many philanthropies, was the owner of an extensive thoroughbred stock farm at Kingston, Ky., and was said to have been the largest individual owner of coal properties in Virginia and West Virginia.

Mr. Crozer is survived by his widow, a brother, Edward, of New York, and Philadelphia, and two sisters, Mrs. Caleb Fox, of Ogontz, prominent golfer, and Mrs. Herman Hilpricht, widow of a noted explorer in Babylonian ruins.

Clues To Identity Of Unknown Youths Result in Failure

Letters seeking to identify the two unknown youths who were killed on Tuesday, November 30, by a passenger train at Howell's crossing, near Marietta street, have been received by The Constitution. One letter was sent by E. Evans, of Valdosta, Ga., and another by Mrs. Lillian Harper, of Thomasville, Ga.

Both writers inclosed descriptions of youths who they know have been missing for some time from their communities, seeking to discover whether the unknown dead in Atlanta are these missing boys.

The letters were referred to Harry G. Poole, local undertaker who was in charge of the funerals of the two slain youths. Mr. Poole said the dead youths did not fit any of the descriptions furnished in the letters.

Doug Wycoff Fails To Catch Pigskin Off Building Top

Douglas Wycoff, former all-southern football star at Georgia Tech and a member of Wycoff's Newark Bear football team, failed in more than a half dozen attempts to catch a football dropped from the top of the Candler building Saturday afternoon as an added attraction to Atlanta's first professional football game Saturday afternoon at Spiller field. The Wycoffs won the game from the Fifteenth Tank Battalion team from Fort Benning by a 100-to-0 score.

Peachtree street was jammed for more than two blocks on either side of the Candler building long before the stunt began.

BELLE CAMP CANDIES PROVE BIG SELLERS

By the way—

We are not in the position of the gentleman who advocates—"take the cash and let the credit go—"

That's why we inquired of a good customer why she had not taken advantage of her excellent credit.

Her answer proves her a very fortunate person. She writes: "The reason I have not had anything charged lately is because I happened to have an unusual amount of cash on hand in the last few months, and have paid cash for what I bought."

In these times—with Christmas shopping swelling the family budget—it is rare to have cash on hand. Our charge account service is for the convenience of those who may not have the immediate cash or who do not wish to carry it around with them.

Whether you pay cash or enjoy a charge account, or whether you buy anything at all, we invite you to visit our store. For we are convinced that if you come as a visitor you will return as a customer.

Better Films Members Aid School Children of City

Bright-eyed boys and girls, whom Santa Claus is likely to forget on the Yuletide; will be remembered and careful plans are now in the making to make this Christmas happy and bright for many children.

The spirit of giving and good cheer which seems to fill the air on Christmas eve must be carefully planned when this giving extends to several hundred needy school children. This year, as for the past six years, the Atlanta better films organization's central Christmas committee, will have charge of giving to needy school children of Atlanta.

Reports of advance work by the committee, announced Saturday, indicates that this year the films body will see that all children will have the right kind of Christmas. Mrs. Frank McCormack is president of the better films organization and heads the gift committee, assisted by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson and Mrs. Newton C. Wing, as chairmen.

Gifts for distribution are secured in many ways, one novel way being the mending of dolls and other toys by a class of children at the Calhoun Street school. Hundreds of toys are secured in this way and are made as good as new by work of the children.

Source of Revenue.

The principal method of obtaining money to carry forward this work is through the funds obtained at Saturday morning matinees by the better films organization at the Howard theater. This money is used to buy new sweaters and other warm clothing for children.

The Christmas committee is composed of a member of the Parent-Teachers' association from every school in the city and on such a committee the entire city is covered by the work. Mrs. John W. Lloyd is chairman of the committee, which comprises the Parent-Teachers' association representatives.

Delivery of gifts by the committee is made at each school and various gifts of toys and clothing are assembled at a central location for distribution. This year a large space is being donated for this use by the John W. Lloyd auto concern, at 32 Houston street.

Lists of children in the several schools are furnished by teachers and the lists are compiled and sent to headquarters, where gifts are labeled and then sent to the schools. The work of assembling these gifts, labeling and sorting is done by a large committee.

Matinee-Goers Help.

In addition to this means of affording children a bright Christmas, matinee-goers at the Howard theater also give for needy children. These are stored in a Santa Claus house at the Howard theater lobby and furnish a large part of the Christmas giving. Girl and Boy Scouts also are assisting with the Christmas matinee plans.

Mrs. Lloyd, chairman of the "Christmas warehouse," on Houston street, has requested that all toys, clothing, books, etc., be brought to the warehouse before next Wednesday and that fruit should be brought between Wednesday and the following Saturday.

These deliveries will be made at schools next Saturday and much time is necessary to sort out and label gifts in advance. Gifts of money to the organization may be sent to Mrs. Frank McCormack, at 509 Angier avenue.

685,041 Books Read in Atlanta During Past Year

The wide scope of service given Atlanta and environs by the Carnegie library is indicated in a detailed report for the year, submitted to Mayor Walter A. Sims, by Miss Tommie Dora Barker, librarian.

An idea of the service is given in the fact that 685,041 books were put in circulation during the year. This is an average of more than two books per resident of the city during the year. In this department there was an increase over 1925 of 52,962.

The library serves the city through the main library at Carnegie way and Forsyth street, eight branch libraries and 12 schools. In addition to lending books the library force instructed 4,000 school children in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades on how to use the library through visits to the library with their teachers.

Although the library is primarily an institution to circulate books the reference department is a veritable bee-hive throughout the year and people ask all kinds of questions. There were more than 30,000 persons who sought information of some kind through this department. Questions of great importance in business and industrial life of the city are answered daily through this department.

Miss Barker points out a few questions that must be answered by the department as: Development of the use of white space in advertising; how to make beige dye; composition of asbestos; rates of discounts of the New York Federal Reserve bank from 1920 to date; automatic electric substations, and other such questions.

An interesting statement is given in the report to the effect that about 35 per cent of the total circulation of the library is to children of the junior high school age or under.

Despite the wide range of work of the library here, it is still far under the average for cities of Atlanta's size, Miss Barker stated. One book per capita for the population is recognized as a minimum for a standard library collection and Atlanta has only .6 of a book per capita, she said.

"Atlanta has large ambitions for its growth and progress as a city," she declared, "but, unless it is to be content with mere bigness, it must be equally aspiring for the growth and progress of those institutions that contribute to the enrichment of the life of the community and cultivate the amenities of civilized living. The library is one of those institutions, and, if it is to live up to the city's expectations of itself, it must have larger appropriations for its work, for such aspirations cannot be realized cheaply."

HOUGHTON RETURNS TO PULPIT TODAY

After an absence from the city of 10 days, due to the serious illness of his father-in-law, who resides in Pennsylvania, Pastor Will Houghton, of the Baptist tabernacle, will preach to his congregation at morning and evening services today. The ordinance of baptism will be administered following the morning sermon, which will be on the subject of "Eyes that Do Not See."

The chorus choir, under direction of E. Powell Lee, has prepared special musical programs for both services.

In the evening, Dr. Houghton will deliver the third of his series of sermons on "Youth." The preceding two sermons have attracted wide attention, extracts being quoted in newspapers and magazines all over the country. As a basis for the series, Dr. Houghton sent a questionnaire to a lengthy list of college boys and girls in Atlanta, asking their opinions on various phases of modern life and the church of today. On the answers to these questionnaires, he has built his sermon series.

The specific subject for tonight's sermon is "What Youth Thinks About Morals," and some of the questions in this division, the answers to which will be read tonight from the pulpit, are: "Is Gambling Wrong?" "How Many Students Drink?" "What Percentage of Girls Pet?" "Does the Modern Dance Contribute to Immorality?" "Do Many Girls Smoke?" "What Do You Honestly Think of Cigarette-smoking Girls."

Clipping Recalls 'Good Old Day' Thirty Years Ago

If Aladdin's lamps still existed or the hands of time could be moved back 30 years, you could find Piedmont park "four miles out of the city," take the tallyho out Peachtree street for 25 cents or spend the night at Atlanta's finest hotel for the paltry sum of $1.50 a day.

But Aladdin's lamps are no more and time, alas, cannot be reversed.

In "the good old days," as revealed by a clipping from the Elmira, N. Y., Citizen, of 1895, such things were common in the Gate City of the south. The story of the now strange occurrences in Atlanta was given in a letter to the Citizen by its editor, A. T. Smith, on the occasion of his visit to the cotton exposition in 1895.

He wrote interestingly of how Atlanta looked at that time and the various customs. For instance he mentions "the immense building," the Equitable building, at Edgewood avenue and Pryor street, which was eight stories high.

Gorgeous Theater.

The exposition was held at Piedmont park, and although it was possible to take a herdic, carryall, or trolley, the best way to go from Atlanta to the grounds was by the Southern railroad. Trains left the Union depot every 15 minutes and arrived at the park seven minutes later. It took 20 minutes to go by trolley, while carryalls and herdics were even slower.

"There are many things of interest to see in this hustling city," according to Mr. Smith in 1895, "aside from the great exposition. The state capitol is an imposing structure of gray granite, located at the corner of Washington street and Capitol avenue. Other buildings are the chamber of commerce, county courthouse, Atlanta Constitution, custom house, postoffice, Grady hospital, Hebrew Orphan asylum, the Technological institute and the Grand Opera house."

"We were at the theater at the Grand last evening," he continues, "It is a gorgeous structure being the third largest in size and the second in beauty of interior appointments in the United States."

When Eating Was Cheap.

Mr. Smith advised that visitors to Atlanta at that time find board and room at private houses, although he said that finest hotel rooms could be had for $1 and $1.50 a day on the European plan. He stayed at a home on Washington street for 50 cents a day and paid the same price for his meals, which consisted of such fare as chicken, steak, sweet and Irish potatoes, greens, hominy, hot waffles, biscuits, corn bread, rice "and in fact everything good."

In mentioning hotels he says that he stayed for a day or two at the Alhambra hotel, on Peachtree street, for $1 a day. "The Aragon on Peachtree street is one of the finest hotels in the city and here the rates are $1.50 a day and upwards, European plan," he said.

Mr. Smith also talked of other interesting points of interest in the city at that time, mentioning the battlefields of Peachtree creek and Atlanta and Fort McPherson. His entire article, which was preserved by Mrs. R. B. Beach, of 443 Ponce de Leon avenue and brought to The Constitution by her, is indicative of the progress of 30 years by Atlanta and shows differences of conditions in that day along Peachtree street and those of today.

3 WHALEBOATS ARE LAUNCHED AT PIEDMONT PARK

Piedmont park took on a more oceanic aspect Saturday when three 24-foot whaleboats were launched in readiness for members of the naval unit of the R. O. T. C., of the Georgia School of Technology.

The boats were shipped here from Charleston, S. C., and they will be manned, as soon as the proper uniforms arrive, by 60 prospective young seamen at Georgia Tech.

Commander J. J. London, in charge of the naval unit, said that the boats will not be put to use until after Christmas.

Commander London said boat training is an important part of the year's work of the Tech naval unit as the boys will be required to put in time on a cruiser at sea next summer.

The naval unit is an innovation at Georgia Tech and, for that matter, is something entirely new for an inland college. The training will correspond to that received by midshipmen at Annapolis.

DECISION DELAYED ON COART PARDON

The state prison commission has not yet reached a decision on a request for a parole filed by Major Lee A. Coart, serving a life term on a charge of killing A. B. McNiece, school superintendent of Talbot county, and a request for a commutation of the death sentence imposed on J. A. Swain, Macon, convicted of killing J. H. Johnson.

Testimony in these cases was submitted several weeks ago and the commission probably will send its recommendations to the governor in a few days, it was learned.

"Where Good Furniture Is Not Expensive"

Four Proud "Little Mothers" of "Vanity Flossies" Tell How Easy It Is To Win Queen of All Dolls in The Constitution's Free Christmas Offer of Ideal Playmates

They won "Vanity Flossie" dolls. Are they proud 'n everything? We'll say they are. They're just four out of a multitude of little girls who have been awarded free dolls in The Constitution's great free offer. Left to right, they are Margaret S. Copeland, age 4, of 161 Georgia avenue, S. W., who looks enough like "Vanity Flossie" to be her big twin sister; Ellen Frances Brooks, age 5, of 74 Lakeview drive, N. E.; Lorsine Eason, age 8, of 547 Candler street, N. E., and Mary Ryan, age 4, who lives at the Henry Grady hotel.

Plenty of Room for New Entries in Game; Everybody Invited To Participate.

Here's a spur to your ambition!

Here's proof of how easy it is to win a "Vanity Flossie"—queen of all dolls—in The Constitutions' unparalleled offer of these playmates for little sister free for Christmas time.

Look at the happy expression on the faces of the four little girls pictured above. They won "Vanity Flossie" dolls without spending a penny and by means of only a few hours of easy and pleasant activity.

Look at the little girl on the extreme right above. "Vanity Flossie," whom she's cuddling so proudly, is nearly as big as she is.

Each one of them was delighted when they were awarded the prize of her efforts.

Easy to Win.

"It was easy to win, they all said. "Mama and papa helped us, and our uncles and aunts and cousins and neighbors and friends gladly made it possible for us to win 'Vanity Flossie.' We're delighted with her. She's the most wonderful doll we ever saw."

These are just four little girls out of scores who have won "Vanity Flossie" dolls. Their parents received many of the prizes, and a number of the lucky children will not realize just how fortunate they are until Christmas day comes and Santa brings them as gifts from mother or father or brother.

You, too, know some little girl whose heart would be made glad by one of these splendid dollies at Christmas. Hundreds of persons already have entered the game; many have won, and others are nearing success. Plenty of "Vanity Flossies" remain on hand; the field is unlimited; there's plenty of room for you. Why don't you snap into it and get one of these expensive and magnificent dolls?

The task is easy and the reward is great. In this issue you'll find a full page advertisement telling in detail how you may win. Turn to it now and read its provisions carefully. Then get busy. Easy succes awaits you.

See "Vanity Flossie."

If you have any doubt about the wonderful claims made in behalf of the beauty and excellence of "Vanity Flossie" drop by The Constitution and see her and compare her with other dolls. She'll win your heart instantly and completely. Her dainty wardrobe; her golden, human-like hair, blue eyes and sweet face will make an instant appeal to any little mother, but in addition "Vanity Flossie" presents many features not found in any save the most costly and exclusive makes.

The most outstanding innovations is in the form of an equipment of rubber arms, which make "Vanity Flossie" the cuddliest thing in her line imaginable. The pliant fingers of this dolly may be made to open and shut, and she'll grasp and hold a brush or a mirror or a cup or any object. This feature is one of the most attractive ever offered little doll-owners. It means expensive manufacture and is the newest invention in the doll world.

In addition "Vanity Flossie" is 19 inches tall; has eyes that roll and blink and wink, and she goes to sleep and wakes up calling "mama." Her trousseau is the last word in daintiness—from the tip of her patent leather slippers to the satin ribbons in her hair, she's a wonderful little playmate for your little girl.

Don't wait. Get in the game today and assure Christmas happiness for little sister.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS SEEK MEMBERS

An intensive campaign will be launched this week by Veterans of Foreign Wars, Great Atlanta post, No. 390, for membership, and will be continued through the week, it was announced Saturday.

A feature of the drive will be a registration tent at Five Points, which will be open Monday through Thursday. All veterans of any war who saw overseas service have been requested to register. R. L. Henry will be in charge of the tent.

The next meeting of the post will be held Thursday night at the post headquarters, 86 Central avenue, when about 40 new members will be initiated. A smoker and refreshmens will be given. Election of officers will be deferred this year until after the new members have been admitted, it was announced. Luther Durden is commander of the post and J. H. Bush is chairman of the membership drive.

BOARD OF EDUCATION WILL MEET TUESDAY

Only routine matters are expected to be considered Tuesday at the regular December meeting of the board of education, it was announced Saturday by Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president.

At the same time he announced the December meeting, Dr. Eubanks called attention to the special organization session to be held Monday, January 3, at the city hall. The new president and committees will be selected at this time, he said.

The meeting Tuesday will begin at 3 o'clock at the city council chamber.

MEMORIAL CARVING PROGRESS PLEASES LEADERS OF MOVE

Carving operations on the Stone Mountain memorial is running at least three months ahead of schedule, according to a progress summary as of December 3, given out Saturday by J. J. Haverty, chairman of the construction committee of the memorial association.

"From September 15," he said, "when the carving contractor attained full headway of operations, to December 3, a period of 69 working days, the contractor has removed a total of 264,000 cubic feet of granite, which is equivalent to 26 train loads, of 25 cars per train, and 35 tons per car. The labor of the operation has been three and one half cents per cubit foot.

"In the operations conducted by the former sculptor there was removed from the mountain a total of 130,000 cubic feet of granite, in a period of 18 months, at a labor cost of 50 cents per cubic foot.

"The present operation consists of removing the excess granite presented by the curving contour of the mountain, so as to bring the carving area to an approximately perpendicular wall. The contractor started at the heads of the riders and is working downward. The excess granite has been removed to a point below the knees of the riders. The contractor expects to be down to the feet of the horses before the end of January, which will be at least three months ahead of our expected schedule of progress.

"The second operation will consist of outlining roughly the figures of the riders and the horses, and this will begin immediately upon completion of the first operation. When this is finished, the third and final operation will be finished carving.

"All of us officially connected with the enterprise are very much pleased with the rapid progress and low cost of the operation. The work is proceeding smoothly and harmoniously without the slightest friction at any point. The contractor is faithfully executing the directions of Mr. Lukeman, and he is delighted to see the work advancing so rapidly."

LAST INSTALLMENT OF INCOME TAXES DUE DECEMBER 15

The last installment of income tax of individuals and corporations filing returns on the calendar year basis is due and payable not later than next Wednesday, December 15.

Inquiries by mail and telephone indicate that some taxpayers have in mind that the possible refund on federal taxes can apply on the December payments. Congress has not passed any legislation regarding the treasury surplus, and if a refund should be made available it cannot apply this year. December tax should be paid in accordance with notices sent taxpayers or if the taxpayer did not receive his notice and does not know the amount of tax still due he should make inquiry at the office of the collector.

Paramount Class Of Oakhurst Church To Stage Follies

"Oakhurst Follies of 1926" will be staged by members of Paramount class of the Oakhurst Presbyterian church, at 8 o'clock Friday night, December 17, in the Oakhurst school auditorium, according to announcement by Charles Laughlin, who will be one of the directors.

Five or six vaudeville acts, including a Christmas surprise act, will form the program and will be followed by the opening and closing choruses combined.

The performance, which is being held for the benefit of the church, is under the direction of Forrest Traylor, Leon D. (Buck) Smith, formerly of Coburn minstrels; Ralph Connder and Charles Laughlin.

Novel Service Plan.

The pastor of Grant Park Methodist church, Dr. W. J. DeBardeleben, has secured two large paintings which will be used in a special musical program for the next two Sunday nights. A spotlight will be thrown on the pictures while appropriate music will be rendered by the choir and orchestra.

PROHIBITION LEADERS WILL GATHER MONDAY

Leading men and women from all walks of life have been invited to a conference at 7:30 o'clock Monday night at the Chamber of Commerce building, when Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, of New York, will discuss "The Present Prohibition Situation."

Dr. Colvin is a well known authority on the prohibition question in the United States and is chairman of the prohibition national committee. He is making a tour of the southern states to discuss with leading citizens the best methods toward practical enforcement of prohibition laws.

He has given many years of study to the question and four years ago was selected by a committee of leading prohibitionists of the nation to write a history of the question. The book, "Prohibition in the United States," is now off the press.

Soon after the world war, Dr. Colvin was sent to Europe and addressed more than half the leading colleges and universities in favor of world prohibition. For 16 years he was president and field director of the Intercollegiate Prohibition association and was one of the most active workers toward securing prohibition in the United States.

Arrangements for the conference here is in charge of a committee composed of Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, Thomas G. Lewis, Mrs. Lella A. Dillard and Wilber Colvin, brother of Dr. Colvin. The meeting will be held in hall No. 1, at the Chamber of Commerce building and a large attendance is expected, members of the committee announced Saturday.

Similar conferences are being held throughout the west by the national W. C. T. U. leaders.

PHILIBOSIAN OFFERS MUSICAL FEATURES

Stephen Philibosian, Inc., well-known furniture store, at 581 Peachtree street, will present an evening of Christmas music and entertainment to patrons of the store next Thursday.

Featuring the program will be the Emory Glee club, augmented by the Moonlight Five, Hiwaiian musicians and a "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean" imitation by Ernest Rogers and Lambdin Kay.

The store will be beautifully decorated with appropriate Christmas setting and the music and entertainment will be rendered from the spacious balcony.

The furniture will be re-arranged on the first floor to provide comfortable and ample seating capacity, and the entire affair will be informal.

Special invitations to the event will be issued at the store and the firm requests that everyone who would like to attend this evening of fun, apply at the desk on the first floor for an invitation card. Invitations will be free.

In speaking of this unusual event for a mercantile establishment, one of the officials of thet store said:

"We believe we have arranged a delightful evening of entertainment for our patrons ,and we want everyone to thoroughly understand that this is in no way a merchandising stunt. The affair will be entirely free and we want all our friends to come and enjoy the affair.

"The Emory Glee club is too well known and liked to need praise and the other features are also very popular. The musical numbers will be in keeping with the season, and we believe we can safely promise an evening of real entertainment. The program will begin promptly at 8:15 o'clock.

DAUGHTERS OF HELLAS GIVE MUSIC PROGRAM

The Parthenon, an organization of young women of Hellenic descent established 1st August, gave its first musical program before a large body of friends and guests Friday night, in Edico hall, at Peachtree and Harris streets.

Miss Evangeline Papageorge, president of the society, made the opening address which was followed by the musical program, consisting of vocal, piano and dancing numbers.

Among those taking part in the program were Miss Evangeline Papageorge, Miss Annie Constantine, Miss Daisy Chotas, Miss Inez Pergantis, Miss Tacea Montrose, Miss Bessie Mitchell, Miss Lula Mitchell, Miss Helen Gianoulis, the Hantzaras sisters, Miss Helen Chotas and Miss Tocea Mitchell.

ROGERS' MEAT MARKET SERVICE EXPANDED

The growth of the meat markets operated in Rogers stores, by Rogers Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., has kept pace with the constant addition of new stores by this company, officials point out. In Atlanta alone there are 72 bright, clean, strictly sanitary meat markets enjoying a patronage that has increased 56 per cent since May 31, of this year.

In ascribing reasons for this tremendous increase in sales, W. A. Gatlin, manager of the market department, said "It is the result of a firmly established policy to give high quality at the lowest possible price. These two reasons have brought us more and more new patrons, until the cumulative result is a 56 per cent increase.

"Realizing that meat must be in perfect condition, choicely cut and attractively priced, we exercise every effort to furnish our markets with the finest type of veal, beef and pork that can be obtained, having an exclusive arrangement with one of the largest packing houses in the United States, whereby we get our meat from specially selected cattle.

Other Pure Products.

"Not only does this requirement for quality apply to meats but also to all other market products which are handled in our establishments. The fish which we sell two and three days a week; the turkeys which we offered for Thanksgiving and will again offer for Christmas; our chickens, oysters, sausage and meat loaf, are unsurpassed in quality.

"We have special arrangements with large fisheries operating out of Norfolk, Va., and various ports of Massachusetts, to supply us with the finest oysters, dry packed, in removable-top cans; and fish steaks, shipped in ice, by express. The fish steaks are an innovation, replacing the fresh trout which caused so much favorable comment by our patrons. The only reason for discontinuing the sale of fresh trout was because the season ended the latter part of November and the catch is now very small. About the first of May we will be able to get fresh trout in sufficient quantities and will renew our offering of this highly approved fish to our patrons.

"Pure pork sausage and meat loaf are manufactured by ourselves in the markets. The pure pork sausage is our pride. Into it we put no scraps—only the meat of selected, corn-fed pigs. Instead of waiting for accumulations of pork, with which beef is mixed and an ordinary pork sausage produced, we hand-pick fat little pigs and use them—hams, shoulders and all, to make this sausage. It is made fresh on Thursday, generally, and is offered for sale on Fridays and Saturdays.

"Chickens that we sell, too, are, in a majority, purchased by us at various points in the state of Georgia, shipped into Atlanta, carefully cultivated and milk fed by us in a specially designed chicken house, then killed and hand-dressed the day before they are offered for sale. We are not able to obtain enough chickens for all of our requirements by this method, but in many instances, 90 per cent of the chickens offered in our markets have been dressed by us.

"We went to considerable expense at Thanksgiving time to personally select 700 turkeys, so that we would be sure to get proper size, healthy, fat ones. For Christmas we will purchase another lot of similar high quality.

"The increase of sales in our markets can be directly attributed to our policy of furnishing the very highest type of meats, poultry, fish and oysters at the most attractive prices consistent with their quality, and we promise those, wherever we serve that this extraordinary quality and unusually low price will be maintained."

Macca Club Meets.

The Macca Civic club will hold its regular meeting Monday night at 8 o'clock at the home of the vice president, Mrs. R. L. Beddingfield, 741 Peachtree street.

ARCADE BUILDING NOW DECORATED FOR CHRISTMAS

Thousands of Christmas shoppers who pass through the Peachtree Arcade every day, are being greeted now with a magnificent display of Christmas decorations. Every year the tenants of the building, cooperating with the owners of the building, through the leadership and sponsorship of the Arcade Cooperative association, make of the Arcade building one of the show places of the city, around the Christmas shopping period. The general background of the decorations this year consists of fresh-cut evergreen trees, decorated with red, green and white, and sprinkled with imitation snow. In the center of the building, extending from the Wall street level almost to the ceiling, is a huge Christmas tree, which, in addition to the color combinations referred to, is brilliantly lighted with lights of many colors.

Charles A. Green, of the Charles A. Green Optical company, is chairman of the special committee in charge of the decorations.

The Arcade Cooperative association is affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, and the officers are: T. H. Fulton, president; L. M. Anderson, first vice president; Jack Weinstock, second vice president; J. J. Bookout, treasurer; C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

Information gained from a careful study of the negro death records during 1925 in the Atlanta Bureau of Vital Statistics shows great need for a community interest in every phase of negro life. This 30 per cent of the submerged and unattended part of the population is actually raising the death rate of the whole population; when 30 per cent of any population produces nearly 50 per cent of the total deaths it becomes everybody's business and interest, since directly or indirectly it affects every citizen as well as the community as a whole. The computed death rate among Atlanta whites show 12.8 per thousand for 1925 on the basis of a white population of 153,600. On the basis of a negro population of 66,400 the computed death rate is 29.4 per thousand. The death rate for the whole Atlanta population is raised 5 points over the white death rate to 17.8 as a result of the large death rate among negroes.

Careful attention, greater emphasis and a more sympathetic interest in human welfare will eventually wipe out this difference. Thirty per cent of the population, because of neglect to a large degree, furnished more than 61 per cent of the deaths from pneumonia and more than 55 per cent of the deaths from heart troubles. Thirty years ago the white death rate was similar to that of the negro today. Modern homes, better health information, supervised recreation, infant welfare conferences, better paying jobs—most of which are factors denied the negro in the community, wiped out the causes of this shamefully high death rate.

Deaths within the first year claim a large number of infants because of lack of knowledge and understanding among mothers together with their inability to do because of sheer poverty. Poor and overcrowded homes add their toll. Poor paying jobs cause poor homes. Fundamentally the problem is largely economic. White Atlanta should see this negro economic problem and recognize it.

Everywhere one travels along Elgewood and Auburn avenues, in the Summer Hill and Pittsburg sections and in the first ward, he is reminded by large placards that the week of December 13 is negro trade week. One becomes greatly enthused when he observes the gigantic effort being put forth by the negro business men to rehabilitate business which suffered such a severe setback two year ago. Prizes in gold are to be given coupon holders on the night of the 20th at the Y. M. C. A., on Butler street. The whole project is being sponsored by the Atlanta Negro Business league in an effort to place greater emphasis on the cooperation which should exist between the negro business man and the negro consumer.

President John Hope and Dr. A B. McCoy have been invited to speak before the committee on church cooperation at a special meeting to be held Thursday evening, December 16, 1926, at 7:30 p. m. This meeting will be held at the president's home on Morehouse campus. The subjects of their talk will grow out of their experiences and observations in Europe.

For ten years or more the committee on church cooperation has held weekly meetings in the interest of a better inter-racial attitude and a more happy life and understanding in the community between the two races. It is expected that much inspiration as well as information will be given the members of the committee from these distinguished speakers.

VITAMIN-STARVED?

Everybody needs vitamins every day of life, but more so when Nature withholds the health-imparting rays of sunlight.

During the winter a child's diet should be enriched daily with Scott's Emulsion, rich in cod-liver oil vitamins.

Where there is a tendency to rickets, weak bones, unsound teeth, or there is susceptibility to winter ills—the cough and cold, its wealth of vitamin-nourishment is a wonderful help.

If vitamin-starved take Scott's Emulsion. It's cod-liver oil at its best; pure, palatable—easy to take.

"... even for lazy people"

Take yourself, for instance—

Do you attend to the little, important things of life as conscientiously as you should?

Do you run out of gas or water in your car now and then? We all do.

Do you put off going to the dentist with the regularity your teeth—and your health—deserve? Many of us do.

Are you careless—or lazy—about attending to lots of other little, important things that bring on trouble when neglected? Who isn't?

Take brushing the teeth, for example: even in this simple little job many of us are careless.

At night we're tired; in the morning we're in a hurry.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth.

In short, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean — and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing! Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay.

LAMBERT PHARMACAL CO., ST. LOUIS, U. S. A.

* This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel . . . At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts tooth decay.

Postbellum Days in Atlanta

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Days when Atlanta was a struggling little city of less than 20,000 population and the first postbellum days of the sixties when the foundations of the present southern metropolis were laid are brought to mind in a perusal of the first city directory ever published, a copy of which is owned by John C. Whitner, pioneer business man.

The directory was compiled in January, 1867 by V. T. Barnwell and was the forerunner of the present bulky volumes which contain the lists of names of the Atlanta citizens. The book listed approximately 2,500 names and carried much other information concerning the little railroad junction city which had just emerged from a disastrous siege by hostile armies.

Information concerning various organizations of the city, the state and municipal government commands the keen interest of the citizens of the present day while the advertisements printed in the volume reveal a state of business which is picturesque as compared to the bustle and activity of big business of the modern Atlanta.

Atlanta's First Daily.

When the directory was published Andrew Johnson was president of the United States; Charles J. Jenkins was governor of Georgia; Judge Joseph Henry Lumpkin, of Athens was chief justice of the supreme court while Logan E. Bleckley, was reporter of the supreme court. T. G. Simms was postmaster of Atlanta and the postoffice was located at the corner of Broad and Alabama streets, according to the directory.

Atlanta's only daily newspaper at the time the first directory was printed was The Intelligencer, published by Jared Irwin Whitaker which was the forerunner of The Constitution. In its advertisement in the directory it was stated that it was "The oldest paper in upper Georgia." Its subscription price was $10 a year which is more than is charged today by The Constitution.

Advertisements in the directory tell an interesting story of the business conditions of that day more forcefully than anything else in the book. Numerous firms took advertising space in the volume but almost all the firms listed are no longer in existence. Out of all the firms the only ones in business at present are the Atlanta National bank and the John Silvey company. Judge George H. Hillyer, prominent lawyer of Atlanta, was represented in the first directory with a business card.

Dealers in dry goods and groceries were the leaders in the advertisements but the pages showed that even in that day Atlanta harbored a wide variety of business enterprises. In the list were the usual run of business houses such as grocery, dry goods, hardware, jewelry, banks, commission merchants, wholesalers, book and drug stores.

"Them Wuz the Days."

Wines and liquors of all kinds were liberally advertised in the pages of the directory. George Sharo advertised, "imported and domestic liquors, segars, brandies, wines and whiskies. Pure Kentucky, Monongahela, rye, nectar, Scotch and Irish whiskies." The Opera House saloon and restaurant advertised as a special feature that it operated a barbershop in the basement. The National hotel advertised that it had "a fine billiard parlor equipped with Phelan tables and a bar stocked with fine whiskies and wines." Another place well stocked with drinks was "the Granite Front" saloon.

One of the advertisers of that day who could not operate his business profitably today was the owner of the Tennessee Livery stables, who offered to young men the latest styles in rigs and stylish turnouts. W. W. Boyd advertised the Georgia State Lottery for the benefit of the Masonic Orphans' home. J. H. James, banker and broker, dealt in "gold and silver bullion and gold dust."

The forerunner of the modern department store was the business of G. W. Jack, who advertised "confectionery, foreign fruits, cove oysters, nuts, catsups, canned fruits, preserves, toys, fireworks, fancy willow ware, raisins and crackers."

Hunnicutt & Bellingrath advertised all kinds of steam and gas fittings and announced that they made "whisky stills to order." A. C. Ladd advertised that he would give his personal attention to the erection of "copper and iron lightning rods."

Neckin' Unknown Art.

Love sick swains in those days were not as forward in affairs of the heart as those of the present day and had to have recourse to an instruction book in this delectable science. Professor H. Foster Smith, in a full page advertisement, outlined the contents of his book, "Science of Love in Courtship and Marriage." It showed, according to the advertisement, "the philosophy of love, the principles upon which persons may select congenial companions, remedy the evils of injudicious marriages, improve offspring and elevate humanity." In addition a chapter was devoted to the subject, "How to Grow Rich and Happy At Home." The volume sold for $1.50 and so impressed the editor of The Newnan Herald that he gave it the following testimonial:

"The author has placed upon our table a copy of the above work and its perusal has afforded us unalloyed pleasure. His style is pleasing, language chaste and his irrefutable conclusions invaluable."

E. W. Munday was the bargain pioneer of his day. "Good bargains to be had" in his advertisement. "Come one, come all to the sign of E. W. Muraday. The cheapest goods in the city. Ladies' goods. Gent's goods. Give me a call."

Railroad Schedules.

The directory printed the schedules of the four railroads entering Atlanta at that time, the Georgia railroad, Western & Atlantic, Atlanta & West Point and the Macon & Western.

Names of all members of the fire department and the police department were printed. S. B. Sherwood was chief engineer of the fire department. There were three fire companies composed of active and honorary members. L. P. Thomas was head of the police department yith the title of chief marshall. He received $1,500 a year and had 30 policemen on the force who received $2.25 a day each.

The directory at that time carried complete rosters of all the churches of the city and all the fraternal organizations. It listed also the streets and avenues and parks. Names of the members of the standing committees of the city council as well as county officers and state officers were printed.

Mr. Whitner, who owns the directory, was in the insurance business in 1867. He advertised as "a general insurance agent" and in his advertisement, which occupied the entire back page of the book, he gave a list of customers whose losses have been "promptly adjusted and settled."

TAX REDUCTION DEAD FOR YEAR

for this the credit of 15 per cent upon next year's taxes, to be deducted from payments in March and June.

The democrats proposed a reduction of $335,000,000, contending that the treasury surplus would go far above this figure. Their plan was drawn by Representative Garner, of Texas, ranking democrat on the ways and means committee.

Politics Is Charged.

After the action today, democrats charged that republicans are making a "political football" of the surplus. They pledged themselves to seek a permanent reduction before the short session ends, March 4, but as they are in the minority this will be impossible.

Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, democratic floor leader in the house, said there is no reason for sidestepping tax reduction now.

"We cannot avoid the feeling," he said, "that underlying the whole matter there is a certain amount of partisan by-play. The majority party wishes to postpone tax reduction until the next congress so that it will be done on the eve of an election and create a public psychology favorable to the party in power."

Republican Position.

Republican members of the committee, Chairman Green, Iowa, said in a statement, believe all taxpayers will benefit by using the surplus to reduce the public debt while only those who pay income taxes would benefit from the president's plan. The democratic plan, he said, was unsound and offered for political purposes.

The present revenue law has not been in operation long enough, Green said, to permit a permanent reduction in its rates.

"Tax rates," he said, "should be based on actual experience rather than vague estimates if we would avoid constant raising and lowering of rates, with all the consequent disturbance that such a program would entail. Republican members of the committee have considered the three propositions with great care. They are unanimously agreed that no further revision of our tax system should be made until full effects of the last revision are known and congress is in a position to estimate the normal revenue that may be expected from the 1926 law."

Not a Repudiation.

Green emphasized in his statement that the action of the committee was not a repudiation of the president, pointing out that the president gave congress the alternative plan of using the surplus for the public debt.

"The republican members of the committee," he said, "believe the president's alternative suggestion will best serve the public interest and have accordingly agreed that no tax reduction legislation will be reported at the present session of congress."

"The Garner bill," he said, "evidently proceeds on the assumption that a surplus of at least $335,000,000 may be anticipated not only in the next fiscal year but also in future years. There are no facts to justify such an assumption. The treasury estimates the surplus for the fiscal year, 1928, at approximately $200,000,000. Passage of the Garner bill would result in a deficit of $135,000,000 next year, with the inevitable necessity of increasing taxes in 1928. Such a proposal requires no further comment. It is obviously a political gesture never intended to be seriously considered by responsible public officials."

Democrats May Continue Fight.

Although democrats had not formulated a new plan of attack tonight, republicans regarded the tax question as shelved for the session. Mr. Garrett, however, announced at the time the democratic bill was introduced that every parliamentary means would be used to outmaneuver the republican majority and bring the measure out of the ways and means committee where all revenue legislation must originate.

Pronouncements by party financial spokesmen after today's meeting were at odds. Green asserted that Garner's tax bill was "obviously a political gesture never intended to be seriously considered," while Garner countered with the charge that the "president and Secretary Mellon are opposing the democratic bill purely for political reasons."

$175,000,000 ASKED TO MEET TAX REFUNDS.

Washington, December 11.—(AP)—Congress was asked by President Coolidge today to appropriate $175,263,000 to meet demands anticipated by the government before the close of the fiscal year, June 30. Of the total, $175,000,000 is for the refund of illegally collected federal taxes.

The request, formally transmitting estimates by the budget, did not state whether they had been taken into account by the president in computing the estimated treasury surplus at $383,000,000 but at the budget bureau it was explained that allowance had been made for such items.

Names of parties to benefit under the tax refund were not given, those in past years having been made public by the house ways and means committee about the first of each year.

Other items for which funds were requested included $235,000 for fire and flood protection in national parks; $20,000 for the education and rehabilitation conference to be held in Hawaii in the spring; $1,500 for the fine arts commission and a request for an extension of time for use of $6,844 previously appropriated for repairs on the white house.

COMMITTEE REPORTS ALIEN PROPERTY BILL.

Washington, December 11.—(AP)—The house ways and means committee today reported a bill to provide a payment of alien property claims as awarded by the German-American mixed claims commission. Under an agreement between leaders it will be taken up by the house Wednesday.

NICARAGUA ATTACKS MEXICAN SITUATION

conservative regime which had been recognized by the United States.

Accuses Calles.

President Diaz, in his manifesto, directly accused President Calles of the desire to erect a political order in Nicaragua, with the aid of a Nicaraguan political faction, which would follow the "recent sinister examples" of Mexico.

He said that his government cherished the warmest feelings of sympathy for racial kinship with the Mexican people, but that it felt a solemn obligation to set its face resolutely against the efforts of the Calles regime to interfere in Nicaragua.

The conservative government, the president's manifesto said, did not attack the political tendencies and policies of Mexico so long as they were restricted to that country, but it would fight against the introduction of these ideas and practices into Nicaragua through a revolution supported by Mexico.

The liberal party, which has set up a government, recognized by Mexico, under former Vice President Juan Sacasa at Puerto Cabezas on the east coast of Nicaragua, is assured of equitable participation in the conservative government, if it will give heed to his appeal for peace.

Expedition Charged.

"My government," President Diaz says, "has inofrmation that the Mexican government, following the same policy which impelled it to equip and dispatch last August to Pacific coast of Nicaragua an armed expedition on the Mexican vessel El Torpico, is now organizing and equipping another expedition of even more formidable proportions to be launched from Puerto Mexico, Mexico, against the Atlantic coast of Nicaragua.

"It is understood from reliable sources that it is the plan of the Mexican government that the vessel Superior, now being outfitted by officials of the Mexican government with an armed expedition, should proceed shortly to Nicaragua under the escort of Mexican gunboats for the purpose of making war against the constitutional government of Nicaragua over which I preside. In bringing to the attention of the Nicaraguan and foreign public these manifest designs of the Mexican government to make war without any provocation on my government through the agency of Mexican military and naval officials and certain Nicaraguans calling themselves constitutionalists, my government affirms its confidence in its ability under any normal conditions to maintain order in the republic and to reestablish its control over certain remote and sparsely inhabited regions of the Atlantic coast now held by the liberal revolutionists.

Obligation to Act Seen.

"The members of the conservative party supporting my government cherish the warmest feeling of sympathy, racial kinship and fellowship of ideals with the Mexican people, but my government feels a solemn obligation to set its face resolutely against the efforts of the Mexican government, as now directed by President Calles, to erect a political order in Nicaragua, with the aid of a Nicaraguan political faction, which, following the recent sinister examples of its progenitor, would confiscate property, deny religious freedom, close churches, banish ministers of religion and establish in general in Nicaragua the manifold evils of communism and political disorder now only too apparent in Mexico.

"My government feels that many worthy Nicaraguans, members of the historic and illustrious liberal party of this country of noble traditions, have in the blindness of political passion allied themselves with the forces of communism, radicalism and religious persecution now in control and running rampant in Mexico, but not representative of what is believed to be the true sentiments of a large majority of the Mexican people. My government believes that these Nicaraguan liberals, on due reflection upon the tragic consequences which they might bring upon their native land by aiding in turning it over to the horrors of the regime of President Calles of such unhappy fame throughout the world will, because of their inherent patriotism and love of country, their love of their religion and their respect for the rights of property, decide to accept the olive branch of peace which my government ever holds out to them."

AMERICAN DESTROYER AT NICARAGUA REBEL PORT.

Washington, December 11.—An effort to secure help from the United States to stop alleged Mexican gunrunning ships bound for Nicaragua is seen here in the charges of the Nicaraguan government that Mexico is preparing to wage communist war against it.

This was the reaction in diplomatic circles to the latest flare-up in Nicaragua.

Officials would not confirm reports that Admiral Latimer, American commander, will declare Puerto Cabezas, the rebel port, a neutral port, which would in effect establish a blockade. Puerto Cabezas is supposed to be the port of destination of the reported gun-runners.

There is an American destroyer at the rebel port, the U. S. S. Tulsa, but there has been no order from here yet for her to do more than protect American lives and property, it was learned tonight.

Central American countries would resent any direct interference by the United States in the civil war or the Mexican-Nicaraguan dispute as a violation of sovereignty and international law, it was said by diplomats here.

The state department, it is known, considers the present situation grave on the basis of alleged information in its possession regarding Mexican military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, recently recognized by Mexico. The rebel forces are trying to overthrow the Diaz government recognized recently by the United States.

ATLANTA MAY GET SOUTHERN OFFICES

the Southern system, which has grown to gigantic proportions and now extends its lines over practically the entire south.

Officials of the road here Saturday said they knew of no consideration of Atlanta at this time as a possible headquarters city for the system on account of the fact that conditions in Washington are still in an indefinite state. However, they drew attention to this city's central location in the system, and said that in their opinion this fact would have great weight should, and when, authorities of the road face the problem of deciding on a new headquarters site.

With its own rails the Southern now covers the territory between Washington and New Orleans, between Norfolk and Memphis, between St. Louis and Cincinnati to Jacksonville and Palatka, in Florida. It is truly the standard railway below the Mason and Dixon's line and lives up to its slogan that "The Southern Serves the South."

Atlanta Is Its Real Center.

Looking upon a map of the system the most casual glance shows that Atlanta is its natural center. The geographical position of the city indicates that clearly. The radiations of the system itself, and of its strong southern connections, from Atlanta, confirm the fact that the city looks to be the natural and logical locale for headquarters.

As it is now communication from headquarters in Washington must travel the entire long routes to the dozen far-set terminals of the system. From Atlanta there are five outlets over the system to its far ends and this would suggest savings of time and travel in the conduct of the official business of the company.

The controlling officials of the Southern, seeing that they must release their building in Washington to the federal government by sale, are indicating their intention to remove headquarters from this capital and locate them in a more central position with reference to the system.

The present great building there is now inadequate for the expanded business of the company. It would soon have to be enlarged. Hence the suggestion that economy and convenience both suggest a relocation and the erection of a new headquarters structure that will care for present necessities and anticipate the future expansion of the business of the system.

The Capital Is Concerned.

The civic organizations and newspapers of the capital are already agitated by the reported probable removal of the Southern headquarters. The newspapers are editorially pleading that they be kept here and the civic bodies will appeal earnestly to the Southern's officials not to make the change.

What the location of the palpitating heart of the system in Atlanta would mean may be somewhat sensed by the following extract from a leading editorial in The Washington Evening Star of Thursday:

"Removal of the headquarters to another city would, if the force were kept unchanged, entail serious losses to the employees, many, perhaps most, of whom have become home owners in Washington and in the adjacent Virginia area. There are urgent reasons, of course, fully appreciated by the officers of this corporation, for the maintenance of headquarters in Washington. This is the most significant terminal of the system. It is, moreover, the place of contact with the interstate commerce commission. From the local point of view it is important to retain this large establishment. District business interests should take up the matter at once and do what is possible to insure the continuance of this important business establishment at the capital."

BRITON DISCUSSES PRINTER'S INK LURE

of local life have been focused into one place at one time.

Pace Is Killing One.

If speed is an American characteristic, nothing is more American than the press of this country. The pace is a killing one, and it uses up men remorselessly; but it can be said that they offer more even than is asked of them. Day after day, routine is, in a sense, the same, yet everything is different. And always everyone is waiting, waiting for something; something that will cause makeup to be split from top to bottom in a few frenzied moments and a completely different newspaper to be sent out with some vital piece of news within a bare 30 minutes of its reception.

Apart from certain other purely national and psychological traits, it is the tension and speed of American conditions that largely contrast with those in Great Britain. Here, morning papers appear in the evening, while with us they are true to their name; where a British newspaper has at the most three or four editions, the American will have six or seven. In consequence, the speed very often gives greater vitality and superficial interest, but accuracy and style sometimes pay forfeit. The American reporter on a morning newspaper (afternoon newspapers in the two countries have not the same disparity of speed) works at the end of a telephone back to his office; his British colleague returns and writes his own "story" in comparative leisurely fashion, with a better opportunity of unhurried writing and so of a more considered style and a more considered presentation of facts.

News "Sense" Discussed.

In both countries, above all others, is a special news "sense," an instinct, required. It may be successfully imitated for a long time, but sooner or later its absence will make itself felt, and that at the most inconvenient time, since it is only when rule-of-thumb is useless that a matter becomes vital.

Here in America it is perhaps more highly developed than generally is the case with us, though that is the natural consequence of the demand for speed. In other words, the very best American journalist is a "live wire" indeed.

WILBUR'S REPORT SCORES COOLIDGE

ments of fact. He returns to this vital defect in his conclusion, saying:

"The material readiness of the vessels of the fleet is principally controlled by their age and dependence on the funds available for upkeep. With limited funds, it has been necessary to concentrate on necessary repairs rather than on alterations required to keep the vessels up to the development essential to military efficiency. The major alterations on the six battleships of the scouting fleet will greatly increase the efficiency of the fleet as a whole."

Modernization of three of these battleships has been completed and the work on the other three is about to begin. There are seven other battleships, however, which need modernization, but the work has not been authorized by congress.

Gunnery Far From Perfect.

One of the most illuminating features of the report by indirection relates to our gunnery. Apparently it is not as accurate as it might be.

"Target practice records of the fleet have been satisfactory," says Mr. Wilbur, "but it is hoped that careful study of the results thus far obtained and the application of the results of this study to future practice may increase the accuracy of our gunfire."

Appointment of five cadets to Annapolis for each senator and representative is authorized by law, but congress has appropriated for only three each.

"The present limit of appointments to three for each member," says the secretary, "will not provide sufficient commissioned personnel for maintenance of the strength of the line of the navy on a proper basis, even if no appointments are made to the various staff corps from graduates of the Naval academy. I am firmly of the opinion that it would be a benefit to the country at large as well as to the navy to have the appointments on a basis of five to each member of congress and discharge those graduates who are found to be least qualified to be commissioned officers in the navy should they not be needed for naval duties.

Line Officers in Service.

"The present authorized number of line officers is 5,499, and the number now in the service is 5,160. This authorized number represents, in the judgment of the department, the minimum figure for adequate peacetime requirements, and to serve as a trained nucleus for war."

Enlisted Personnel.

The reduction in enlisted personnel "made necessary various expedients," the secretary reports.

"The enlisted strength of the navy during the fiscal year 1926," he says, "was maintained at an average of 82,138 men. At the close of the last fiscal year there were 84,289 men in the navy, and it was apparent that the appropriation would be inadequate to provide pay for this number throughout 1926. Accordingly, recruiting was suspended for various periods and the strength was permitted to run as low as 80,833.

"The number of men in the navy on June 30, 1926, was about equal to the average for the year, which, compared with the average of 85,928 last year, was nearly 4,000 less. Even with this large cut in the average enlisted strength, the appropriation for pay was barely sufficient to cover expenditures, and from last reports there is an indicated available balance of only three-tenths of 1 per cent of the appropriation, which deferred charges during subsequent months will still further reduce."

Shortage of Petty Officers.

The secretary points out that a shortage of slightly more than a thousand petty officers exists; that, "for reasons of economy," there have been sent out only a few copies of new publications of "training courses published by the navy department for instruction of enlisted personnel, and that the passage by the last session of congress of the bill for a five year building program for naval aviation has further increased the severity of the problem of specially trained aviation personnel of which there has been a continuous shortage for several years past."

The high morale of the naval service is gratifying. The secretary reports that, "except for the fact that the required 86,000 strength could not be maintained, the enlisted personnel situation during the year has been uniformly excellent. Three out of every four men whose enlistments expired reenlisted or extended their enlistments, and preventable losses have been reduced far below the experience of past years. The number of men lost to the service through desertion has been remarkably reduced, as compared with 991 in 1925 and only 692 in 1926."

Cause of High Morale.

Secretary Wilbur attributes this excellent morale of the careful attention given by the navy department in (1) setting high standards for enlistment of recruits (2) judiciously applying recreation funds to aid in the contentment of the enlisted personnel afloat and ashore by means of athletics, motion pictures and up-to-date libraries, and (3) careful training and education of personnel from the time the recruit enters the training station until he is ready to attend one of the vocational trade schools of "learn while he earns" by taking up one of the correspondence training courses prepared and issued by the navy department. During the last year 3,294 enlisted men completed courses at vocational trade schools. Correspondence courses to the number of 57,632 were issued during the year.

Repair Facilities Ashore.

Speaking of repair facilities ashore, the secretary reports that:

"The plant equipment at navy yards is not being replaced as fast as it is being worn out, due to insufficient funds available for that purpose. The surplus machine tools transferred from the army and reserved from dismantled navy plants has been of great assistance as replacements in the last few years, but most of the good tools from this source have been exhausted and increased funds will be necessary in the future for replacing plant equipment at navy yards."

Secretary Wilbur pronounces the five-year building program for naval aviation "one of the outstanding events of the year." Although appropriations to carry out the authorized program for the first year were not provided, the secretary is optimistic. All that is needed, he indicates, are planes.

Progress in Aircraft.

"Steady progress," he says, "has been made in developing designs of aircraft to meet the special demands of each class, and research and development are being carried on with the prospect of definitely continuing this progress. Service types have been developed in each of the classes of aircraft decided upon as necessary, and while efforts to improve those designs have been going on and will continue an urgent requirement now is the procurement of a sufficient number of airplanes of each of the classes, with adequate replacements to permit the filling out of the tactical organization of naval aeronautics and of its efficient operation as a part of the fleet."

Vision of the Future.

The secretary concludes his report with a vision of the future development of naval aviation—If congress provides the funds.

"The period covered by this report has been one in which the aviation activities have been more closely coordinated with the fleet and the navy," he says. "The enthusiasm and intelligent cooperation of officers of all ranks in the fleet has greatly advanced the tactical development of aircraft. The increased training of officer personnel in aviation will lead to the more rapid development of that unit of the fleet.

"A better understanding of the relationship of aviation to the fleet has developed during this period, and the service is looking forward to the completion of the two aircraft carriers as furnishing a basis for a more practical application of the problems relating to aviation and a fuller development of the capabilities of aircraft in modern warfare.

Praises New Engines.

"The development of new aircraft engines and propellers and new designs of aircraft have been among the notable achievements during the last year, and indications are that further progress will be made along these lines in the coming year. The increased durability of aircraft engines by 400 per cent gives promise not only of increased efficiency in operation, but also decreased cost of maintenance of aviation in the fleet.

"Increased safety in flying is a subject of constant investigation in the navy department, and a special board has been appointed to make an exhaustive study of this question with a view to decreasing the number of accidents and the hazards of aviation."

Seven Wonders of Georgia

What are the seven natural wonders of Georgia?

This inquiry was put to Miss Ella Mae Thornton, state librarian, this week by an out-of-state correspondent, who also requested a list of the seven chief historic places of interest in the state.

Upon investigation, the state librarian said she found no such lists have ever been officially compiled either by geologists or historians. She selected, however, seven natural wonders and seven chiefly interesting historic places, and forwarded a list of them with the explanation that while these ranked high in scenic or historic worth, there were probably other points in the state of equal importance.

Georgia's Seven Wonders.

The seven wonders, selected by the state librarian, included Amicolola Falls in Dawson county; the Okefinokee swamp; the marble deposits in Pickens county; Stone mountain; the Tallulah River gorge; the Jekyl Island virgin forests, and the Warm Springs in Meriwether county.

The historic places of interest given by Miss Thornton were: Chicamauga park; Tumlin Indian mounds, near Cartersville; the city of Savannah; St. Simons Island; the University of Georgia; the town of Milledgeville; and Wormsloe (Jones-DeRenne) estate near Savannah.

Amicolola Fulls, it was pointed out, is the highest natural waterfall in Georgia, the drop being 729 feet.

The Pickens county marble deposits were said to be the largest in the world.

The Tallulah river gorge in north Georgia is noted for its scenic grandeur, the chasm being more than 1,000 feet in depth.

Okefinokee swamp is a land of mystery, constantly luring naturalists and scientists to explore its jungle interior.

Jekyl Island harbors virgin forests in their primeval splendor.

Warm Springs are noted for their beauty and tremendous flow of water, amounting to 1,800 gallons a minute.

Seven Historic Sites.

Regarding the seven Georgia places of historic interest, the state librarian said she selected Chicamauga park because it was the scene of the bloodiest fighting of the civil war in Georgia and because of the many monuments now contained there.

The city of Savannah, the site for the first state capital of Georgia, is rich with historic monuments and relics of every period of the state's history.

St. Simons Island embraces the battle field of Bloody Marsh and the town of Fredrica, which was laid out by General Oglethorpe, founder of Georgia, who made his official residence there. The remains of an old colonial fort also may be seen there.

The University of Georgia, at Athens, which was founded in 1785, is the oldest chartered state university in the country.

The town of Milledgeville, capital city of Georgia for 60 years, contains a number of state buildings and institutions of historic importance.

Wormsloe is an estate near Savannah which has been in the same family since the grant from the crown. It is said to contain the world's finest collection of books on Georgia.

Childs, agriculture, Georgia State College of Agriculture; A. G. G. Richardson, miscellaneous, Georgia State College of Agriculture; Osborne R. Quayle, chemistry, University of Georgia; J. L. Daniel, chemistry, Georgia Tech.

The closing session, in addition to the election of officers and new members, included the reading of more than twenty papers on medicine, biology, mathematics, engineering, agriculture, psychology, physics, chemistry, botany, zoology, geology and ceramics.

The meeting opened Friday with Dr. G. H. Boggs, of Georgia Tech, presiding. Friday night a dinner was held at the Georgian Terrace hotel at which Dr. James E. Paullin, of Atlanta, addressed the professors.

Big Shrine Mosque Will Require Train Loads of Material

The huge task that attends the building of Yaarab Temple's million-dollar mosque was conveyed recently to an inquirer who was informed that progress on plans and specifications had disclosed that it would require five trains of 40 cars each, with a capacity of from 25 to 30 tons, to haul the cement that would be used in building the mosque. The brick to be used will require 9 trains of 40 cars of the same capacity, while it will take 50 trains of 40 cars each to haul the sand.

Some time after the first of the year when the contract has been let this huge quantity of building material will begin to arrive at the corner of Peachtree and Kimball streets, together with other huge quantities of steel and other material, and the builders will slowly fashion it into one of Atlanta's greatest and most imposing structures.

Meanwhile the nobility of Yaarab Temple will continue to meet in the auditorium, and there on Wednesday night, December 22, will be held the last ceremonial session of this year. Indications are that this will be a big event and that a large class of eligibles will cross the hot sands to Mecca, officials said. One innovation in connection with it is that it will begin at 7 o'clock, one hour earlier than all previous events of the kind. Applications for membership at this ceremonial must be in Recorder Argard's possession on December 15 accompanied by a check for $109.50.

Yaarab's dance committee announces that the ball to be held on December 24 has been postponed to December 31—New Year's eve. It will be held at Druid Hills Golf club.

The object of the association is to see that no ex-slave who is unable to work and has no relatives and friends to help them will suffer for neces sities of life, according to Rev. B. R. Holmes, secretary and manager of the association. All ex-slaves will receive Christmas presents on this occasion.

Washington Seminary Girls To Present The 'Feast of the Red Corn' Operetta

Washington seminary girls who are to take part in the "Feast of the Red Corn" at the city auditorium, December 16. In the group are Marion Smith, Epsie Dallas, Octavia Riley, Frances Weinman, Margaret Woodridge and Jane Adair. Miss Mary Morrison, with bow and arrow, is shown in the costume in which she will appear in the "Dance of the Red Arrow" and on the left is Miss Margaret Tate, of Tate, Ga., who plays the Big Chief, or king.

Rehearsals for the Washington seminary production of the Indian operetta, "The Feast of the Red Corn" on December 16 are progressing rapidly and the girls are becoming letter perfect in their parts, Miss Annie M. Sharpe, director of the show said Saturday.

The operetta will be presented at the city auditorium, 400—count 'em—400, girls of the seminary, taking part. The play was written by Paul Bliss and is a musical comedy version of the ancient Indian tradition that the finder of the red ear of corn at the harvest festivals will see her warrior lover and that he will return safe to her. Miss Margaret Tate, of Tate, Ga., plays the absent lover.

In Bliss' work the queen of the tribe, played by Miss Marguerita Battle, well-known Atlanta soprano and teacher of voice at the seminary, being the heroine of the "scena" naturally is the lucky finder of the coveted ear of corn and of course she ttsees the comeliest and bravest warrior of the tribe who, also naturally, returns from the wars safe, is wedded to her and becomes king. The queen is assisted by the incantations of an ancient feminine "medicine man" of the tribe who invokes the aid of the four winds. This part is taken by Miss Shirley Cartin, of Tampa. Another leading part in the play is that of Impeelight, a comedy role, played by Miss Rosalind Stovall, also of Tampa.

Marvelous lighting and scenic effects have been arranged for the production and numerous choruses and ballets selected from among the student body of the school. The girls are practicing their parts daily, Miss Sharpe said, and are on their toes and ready to go, December 16, at 8 p. m.

The chorus numbers are directed by Miss Battle and the dances and ballet are being trained in their parts by Mrs. Green Warren, instructor of dancing at the school. Two leading dancing parts are taken by Miss Carolyn Hogshead, in the "ghost dance," and Miss Mary Morrisson, on the "dance of the red arrow." Lawrence Everhart, music instructor, will direct the orchestra.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP SOUGHT BY ATHLETES

Four athletes of Georgia colleges are among 12 candidates who apeared before the Rhodes scholarship committee for the state of Georgia Saturday morning, refuting the popular opinion that athletics and poor scholarship go hand in hand, according to announcement by Robert Alston, chairman of the Georgia committee.

The four young men who have distinguished themselves in scholarship as well as athletics are Berry Grant, of Atlanta, Georgia Tech's tennis star; Buster Kilpatrick, University of Georgia, all-southern halfback of last year; Bill Tate, mile and two-mile runner, of the University of Georgia, and W. P. T. Brandon, last year's track man, also of the University of Georgia.

This interview terminated the series of examinations through which the candidates go to qualify for the scholarships. The first step in the choice of candidates is the selection by the Georgia universities of men to represent them before the committee. Reports of the candidates are then filed with the committee, Then, as the final test, comes the personal appearance before the committee. The candidate from the state is then announced through the offices of the American secretary for the Rhodes scholarship at Swarthmore, Pa.

Other men appearing before the committee were J. Eidleberg, of Georgia Tech; K. G. Smith and G. M. Hill, of Emory; C. A. Murphy, of Oglethorpe; E. W. Post, of the University of Georgia, and Kay Tipson, C. P. Walkter and R. J. Walsh, of Mercer.

SAFETY CLASSES URGED BY EXPERT IN ALL SCHOOLS

Thousands of educators are now instructing school children how to avoid being involved in accidents, so they will grow up to enjoy the real adventures of life, according to Miss Marion Telford, field secretary of the education division of the national safety council, who is in Atlanta at the request of the home and education committee of the Atlanta safety council.

"As a result of this endeavor," Miss Telford said, at a meeting of the executive committee of the fifth district P.-T. A., "motor fatalities to children in Detroit, on a basis of school registration, have been reduced 60 per cent. The first year of safety work in the schools of Springfield, Mass., showed a reduction of accidental deaths to children of school age from 10 to 2, while the deaths to children of pre-school age, who therefore did not come under the influence of the schools, increased. In Louisville, the motor fatalities to children of school age the year before safety instruction was introduced, were 23; this toll fell the following year to 14, the next year to 8; and more recently a record of 11 months and 24 days was made without a single motor fatality to a public school child.

"Junior safety councils, organized in the schools, have been the most effective means of saving the lives of children not only on the streets, but in the homes, where twice as many children are killed and injured in Atlanta than on the streets.

"Many of these junior safety councils have been formed in the Atlanta and Fulton county schools and are showing fine results."

Miss Telford will address safety chairmen and other representatives of the parent-teacher associations at a meeting in the blue room of the Ansley hotel, at 10:15 o'clock Wednesday morning.

During the week Miss Telford also expects to visit schools in Macon, Columbus, Savannah and Augusta, where safety work is being carried on by the school authorities.

Young Harris Workers Plan To Close Campaign Tuesday For $150,000 Endowment

Monday Is Named 'Peel Day' in Drive To Secure Money for Methodist School.

Two days remain in which the executive committee in charge of the endowment fund campaign for Young Harris college hopes to complete the fund of $150,000 sought to make the institution an officially accredited junior college.

Tomorrow will be "William Lawson Peel Day," in honor of the man who has given much of his time, energy and money to help Young Harris college. Colonel Peel has labored for years in the interests of the institution. A few years ago he gave the college a $50,000 dormitory for boys, which is the only modern and well-equipped building on the campus. He is treasurer of the college and head of its board of trustees. His subscription of $5,000 to the fund, made a few days ago, is the largest of the campaign.

Fund Necessary, Sharp.

More than 150 friends of the college, drawn from the Methodist churches of Atlanta and vicinity, have been at work for the last week, canvassing Methodists and friends of Christian education of other denominations, asking subscriptions to the fund, payable over a period of years. Workers enlisted for a campaign which would close on Tuesday night. At the end of the first five days of work the total subscriptions fell far short of the amount required, but it is expected that the two days of this week will bring in numerous and generous subscriptions to the fund.

Foremost in directing the campaign and working at the headquarters in the chamber of commerce building have been Colonel Peel and Dr. J. A. Sharp, president of the institution.

"It is absolutely necessary that Young Harris college be provided a permanent endowment fund of an amount in keeping with the needs of the institution," President Sharp said Saturday. "This is not needed to provide frills or luxuries or to satisfy college pride. It is a business proposition and must be faced in a business-like way.

Big Donatons Promised.

"The very fact that Young Harris has an endowment fund behind it will be of inestimable value. The college has one friend today who has expressed a willingness and desire to give a $30,000 building when he feels assured of the permanency of the institution. Another is anxious to make extensive improvements in the grounds, once he feels that his money will not be wasted. There is still another who has told me he will give $25,000 for a specific purpose when he feels that this investment in the youth of the south will be safeguarded by a permanent fund back of the institution. There is nothing that succeeds like success, and once convinced that Young Harris college is firmly established other friends will make other gifts. This endowment campaign, if it has done nothing else, has served to awaken the people of Atlanta and Georgia to the fact that such an institution exists and is carrying on a great work. There are men and women interested in Young Harris today who had hardly heard of it a month ago.

Forty Years Old.

"Let me make this promise to the public, too. The cost of education, in keeping with all other expenses, is mounting steadily. But at Young Harris, by the most rigid economy, by raising a large proportion of the food upon our own farm, by watching every expenditure, we have succeeded in keeping the cost of board and tuition to the absolute minimum, within reach of almost the poorest boy or girl. And if this endowment fund is raised I promise that so long as I am at the head of Young Harris, these costs will not be raised, and education still will be kept within the lowest possible limits."

Young Harris college, in Towns county, in the north Georgia mountains was founded forty years ago through the generosity of Judge Young L. G. Harris, of Athens. A short time afterward it was adopted by the North Georgia Methodist conference. It was originally intended as a school for mountain boys and girls, and a large proportion of its students still come from that region. There has been so great a demand for education at reasonable cost, however, that its field has gradually extended until it has students from many states.

Hundreds of calls will be made Monday and Tuesday by the workers in the Young Harris campaign, and they believe they can carry the subscription total "over the top" by Tuesday night.

RESCUE WORKERS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TO HELP NEEDY

Pressed by urgent need of funds with which to meet the unusually heavy demands for assistance, a city-wide campaign has been launched by the American Rescue Workers for money to carry on the work of relieving want and suffering among homeless women and children and destitute men, according to a statement Saturday issued from the Rescue home, 420 Piedmont avenue. It was pointed out that immediate funds are needed, as well as funds to carry on the work of the institution during the coming year.

In order that present needs for food supplies, clothing, fuel, more bedding and equipment may be met and that volunteer workers at the home may be permitted to give as much of their time as possible to actual work among the needy, it was urged that every Atlantan who can possibly do so mail checks to the home at once. Approximately 40 tots, in addition to a number of destitute women are at present inmates of the home, while numbers of other calls for food and clothing are being daily received, it was stated.

In addition to its other work among destitute, the home serves on an average of 1,000 hot, nourishing meals each week to persons who would otherwise go hungry, it was pointed out by Captain Whorley.

An interesting feature of the home Captain Whorley said, is that no salaries are paid workers at the home, their services being voluntary.

JENKINS TO HEAD SAVANNAH NEWS

Herschel V. Jenkins, who has acquired control of The Morning News, Savannah, and who at the next meeting of the stockholders, December 13, will be elected president of that publication has never been connected previously with the newspaper business.

HERSCHEL V. JENKINS.

His entire business career has been spent in the employ of the Central of Georgia railway company. In 1888 his first job was junior clerk of the old Central Railroad and Banking company, headquarters of which was adjacent to the custom house on Bay street, Savannah. Though Mr. Jenkins was rated on the books as junior clerk, he admits this designation was merely one of politeness, his real job being that of office boy. Not only did his duties persuade him of that fact but his pay envelope did also. Whether he was junior clerk or office boy, the fact remains that he had to run all of the errands for the office and was called by terms usually employed when addressing office boys.

His grounding in business for many years was under direction of T. M. Cunningham. When the dissolution of the banking department of the railroad was effected in the early nineties, Mr. Cunningham became treasurer of the Central of Georgia, and Mr. Jenkins followed with him in the financial department of the system. In 1906 he was elected assistant treasurer, and held this position until his recent resignation, necessitated by acquisition of the control of The Morning News.

Succeeds F. G. Bell.

Mr. Jenkins is a modest man, of genial disposition, courteous manner, a very solid citizen for any community. His associates in the railway system have a wholesome regard for his ability. He is looked upon as a man of keen business judgment. Among the leading financiers and business men of the community in which he has made his home for so many years he is counted a man of soundness. In conversation he is courteous and courageous in his opinions.

He is to succeed the late Frank G. Bell, who was connected with The Morning News for many years. He purchased the holdings represented in Mr. Bell's estate and it is expected that he will shortly assume active charge of the newspaper.

Mr. Jenkins' long association with the Central of Georgia railway has brought him in contact, personally and in business matters, with many of the leading men of affairs of the state and the south. His acquaintance in financial circles is extensive.

Quits Railroad Business.

His venture in the newspaper business, he declared at the time the announcement was made of his purchase of stock, is due to the fact he considered it a good field for investment. He viewed the prospects as such satisfactory ones that he felt it was an opportunity which would prove not only beneficial but agreeable. He has severed all his connections with the railroad to devote his entire time to the affairs of The Morning News, and having lived in Savannah all of his life, he is familiar with all matters pertaining to its welfare and advancement. He is a man of family.

Mr. Jenkins was born in Effingham county, near Guyton, on his grandfather's plantation October 5, 1871. He came to Savannah when he was seventeen years old and has lived here ever since. He married Miss Bessie Winn, of Savannah, daughter of the late Capt. A. A. Winn, and they have three daughters, Miss Elizabeth, Miss Margaret and Miss Victoria. Miss Elizabeth Winn is a teacher in Miss Hartridge's school in Plainfield, N. J.

Funeral services for Mrs. Delphia Ausburn, 39, of 113 Davis street, East Point, who was accidentally shot by her husband, according to the coroner's verdict issued Saturday morning, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the Mount Zion Methodist church. The Rev. Jimmie Alverson will officiate and interment will be in the churchyard.

Mrs. Ausburn's death occurred Thursday night when the shotgun her husband, L. A. Ausburn, was cleaning preparatory to a hunting trip the next day accidentally discharged.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two brothers, W. R. Kelly, of Eagan, Ga., and A. F. Kelly, of Griffin. A. C. Hemperley & Son in charge.

ALABAMA JURIST TAKEN FOR BURIAL TO MONTGOMERY

The body of Judge E. Perry Thomas, 55, of Montgomery, Ala., whose death in an Atlanta hospital Friday afternoon followed his leap from a speeding train near Gainesville Friday morning, was taken to Montgomery for funeral services held in the Alabama city Saturday morning at 8:15 o'clock.

Judge Thomas was widely known in political and legal circles in Alabama, having served under Governor B. B. Comer as president of the Alabama state senate during 1907-11, and as a judge of the Alabama court of appeals. At the time of his death he was attorney for the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Miss Nell Thomas, of Montgomery, and Mrs. James Fulghum, of Sarasota, Fla.; one son, E. Perry Thomas, Jr., of Montgomery, and a brother, E. Cody Thomas, of Atlanta.

DRIVE LEADERS FEEL CERTAIN OF SUCCESS

Campaign for $1,000,000 Fund To Advertise City Will Be Launched Here Tuesday Morning.

MAMMOTH PARADE WILL START DRIVE

Thousands of School Children and Civilians Will March in Colorful Lines Through City.

In a "you may fire when ready" attitude of confidence, leaders of the million-dollar three-year advertising fund campaign Saturday expressed the conviction that the drive will go over the top. Practically every detail of the preliminary work has been completed and everything is in shape for the opening of the drive Tuesday morning.

As a pre-drive stimulant, 20,000 school children will march in a mammoth parade at noon Monday through the business district, ending at the Henry Grady monument, where public ceremonies will be conducted.

Final instructions for the drive are to be given campaign workers at 6:30 o'clock Monday night at a din. at the chamber of commerce. The entire sales or anization is to be present and will hear a number of talks by campaign officials.

Mayor Backs Drive.

Mayor Walter A. Sims Saturday addressed a letter to general council urging that the appropriation of $24,000 made to the drive last year and then recalled by renewed and that an additional appropriation for next year be made.

"I trust that the city government

HOUSE KILLS PLAN TO TRY ENGLISH

Resignation of Jurist on Eve of Trial Results in Vote To Dismiss Proceedings.

Washington, December 11.—(AP)—Impeachment proceedings against Federal Judge George W. English, charging wrongful use of bankruptcy funds, tyranical practices in court and other "high misdemeanors," were dismissed by the house today because of his resignation from office.

By a vote of 286 to 22, a resolution was adopted to advise the senate that in view of the judge having tendered, and President Coolidge accepted, his resignation, the house did "not desire further to urge the articles of impeachment heretofore filed" with that body.

The resolution was sponsored unanimously by the nine members appointed by the house to prosecute the case before the senate which sits as a high court in impeachment cases.

It will be presented to the senate Monday, when, by special order, that body convenes as a high court to receive the house managers. Final dropping of the impeachment articles then will be passed upon. If usual procedure is followed the senate will accept the recommendations of the house and close the case.

Ten republicans, eight of them from Wisconsin, combined with nine democrats, two farm labor members and one independent in opposing dismissal of the proceedings. This group urged that the case be carried to completion so, as Representative Laguardia, republican, New York, asserted, the "trial and punishment" of the judge would serve "as a deterrent to others."

Ten "Opportunities" for Genuine Charity Wait at Atlanta's Door

:: HOMES WHERE POVERTY STALKS APPEAL FOR AID AT CHRISTMAS ::

BY LOY WARWICK.

There are ten miserable little homes in Atlanta that are filled with sorrow and sickness and want.

Homes where innocents suffer; homes that know no happiness. Homes with but a single hope—the promise of the Christ and a merciful God.

When Atlanta knows their stories, Atlanta will not let them suffer longer. And it will not take a great deal of money to bring relief to these destitute families, some of which face starvation with the coming of every day.

Constitution To Present "Ten Opportunities."

The Constitution is bearing the appeal of the Family Welfare society, which, because of the failure of the Community Chest to obtain the needed funds, must go elsewhere with outstretched hands, begging literally for the lives of a few women and children who have been plunged, through no fault of their own, into the deepest pits of poverty and hopelessness.

The society is not asking for any Santa Claus frivolities. It is not requesting baskets of fruit and tinseled Christmas trees. But it is asking for a thing that will not only bring a measure of happiness on December 25, but a great relief from pinching want that will last twelve months in the year; a relief that will provide necessaries of life when the heat of summer makes their existence as burdensome as the cold winds of December now do. It is a lasting gift, a year-round gift of sober, common sense, effective charity that is sought for them.

Soon Christmas will be here. In all but a few homes, it will be a happy festival. A commemoration of the birthday of the Christ child. There will be great rejoicing and giving of gifts.

NO CHRISTMAS CHEER FOR THESE HOMES.

But in these ten homes—if a cold wooden shack and an empty larder constitute a home—there will be no gifts; no well-filled stockings and gay toys. Unless Atlanta answers a worthy and desperate call, there are many undernourished, disease-ravaged little boys and girls who will not have even the things of daily need.

The Family Welfare society knows of the conditions of these families, as does The Constitution. But the society is unable to provide for all of them, and there are many others besides the ten Atlanta will be asked to help through the columns of this newspaper. There are countless families where death, or sickness, or some other misfortune has made assistance necessary to life.

To prevent greater suffering; to give these deserving and unfortunate ones a happy Christmas—a new start toward permanent happiness and health, it is imperative that these ten opportunities—for they are most certainly opportunities—be offered to the good people of Atlanta.

That is why the Family Welfare society has asked The Constitution to present to the public the cold, the appealing facts that surround Atlanta's "ten best opportunities" to do real charity; charity of the year-round and not the spasmodic type that is not effectual in the long run. And that is why The Constitution has agreed to resume a work it did at Christmas time years ago, and suspended when the Community Chest came into being.

CHEST FAILURE MAKES APPEAL IMPERATIVE.

This year the Chest failed by a big sum to realize its budget for relief of the unfortunates in its care. The Welfare society failed to secure the funds it actually needs to pilot these poor people through the dangers of privation and disease that beset their path. It must have the money if these "ten opportunities" receive the attention they justly deserve.

There are some who did not give to the Community Chest, and who will welcome an opportunity of commemorating the greatest of events with a lasting gift; a gift to humanity. And there are those who have given to the Chest, who may wish to take a part in another most worthy undertaking.

The stories of these ten families will be told from day to day in The Constitution. If you are interested in any of the opportunities, please designate the particular one when you send in your offering to The Constitution. Your gift will be spent exactly as you request. If you desire it, the Family Welfare society will be glad to report to you just how much your contribution has helped. The society's headquarters are located at 53½ Auburn avenue. Miss Ada S. Woolfolk is its secretary.

REMEMBER UNFORTUNATES AT CHRIST'S BIRTHDAY.

We are most likely to forget, in the hustle and bustle of Christmas shopping and preparation for the glad day, that there are others who are less fortunate than ourselves. Others who are not so much concerned with how many days remain for shopping, as they are with the need for a loaf of bread or a bottle of milk. Others who are bed-ridden and diseased, lying helpless in a cold little house, where starvation stalks unchalelnged.

And as you ponder over the toy list, and inspect each article that is to bring joy to the hearts of your own boys and girls, it is possible that a great many of us will not pause to wonder about the fate of a number of little fellows, our own neighbors, who would appreciate a good, warm bowl of soup as much as the finest toy in all the world on Christmas morning.

The call is being sent out late this year. There isn't much time left before Christmas day, when the opportunities will be withdrawn. If there are any persons or organizations, who wish to assume one of the opportunities and dispatch with it at once, it would greatly facilitate matters—not facilitation for the society or The Constitution, but for the suffering ones in whose behalf the call is made.

Tragedy entered this poor little home a year ago, not long before the Christmas season.

The father had been a devoted parent. He worked hard to provide for the mother and four little children. The house was warm and there was food.

Mary was in school. The three younger children were healthy, robust youngsters, and soon would be ready for school.

But there came an awful day. The father was seized with illness—not of body; more horrible than that. A diseased brain—a maniac—and they took him away to the state insane asylum.

He will be there until death claims him.

PITIFUL STORE OF MONEY EXHAUSTED.

There was little money left for the grief-stricken mother and children when they saw their husband and father carried away to worse than the grave. And soon that little was gone.

The mother, always frail, broke beneath the strain. Lack of nourishment—worry, fear for the fate of the three children who clung to her skirts in the dark hour, and often begged for bread.

In that year, the dread illness has ravaged her poor mind and body until she is an invalid under constant care of a charity clinic. Certainly she cannot assume the role of breadwinner for her family of four, though she carries a prayer for strength always upon her pale, thin lips.

Mary, the oldest child, goes to school. She is immature—unhealthy—the victim of this same lack, not only of proper food, but any kind of food. If a position were secured for her, it is doubtful if she could earn half the little that is required for the sustenance of her sick mother and little sisters.

LITTLE GIRL WORKS FROM DAWN TO DARK.

Mary is going to junior high school. From the dawn until her school hour—from her return home until study hour, she works her fingers to the bone for those who depend on her for virtually everything except food. Mary is needed at home.

Then there are the three little fellows. Mary keeps their faces clean and mends their threadbare clothes to make them as warm as possible in a house where the cold not infrequently matches that of outdoors.

Poor kiddies. Sometimes cold, sometimes hungry—outcasts, born and reared in poverty, and—unless Atlanta helps them—destined to remain there.

And if they survive under such conditions, what sort of men and women will they grow up to be? Weaklings, with a bitterness in their hearts, born out of a misfortune in which they played only the part of sufferers, unable to fight back—helpless non-combatants.

The family is totally dependent.

$8.75 A WEEK NEEDED FOR FOOD AND RENT.

Eight dollars and seventy-five cents a week, $455 a year, will pay the rent and provide food for them all.

That isn't a lot of money. But to them it is a fabulous fortune, entirely out of reach.

This is Atlanta's first "opportunity." The word is used advisedly.

Christmas is coming and then another year. The birthday of the Christ can be a happy day in the little home if Atlanta takes this opportunity. And a mother and four children will be given a new start in life; possibiy the start that will mean all and everything to them.

Who will help at this Christmas time?

Whether you live in Atlanta or not—this is your "opportunity."

SHORTAGE FOUND IN ATHENS BANK

Amount Made Good by Directors of Savings Bank—Former Assistant Cashier Accused.

Athens, Ga., December 11.—(AP)—A full-page advertisement will appear in the Athens Banner-Herald tomorrow morning announcing over the names of the directors of the Athens Savings bank that a shortage has been discovered in the accounts of its former assistant cashier, B. F. Tuck.

The advertisement does not state the amount of the shortage, which, it says, has been made good by the directors from outside sources without calling on the bonding company acting as Tuck's surety.

Mention of Tuck in the advertisement as the "former" assistant cashier indicated that his connection with the bank had been severed. He had been an employee of the institution, one of the oldest of its kind in the state, for many years.

Tuck was at home tonight with his wife and seven children.

THOMPSON AGAIN MAYOR CANDIDATE WITH "WET" PLANK

Chicago, December 11.—(AP)—William Hale Thompson, who served two terms as the city's chief executive, again is a candidate for mayor in 1927, on a platform advocating repeal of the Volstead act.

His announcement came at a political rally last night in response to 433,000 pledge cards piled ten feet deep in front of the speaker's stand.

Thompson's announcement is the first for the coming mayoralty battle, although a number of political leaders have been mentioned from time to time as possible candidates. Mayor William E. Dever, democrat, has made no announcement as yet whether he will stand again.

FORD ANSWERS STRAUS ATTACK

Replies to Philanthropist by Reiterating Charges of International Jews Controlling Banks.

Detroit, December 11.—(AP)—Henry Ford through his newspaper the Dearborn Independent, to be published December 25, replies to an attack made upon him by Oscar Straus, New York philanthropist, in an address before the national conference on Palestine, November 1, by reitering charges previously made.

Straus was quoted as saying in part that Mr. Ford had been "misled into a campaign of slander against the Jewish people," and had asked that Ford select eight members of a committee of 10 to weigh the facts.

Through his article Mr. Ford charges that "the international Jew today is in direct control of all financial centers of government, including the United States Federal Reserve bank system."

Claims Jews "Own Press."

Among other charges, Mr. Ford asserts that the "international Jew pulls so many strings in business that no banker nor business man feels safe to oppose." That he "either owns the press or controls it, so that only pro-Jewish facts are ever admitted to print;" "that he controls the revolutionary elements of the world on one hand and the ultra-conservative elements on the other, so that he has equal power in communistic Russia and in capitalistic England, not to mention the theater, the motion picture or agriculture."

Replying to a quoted statement of Mr. Straus that "Ford is using his wealth for vicious ends and is fomenting hatred," the article replies that "as to philanthropy, it was a great thing a hundred years ago. Genuine philanthropy today means the payment of such wages as will render philanthropy unnecessary."

Senator McKinley Painted As Hero in Love Tragedy

:: LIVES APART FROM INVALID WIFE 30 YEARS ::

Chicago, December 11.—(AP)—William B. McKinley, senator from Illinois, was the hero in a love tragedy that covered a space of 30 years, during which he lived apart from the semi-invalid wife he adored, provided amply for her, sought her judgment in bestowing tremendous benevolences and by whom he in turn was loved, The Chicago Daily News revealed today.

Mrs. McKinley formerly was Kate Frisbie, of Champaign, Ill., described at the time of their marriage in 1881, as the belle of Champaign county.

She lives in Southern Pines, N. C., and it was there that Senator McKinley saw her last, shortly before he went to Baltimore for a surgical operation which was the precurser to a long illness and his death a few days ago, at Martinsville, Ind.

Two or three times a year for the last 30 years, Senator McKinley saw his wife, in recent years at the Carolina resort, which is near Washington. Most of her time was spent at a villa near Florence, Italy, where the climate suited her, with occasional returns to the United States to spend a few summer months in Maine, and a winter month or two in Louisiana.

When they were married in 1881, Senator McKinley was in the private banking business with an uncle. The Kansas land boom was on and McKinley was "up to his neck" in frozen securities on Kansas farm lands when the boom suddenly expired. The money could not be taken out to meet loans placed in his confidence by many Illinoians. Mrs. McKinley, because of her intense activities, suffered a nervous breakdown, and has been a semi-invalid since.

In 1893, says The Daily News, McKinley was broke, holding the frozen paper but no liquid credit. He devoted himself assidiously to the task and by 1903 had paid 100 cents on every dollar given him for investment.

McKinley is described as, at that period, an intensely busy young man and Mrs. McKinley as temperamentally different. McKinley once said he never knew but one person as coldly intellectual as his wife, and that was Elihu Root.

After Mrs. McKinley's breakdown, McKinley provided liberally for her in her life abroad. Some of the securities made over to her, were of the frozen mortgages, and without knowledge, he traded income-pa securities.

After the Kansas loans, at time amounting to $3,000,000. worked out. McKinley devoted self to public utility development achieved success, says The D News.

He became several times a milli aire, gave away between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000 and died with a fortune estimated well under $1,000,000.

"Yet he lived this extremely busy and productive life, under one of the most intense inferiority complexes that any human ever endured," says The Daily News. "And McKinley suffered. Every man was bigger in his estimation than himself. He dreaded personal contact, yet he loved people and his heart was warm within him. For the last 30 years, he lived closely within himself."

TO BEGIN WORK ON NEW CHURCH IN FEBRUARY

Most Magnificent Religious Edifice in City To Be Constructed at Peachtree and Spring.

FUNDS ALL ON HAND, PASTOR ANNOUNCES

Peachtree Christian To Expend Almost Half Million on Edifice; Dr. L. O. Bricker Is Pastor.

Actual construction upon what is to be Atlanta's most magnificent religious edifice will begin in February, 1927, according to Dr. L. O. Bricker, pastor, who announced Saturday that contracts were now being let for the erection of the Peachtree Christian church, at Peachtree road and Spring street.

The foundation and first unit of the structure has been ready for some time, and, according to Dr. Bricker, as soon as materials can be brought to the site and suitable weather sets in, the Pittman Construction company will begin the work which will not end until the church stands completed.

The Peachtree Christian church will cost almost a half million dollars. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars of this amount has already been expended. With the recent gift of A. G. Rhodes, prominent member of the congregation, of $150,000 for the building fund, and $50,000 for cathedral chimes and the subscription of $50,000 by the members of the church, nothing stands in the way of actual construction, Dr. Bricker declared, all the necessary funds being on hand.

To Last Through Ages.

"Mr. Rhodes gift," Dr. Bricker said, "is the largest single donation for the erection of a church that I have known during my entire communion. The congregation has met Mr. Rhodes' most generous act with $50,000, subscribed in a short time after the announcement of the new contribution."

The Peachtree Christian church is to be set on a foundation which engineers declare will last a thousand years, and the building that is to be raised upon it will live as long as the veritable rock upon which it stands. It is the dream of the pastor and his congregation to build a church that will last through the ages, as the old cathedrals of Rome.

The church, which is to be of Gothic architecture, will be surmounted by a massive tower, in which the cathedral chimes, the only ones of their sort in the entire city, will be installed. These chimes are now being made in England, and are a gift from Mr. Rhodes, separate and apart of his most recent donation to the building fund. Mr. Rhodes, Dr. Bricker said, was one of the chief contributors to the original building fund of $150,000.

Beautiful Interior.

The interior of the great structure will be most beautiful. The church auditorium, exclusive of the Sunday

TO PLEAD INSANITY IN 'SWINDLE' CASE

Defense To Plead Insanity for Two Defendants, With Same Course Probable for Third.

Special pleas of insanity for W. D. Nichols and James G. Grimes, who, with H. G. Gaines, are defendants in the alleged nation-wide $1.000.000 mail order swindle, will be filed in Fulton superior court, according to an announcement Saturday by defense attorneys.

The alleged swindle was bared in Atlanta Thursday by Solicitor General John A. Boykin as a result of numerous complaints of persons from every section of the United States who claimed that they had purchased various articles through the mails from Nichols, Grimes and Gaines which they declare were never received.

Definite decision to file pleas of insanity was determined Saturday at a conference of defense attorneys, Frank A. Hooper, Thomas H. Goodwin and William Schley Howard, who came into the case Saturday. In the light of statements made at a receivership hearing conducted Saturday morning before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy in Fulton superior court in connection with $12,000 deposited in the defendants' names in local banks, it is considered probable a similar plea will be entered for Gaines, the so-called "brains" of the gang.

"Mental Patient."

Attorney Hooper declared that both Nichols and Grimes have been in insane asylums, and at the present time Gaines is under $1,000 bond in a government hospital in Augusta, where his mental condition is being investigated. It is known he is a "mental patient," Attorney Hooper said. According to attaches in the office of the solicitor, Grimes is said to have nothing to do with the transactions in the latest swindle scheme.

When Nichols was questioned at the solicitor's office Thursday afternoon following his arrest he is said to have detailed alleged activities of the swindle scheme, but interspersed his statements with quotations from the scriptures.

In the meantime letters from "customers" by the thousands are pouring

COMPLETE SHAKEUP IN CITY GOVERNMENT REPORTED IMMINENT

MEETING CALLED WITH ROAD CHIEFS IN VIADUCTS ROW

City and County Heads To Confer With Railroad Officials at Early Date.

Indications of an early settlement of differences between executives of railroads operating trains from the union depot and the city of Atlanta were seen Saturday when it was learned that a joint meeting of road chiefs, members of the Atlanta bond commission and city officials is planned soon after the Christmas holidays to discuss the problem of erection of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts.

Mayor Walter A. Sims already has dispatched letters to the rail presidents whose lines will be affected by construction of the proposed viaducts, and although no answer as to the most convenient time for the conference has yet been received, it is expected that answers will be receiv the early part of this week.

The bond commission and city engineers contend that the only feasible plan by which the bridges can be built with any degree of satisfaction is the lowering of railroad tracks 4.5 feet under the viaducts. This would save hundreds of thousands of dollars in property damage and would place the new viaducts on an approximate level with the Whitehall and Pryor street viaducts.

Leading engineers from all parts of the country have declared that lowering of the rail tracks is a condition necessary for economic and practical erection of the viaducts, and the bond commission has taken the position that the viaducts can not be built unless the tracks are lowered.

In the event the lowering is effected, the grade could be worked at about 3 per cent in 2,700 feet from the bridges. This would cost about $300,000 and would save property damage on Decatur and Hunter streets estimated at about $2,000,000.

Several weeks ago, it was announced rail executives regarded as closed negotiations to lower the tracks, but Frank Neely, president of the Atlanta bond commission, appointed to supervise expenditure of an $8,000,000 bond fund for civic improvement in which the viaducts were authorized, reopened correspondence with the roads with the result that they expressed a willingness to attend a conference at which the problem would be again considered. The meeting now pending will be to consider the lowering.

When the bond commission declined to approve tentative plans for construction of the viaducts, rumors of a deadlock between the city and the railroads were current, but with indications of a willingness on the part of the roads to cooperate in an effort to

EVIDENCE CLOSED IN OIL HEARING

Fate of Doheny and Fall Expected To Be in Hands of Jury Wednesday.

Washington, December 11.—Prosecution and defense lawyers placed their last evidence before the jury in the Fall-Doheny case here today, the fourth anniversary of one of the oil tankage contracts and California naval reserve leases, and went home to prepare their final speeches which should be completed in time to hand the case to the jury Wednesday.

Each side is allowed six hours, a full court day, for summing up, which should bring an end to this phase of the case, an important one, by Tuesday night. Justice Adolph Hoehling will read his charge to the jury Wednesday, and then the 12 men, a majority of them youngsters, will be locked up to make their decision as to the guilt or innocence of Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny.

16th Day of Trial.

Today was the 16th of the trial, a trial that perhaps will take its place at the top in the annals of American criminal history.

Probably the most dramatic moments are yet to come, the final speeches of the lawyers. Owen J. Roberts, tall and masterful physically but with something of the scholar about him, will make his supreme effort to convince the jury that the oil magnate and former Secretary of the Interior Fall should be convicted. Conviction carries a maximum penalty of two years imprisonment and $10,000 fine. The other government counsel, Atlee Pomerene, will assist in summing up the case. The former democratic senator from Ohio has more of an oratorical manner than his colleague. They will have their day Monday, but will save an hour for final rebuttal before the judge's charge.

Frank J. Hogan, slight of build, fiery, will make the principal speech

Dance Salons To Give Way To Tea-Baths

Paris Is Planning Modern Version of Old Roman Baths.

Paris, December 11.—Paris, jealous of its fame as the gayest spot in the world, has decided to combat Lilo, of pajama fame, and the American domination of Parisian entertainment through the inimitable Charleston and Black Bottom dances.

In an effort to keep her pajamas and fame at home, Paris has changed her tea-dance salons into tea-baths. Instead of exchanging gossip over a teacup or on a dance floor, Parisians now will do it between splashes.

Modern versions of Roman baths—immense aquariums with real beaches of fine sand, carted to Paris from the seashore, are to replace the dancing salons. Alluring music will pour from behind screened corners, while pajama-clad "beach" loungers will sip tea under striped awning tents.

THIRD SYMPHONY FEATURES PIANIST

Rosita Renard Will Appear as Guest Artist Twice on Today's Program at Loew's Grand.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Mendelssohn, Liszt, Dvorak, Strauss and Tschaikowsky—five of the greatest musical composers this old world, in all her history, has produced, are all named upon the program of the concert to be given at Loew's Grand theater this afternoon at 3:30 by the Atlanta Symphony orchestra. Rosita Renard, the popular Chilean pianist, is the guest artist for the occasion, which marks it with especial significance in the 1926-27 season of music in Atlanta.

It is the third in the series of eight concerts being presented on Sunday afternoons by the local symphony orchestra, an organization that is fast reaching the peak of symphonic presentation and which long ago won its own particular spot in the heart of appreciative Atlanta and her musical friends and neighbors.

Miss Renard, whom Atlantans now call one of their own, but who first won pianistic fame in her native land of Chile, then in Europe and later in New York and Boston, will appear twice on the program. In the first half she will play, with the orchestra accompanying, Franz Liszt's famous Concerto in E-flat. After the intermission she returns to the keys with her dear old Blue Danube, in a special arrangement of the ever popular waltz masterpiece.

Opening Number.

The opening orchestral number is Mendelssohn's overture to "Fingal's Cave." It is too well known and well liked to require lengthy dissertation.

RADICAL CHANGES IN COMMITTEES RUMORED LOOMING

Special Committee To Investigate Worth of Applicants for City Jobs Is Suggested.

PLAN TO PUT END TO "PETTY POLITICS"

Alderman Dobbs Author of Proposal To Be Recommended to Council Early in New Year.

Coincident with persistent city hall rumors to the effect that complete reorganization of the police committee and radical changes in the personnel of several others are in the offing, Alderman W. Guy Dobbs announced Saturday that he will recommend that council next year authorize appointment of a special investigating committee, designed to prevent the playing of petty politics and to raise the standard of city employees.

Mr. Dobbs said such a committee would function only in the fire, police and sanitary departments, and would be an investigating body to look into qualifications of applicants to fill posts in these respective departments. It would be composed of three men—one from each of the new committees appointed to supervise the respective branches involved.

While the committees would not be legally bound to accept recommendations of the central investigating committee, it is believed such recommendations would carry great weight and at the same time do much to eliminate what is called petty politics and bickering in the committees themselves.

Mr. Dobbs' Proposal.

"I will present my plan soon after the reorganization of council in 1927 in an effort to eradicate petty politics," Mr. Dobbs said. "There seems to be a general feeling at the present time that these departments are used as payoffs for services of political friends of members of council who are assigned as committee members. Creation of such a central investigating committee would instill confidence in elections of committees and do much to erase this impression."

Although I. N. Ragsdale, mayor-elect, was silent concerning his plans for committee assignments for next year, rumors are current that a complete reorganization of the police committee is in prospect. He declined either to affirm or deny this rumor.

Dr. C. J. Vaughan, Horace Russell and Robert F. Pennington were mentioned as probable chairman of the new police governing board. Others mentioned as members are C. L. Chose-

Fate of 'Third Term Baby' Discussed by Gridiron Club

:: QUESTION PUT SQUARELY UP TO COOLIDGE ::

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, December 11.—The question of another term in the white house was put squarely up to President Coolidge tonight at the dinner of the Gridiron Club of Washington newspaper correspondents. It is understood he took the matter under advisement.

With President Coolidge and Vice President Dawes as the club's guest of honor, the question was presented in the shape of the Gridiron club's version of Eugene O'Neill's drama of New England life: "Desire Under the Elms." The action revolved around the fate of the third-term baby, whose parents were Pa Butler and Ma Stearns. The scene opened at sundown at Plymouth Notch, with the farm hands, Dawes, Borah, Lowden, Longworth and Watson, returning from the fields. Presently Pa Butler enters and the following dialogue ensues:

Butler—Where's Calvin?

Longworth—Calvin's gone fishin.'

Butler—Always fishin' but don't catch nothin.'

Dawes—I hope they ain't taking pictures of him fishing.

Borah—Naw, Calvin won't let them picture fellers get within gunshot of him this year.

Longworth—What's come over him? Calvin used to pitch hay for the movies right smart.

Dawes—Yep, he couldn't have done that better if he had been a born movie actor.

Lowden—If Calvin ever gets an offer to quit his job and go to Hollywood, the farmers out my way'll urge him to take it.

Butler—Calvin's all right, best hand I've got. He's smart, he's saving, never does anything impetuous and consults nobody but Ma Stearns and me. He's a great comfort and protector, and the older we get down in New England, the more we need protecting.

Borah—Aw, now, Paw Butler, Calvin ain't any better than the rest of us.

Dawes—Naw; but he's luckier.

Longworth—Why don't you give some of the rest of us a chance? You are a hard man, Paw Butler.

Butler—Yep, I'm a hard man. You have to be hard in New England. The rocks are hard, the winters are hard, most always times are hard. My motto is: Be hard and be happy. That's what I tell Calvin. He'll go far. The rest of you are too gabby.

Dawes—Hey, here comes Maw Stearns with the third term baby (enter Stearns and baby).

Longworth—The third term baby looks like you Paw Butler, and yet more like Maw Stearns, don't it?

Butler—Well, it's more your baby than mine at that, Maw Stearns. Your idea, wasn't it Frankie?"

Stearns—Yep, Paw Butler, I got the idea first.

Butler—Your dream's come true, Maw Stearns, and we've got a fine healthy third term baby.

Stearns—Between you and me, Paw Butler, we better keep a sharp eye on these farm hands. They're pretty jealous of Calvin.

Butler—You're right, Maw Stearns. I wouldn't put it past that Dawes feller to slip some of those senate rules in the baby's milk.

Stearns—And I seen Nick Longworth one day right up near the third term baby's crib making some mighty funny passes with his gavel.

Butler—Don't f—t, Frankie, if one of them hands kidnaps the third term baby, they'll put us off the old homestead on March 4, 1929.

Stearns—If we could only hold on until 1933.

Butler—Yep; I suppose we couldn't hope to stay longer than that.

Stearns—I don't know, Paw; the country went crazy over a queen.

Butler—I ain't real sure it's ripe for a king.

Pa Butler and Ma Stearns hustle the third term baby out of reach of the jealous farm hands who give the skit this final:

Borah—Say, fellers, see them queer shaped clouds?

Longworth—There's a one and a nine. Why they spell 1928.

Lowden—And it's a sunset.

Dawes—If we only knew, fellers, whether it's sunset for Calvin or sundown for us.

Constitution Reader Cites

:: READERS PRESERVE FEATURES FOR REFERENCE ::

Value of Historical Strip

Widespread interest in the two historical illustrated strips now appearing in The Constitution is evidenced in a communication from J. W. Marcham, of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, in which he urges that the strips be printed on separate pages in order that readers may preserve them for reference.

In his letter, Mr. Marcham calls attention to the fact that thousands of readers, many of whom have followed the series through from the beginning, have preserved each strip for reference. On several occasions, he points out, the features have been printed on opposite sides of the same page, thus making it impossible to clip them both.

Mr. Marcham and other readers of The Constitution, are assured that in the future no repetition such as described in Mr. Marcham's letter will occur. The Constitution is gratified that these features are proving of such great and helpful interest to readers and will do all in its power to encourage the "scrap book" idea.

Mr. Marcham's Letter.

Mr. Marcham writes:

"No doubt in the past you have had various comments regarding the two history strips now running in your paper. As you know, there are many people besides myself that cut these out each day and preserve them in a scrap book of some sort.

"During the running of these strips on several occasions they have been printed on the opposite sides of the same page, which means that the ordinary subscriber or news-stand buyer has to beg, borrow or buy another paper in order that this strip may be salvaged.

"You cannot realize the number of people who are saving these strips. And I would like to put it in the form of a suggestion that these history strips be set up so that one paper would suffice."

"Men Who Made the World," by Dr. Elliott Shoring, noted historian and nationally recognized authority on historical subjects, which depicts in pen and word pictures the lives of great men, probably is commanding the greatest attention at the present time on account of the unusual interest in the life of George Washington, brought on by recent biographies, which have painted the first president of the United States in decidedly different colors than his original biographers.

Much Interest Shown.

Because of this added interest in Washington's activities, The Constitution substituted Dr. Shoring's illustrated account of his life for another series that was to have preceded it and it is now appearing in The Constitution. Washington's life from the time of his memorable encounter with William Bustle, as a boy, until the time of his death, will be presented in the most attractive and thorough method yet devised, especially for those who must read in a hurry.

The other feature is "High Lights of History," composed by J. Carrol Mansfield, likewise a historian of note, and a pioneer in the field of the historical illustrated "strip." The works of both of these men appear in The Constitution every day. While Dr. Shoring takes outstanding characters of history for his basis of building, Mansfield confines his work to the very thing that the title of his "strip" implies, namely, "High Lights of History."

Both "Men Who Have Made the World," and "High Lights of Histry," have received the enthusiastic indorsement of Atlanta school officials, which includes that of Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the city board of education, and Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools. Both of these men have publicly indorsed both features and have urged The Constitution to continue them for the benefit of students in the public schools, who, it was explained, were deriving lasting benefit from one of the most unusual educational features ever printed in a newspaper.

Value Pointed Out.

According to many instructors in Atlanta schools, and to mothers and fathers as well, the historical strips have done a great deal to interest numerous school children in their history books, which, in itself, would warrant The Constitution furnishing the service to its readers.

But the strips of Dr. Shoring and Mr. Mansfield have gone further than that. Virtually every man and woman is interested in history in some way or another. Few, however, are willing or have the time to search through voluminous or otherwise accounts of how the world was made or of the men who made it. But with the arrival of The Constitution every morning, there comes, in addition to fulfilling its regular mission, an interesting little bit out of the pages of history, attractively illustrated and told in language that all can understand, by men who are thoroughly acquainted with their subject and equipped to give it to the reading public.

If, perchance, you don't know it, you are to be envied at the opportunity to hear it the first time this afternoon.

Anton Dvorak's great symphony, "The New World," is one of the most ambitious selections in the entire season's orchestral program. It was written by the famous composer after he had visited America and tells, in musical expression, his reactions to the great new nation springing to birth on this mighty continent. Included in it is the "largo" movement, which nearly everybody who does anything with piano or other instrument, has played at one time or another.

The concluding number will be the "Marche Slav," by Tschaikowsky, the great Russian. This has been played several times in past seasons by the orchestra and is an ideal selection with which to close any program. For it is martial, thrilling and inspiring.

Conductor Enrico Liede and his men have enjoyed several additional hours of rehearsal for this program, above the regular number, some of which were specially to accustom themselves to playing the accompaniment for Miss Renard at the piano. Conductor Liede promises a performance at least up to the best the orchestra has ever done in the past and, in some respects, he is quietly anticipating reaching new heights of perfected interpretation.

The concert will, as usual, start promptly at 3:30. Doors will open at 2:30 and all gallery seats will be free as long as they last. Orchestra, balcony and loges are reserved exclusively for ticket holders, which have been on sale at Phillips & Crew Piano company, 181 Peachtree street. Owing to the Sunday observance laws, reserved seat tickets cannot be sold today, but persons who have failed to receive their ticket coupons, for any reason, may communicate by telephone with Mrs. George Walker, secretary of the symphony association, at Hemlock 4527.

AD DRIVE LEADERS EXPRESS CONFIDENCE

will go on record as favoring and supporting this most progressive step upon the part of the people of Atlanta," said Mayor Sims.

Expressions by William Candler, general chairman of the campaign; W. C. Wardlaw, chairman of the special sales division, and George W. West, chairman of the general sales organization, Saturday were to the effect that not only do they expect to see the drive succeed, but also go over the top in a generous fashion.

"The last campaign proved the wisdom of advertising Atlanta beyond the shadow of a doubt. Results speak for themselves. I am fully convinced that the people of Atlanta will respond to the slogan, 'Yes, I will keep Atlanta on my payroll,' said William Candler.

Cox To Be Marshal.

Plans for the parade Monday call for what will probably be one of the biggest events of its kind in the history of the city. Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, of Georgia, is in charge as grand marshal, and has appointed the following staff: Colonel E. D'A. Pearce, chief of staff, and Lieutenant Colonel Fonville McWhorter, Major J. O. Seamans, Captain Frank Maloney, Captain John J. O'Leary, Lieutenant W. N. Crawford, Lieutenant W. U. Moran and Reed Hunter, aides.

The parade will form at Spring and Harris streets, and will be in position to move on Peachtree street at noon. The line of march is on Peachtree and Whitehall to Mitchell and back into Forsyth street to the Grady monument. A reviewing stand has been erected in front of the monument for officials and honor guests.

In the line of march will be the 22d infantry, Colonel Walter Kreuger, commanding, Georgia School of Technology, Emory university, Oglethorpe university, Boys High school, Tech High school, Marist college, Fulton High school, Georgia Military academy, the Georgia Railway and Power Company band, Junior High schools, the Police band and mounted policemen and all of the elementary schools

Prospects Chosen.

Prospects for the campaign have already been selected by the 27 sales managers in the general sales organization, and cards for the possible contributors will be issued at Monday night's gathering to the workers. The sales managers had the opportunity of going over the full lists of prospects and taking those names best handled by their division, thus placing every team on an equal footing, so far as getting good material is concerned.

Banners advertising the campaign have been strung across Peachtree and other downtown streets, and at Five Points the General Outdoor Advertising company has contributed several billboards which bear the slogan: "Yes, I Will Keep Atlanta on My Pay Roll."

Arrangements for Dr. Frank Jaynes, educational director of the American City Bureau, to speak over the radio Monday in connection with the opening of the drive are being made, it was announced Saturday. Dr. Jaynes has spent a busy week in Atlanta addressing civic clubs and other organizations on the benefits of the advertising campaign, and will talk before a number of organizations during the drive this week.

To Review Parade.

General Cox Saturday requested that his staff of aides meet him at 11:30 o'clock Monday morning, at Spring and Harris streets, in order to handle the formation of the huge parade. The parade is scheduled to move at noon.

The following have been invited to review the parade from the stand in front of the Grady monument: Major General Johnson Haygood, Brigadier General James D. Leach, Colonel Duncan Major, Dr. E. Fred Norris, W. C. Slate, W. W. Gaines, R. M. Eubanks, J. W. Maddox, Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, D. M. Therrell, W. D. Hoffman, J. Oscar Mills, C. J. McLendon, Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, Mrs. A. E. Wilson, Ivan Allen, Frank Adair, George M. Hope, Frank H. Neely, W. R. C. Smith, H. Lane Young, B. S. Barker, Philip H. Alston, H. H. Johnson, George W. West, Governor Walker, Governor-elect Hardeman, Mayor Sims, Mayor-elect Ragsdale, Henry W. Grady, Jr., Henry W. Grady III, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Black and Superintendent of Schools W. A. Sutton.

for the defense. Wilton J. Lambert, Frederick Kellogg, and Mark Thompson, of defense counsel, will also take part.

The defense rested its case today eight minutes after the court convened. The eight minutes were taken up with the testimony of John McCormack, Irish tenor, who praised his Irish friend, Doheny, as one of the most patriotic and reputable persons he knows.

In violation of the court order against overcoats, the singer walked into the room muffled in a big black one decorated with a huge black fur collar. Before taking the stand he chatted with the Doheny family. He testified that he had known the millionaire oil man intimately for 20 years, telling the court he has been singing in this country since 1904.

"I know of no man held in higher reputation generally," McCormack said of Doheny.

Announce Case Closed.

He was excused without cross-examination and Hogan and Lambert announced their case was closed, although they said they had many more witnesses prepared to testify to the good reputation of Doheny.

At the opening of the session today, the defense announced that Fall would not take the stand, and the government announced that it would not call former Secretary of State Hughes in an attempt to break down the "patriotism" and "war scare" testimony of the defense.

MEETING IS CALLED ON VIADUCT ROW

reach an amicable agreement and a feasible settlement, hope was expressed that work on the projects can be begun as soon as bond funds are available.

Conference Welcomed.

Enthusiasm Saturday marked announcements that the conference will be held at an early date because of the fact that the circuit court of appeals will hear the last legal barrier now pending against administration of the bond funds in New Orleans within the next 60 days. This was augmented when attorneys representing the city in the litigation, stated they are confident of victory, and hope to begin the improvements authorized by the bond issue early next year.

The suit now pending is one brought by Thomas Brady, of Los Angeles, against the validity of the entire issue. The $3,500,000 school, $1,000,000 city hall, $1,000,000 viaduct, $2,000,000 sewer and $500,000 waterworks funds are involved in the adjudication of the suit. If the court rules against the city, the entire issue will be declared invalid.

Railroads, it seems, were under the impression that the matter of lowering the tracks was settled when the citizens' committee composed of Reuben Arnold and several other prominent Atlantans dropped the matter before the bonds were authorized, and that caused the misunderstanding. This now has been explained to the full satisfaction of all concerned and the matter probably will be adjusted within the next few days.

Unless the tracks are lowered approaches from the Decatur street side over the Pryor street project would be six feet above the present street level at Decatur and Pryor and 10 feet higher than the present intersection at Central avenue and Decatur street. This would force all establishments in this area to conform to the new street elevation, and cause damages to central business property valued at more than $1,000,000, it is pointed out.

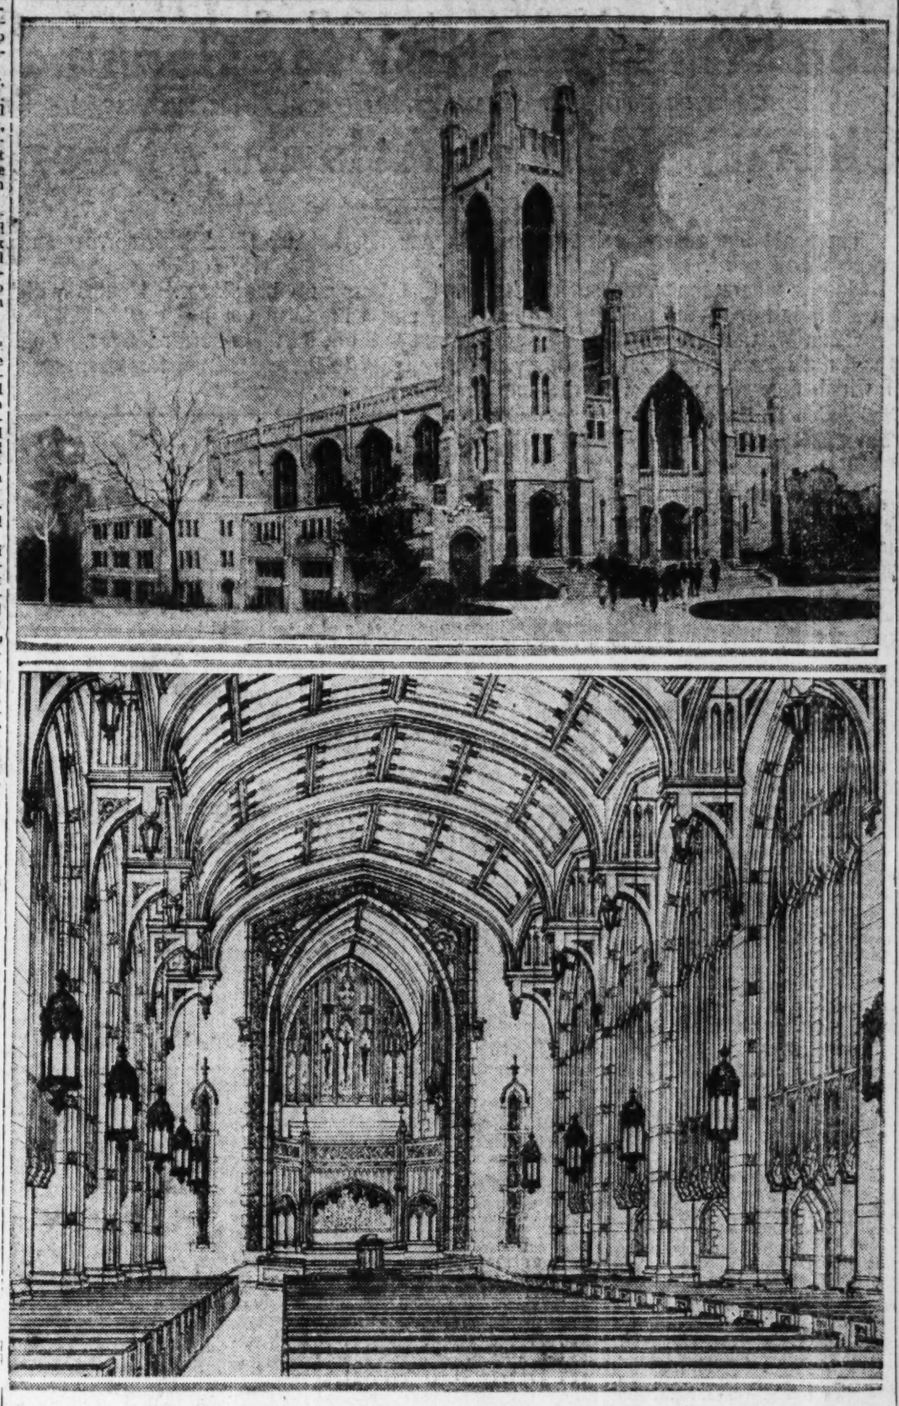

The southern approaches would extend approximately half way between Hunter and Mitchell streets from both projects unless the tracks are lowered thus forcing a change of grade on Hunter street and damaging another $1,000,000 worth of property. The new $1,000,000 Fulton county courthouse would also be placed in a hole if the new grade went into effect, it is pointed out.

If, however, the tracks are lowered approaches could be worked out at present street levels at Decatur and Hunter streets and save this entire property damage, engineers say.

J. B. Hill, of Nashville, president of the N. C. & St. L. railroad; J. J. Pelly, of Savannah, president of the Central of Georgia; W. R. Cole, president of the L. & N., and C. A. Wickersham, president of the Georgia road, are among those who are expected to attend the conference.

Much credit for arranging the conference has been given Mr. Neely, Mayor Sims and others who have worked to secure reconsideration and make the viaducts possible.

Views of New Peachttree Christian Church

Top picture shows the Peachtree Christian church as it will look when completed, at the intersection of Peachtree road and Spring street. The Rev. L. O. Bricker, pastor, announced Saturday that contracts are now being let for the structure, which will cost more than a half-million dollars. Actual construction will begin in February of 1927. Below is shown an architect's drawing of the auditorium of the church. It is to be one of the most magnificent religious structures in the entire city, and will seat 1,250 persons.

ROYAL BETROTHAL DENIED BY ROME

Rome, December 11.—The Italian foreign office today denied the report that Crown Prince Humbert of Italy was engaged to Princess Ileana of Rumania.

Rumors that Princess Ileana, of Rumania, was to marry Crown Prince Humbert, of Italy, were again current in the European capitals Saturday. Similar reports have been circulated from time to time, but have been subsequently denied.

The Rome correspondent of the Paris Petit Journal sent such a report from the Italian capital on November 27, saying the engagement would be announced during an impending visit to the Rumanian royal family to Rome.

If Ileana should marry the heir to the Italian throne, she would be following in the footsteps of her older sisters, two of whom are queens. The eldest of the three Rumanian sisters, Princess Elizabeth married King George of Greece, but Greece is a republic now, and she hasn't any throne.

Princess Marie is the wife of Alexander I, king of Jugo-Slavia.

The name of the Prince of Wales has been linked with that of Ileana almost as frequently as has Prince Humbert's. There there are several factors, such as religion, age and relationship, as well as the opposition of the British royal family to a queen from the Balkans, that have disposed of such rumors.

Both Wales and Ileana are great grandchildren of Queen Victoria, of England.

WORK TO BEGIN ON NEW CHURCH

school and other departments will seat 1,200. Probably one of the most interesting features of the interior is the chancel which looks out on the pews. The pulpit and the preacher will not be the first objects that meet the worshiper's eyes as he walks into the church, Dr. Bricker pointed out. The pulpit will be set off at one side. In this chancel will be the Lord's table, where communion will be offered. Just above will be a tapestry, representing the resurrection. And then a great stained window, showing "the reigning Lord," with adult worshippers on one side and children on the other. This window alone is to cost $20,000 and will be the gift of the children of the church.

Dr. Bricker declared that the idea for the chancel takes birth from the spirit of his church—that the members do not come so much to hear a sermon or beautiful music, but to take communion and worssip. "It will be a beautiful shrine of worship," he said, "a dream that I have always had as ideal for a place of worship, and a dream that now is materializing."

The organ, Dr. Bricker said, will be the largest of any church organ in the city, and will cost $50,000. It will have sound chambers on either side, 50 feet deep, built into the solid walls on either side of the chancel.

The Peachtree Christian church will be the most costly church in Atlanta and one of the largest. First work was begun on it some time ago, the Sunday school unit and a portion of the educational unit having been completed. Orders have already been placed for most of the materials needed, and its completion will be accomplished in the not distant future.

into the Atlanta postoffice for the three defendants, and government agents have communicatetd with Postmaster General Harry New in an effort to get a "fraud" order" issued against the trio so that the mail with remittances can be returned to the senders. Without such an order permission of the addresses necessary before the letters can be returned, Solicitor Boykin said Saturday after giving his permission for such action.

Nichols Refuses.

Gaines readily gave his permission to return all of the mail to the senders but Nichols refused to do so, thereby necessitating an order from the postmaster general. Postal Inspector Tomlinson declared that this matter would be taken up with the postmaster general Saturday afternoon and a message is expected Monday.

Indications of the mammoth scale on which the alleged swindle has been operating is indicated by more than 8,000 letters, filling three mail pouches seized Saturday, and the large number of checks and money orders found in the offices of the trio addressed to various "firms" under which they are said to have operated.

Nichols and Gaines are in Fulton tower in default of $10,000 bonds, held by the grand jury under 18 indictments charging larceny after trust in connection with their activities in the alleged swindle scheme. They are also under bonds of $1,000 each on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Seek Other Charges.

The two defendants here are to appear Monday morning at 10 o'clock before United States Commissioner L. S. Ledbetter in an effort to establish additional charges of a similar nature and thus increase their holding bonds. Their bonds might be increased on present charges, it is said, but federal authorities prefer to establish other charges, they declared Saturday night.

Walter C. Hendrix, state senator of this district, was named receiver for the funds in the Atlanta banks Saturday morning by Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy in Fulton superior court. Action for the appointment of the receiver was brought by John M. Brannan & Co., of Chicago, Ill. Under the order of the court the funds in possession of Solicitor Boykin will be returned to the senders, while the funds in the banks will be held in trust until the final order of the court.

If the "fraud order" is granted by Postmaster General New all of the mail addressed to the defendants in the case can be opened and returned to the senders.

Liquor Aboard CoastGuardShip, Court Informed

Boston, December 11.—(AP)—Four men who served on the coast guard patrol boat No. 177 while Chief Boatswain's Mate Francis P. McIntyre was in command, testified today at the trial of McIntyre before a court-martial board that they had seen liquor on board the vessel. The chief boatswain's mate is the fourth coast guard officer to go on trial here charged with scandalous conduct and trafficking with rum runners.

TEXTILE CONCERN TO MOVE PLANT FROM ALBANY, GA.

Brantley, Ala., December 11.—(AP) Announcement was made here today that the J. G. Sherf company, a $200,000 textile manufacturing organization, will move its plant from Albany, Ga., early in 1927 to Brantley.

The removal from Albany, it is said, is being made to enable the company to take advantage of this section's hydro-electric power which can be purchased at a more economical figure than was possible in Albany. The company also finds more favorable labor conditions here. The hydro-electric power will be obtained from the river falls project.

Construction work on a brick structure to house the mill is scheduled to start January 1 or as soon thereafter as material can be gathered.

RADICAL CHANGES IN CITY CONTROL

wood, J. C. Murphy and Harry York. Only five are to be selected. The old committee is composed of W. B. Harisfield, chairman; Claude E. Buchanan, W. G. Cooper, J. T. Ozburn and Ellis Barrett.

Fire Board Rumors.

Another committee in which several important changes are slated in accordance with rumors is the Atlanta fire board. W. Guy Dobbs, chairman, and Frank Callaway hold the spotlight as possible chairman, and it also is said that Mr. Ragsdale frowns on action of present members of the board who voted at the last meeting to override recommendations of Chief W. B. Cody. If the rumor holds he will decline to rename any member of the board who voted to bolt the chief's recommendations, it is hinted.

In that event only Mr. Dobbs and W. E. Saunders would be returned. This would leave off B. T. Huiet, Charles M. Ford, W. R. Johnson and T. C. Morris next year. Mr. Morris will be out of council anyway because of his defeat for reelection as councilman from the fifth.

The finance committee probably will be headed again by Councilman A. J. Orme. J. L. McLendon may be succeeded from the sixth ward by Alderman-elect Robert E. Gann, and the only other vacancies which will exist, unless Mr. Ragsdale decides to make certain changes, are those of John Faith from the 11th ward, and C. D. Knight, of the ninth ward. Mr. Faith will be succeeded by Mr. Murphy, who probably will fill his place on the finance body, while Councilman Horace Russell is slated to take Mr. Knight's post.

Other Changes Hinted.

Conjecture is rife concerning the sanitary committee. Some contend that W. E. Saunders, present chairman of the committee, will be retained, while others declare that Mr. Ragsdale will place a doctor at the helm of the city's sanitary department. Dr. C. J. Vaughan and Dr. P. L. Moon have been prominently mentioned. Others who have been slated for positions on the committee include J. E. Bowden, Harry York, Oscar Williamson and Mr. Dobbs. Only five are to be named.

The parks committee probably will be left intact with the single exception of one man who will fill the place left vacant by W. D. Knight, councilman from the ninth. Jack Savage, named to succeed Mr. Knight, is mentioned for this position.

Only minor changes are expected to be made on the streets and sewer committees. There will be two vacancies on the streets body, posts which were held by M. F. Dowdy, of the sixth, and C. G. Allen, of the second. There also are two vacancies on the sewers committee, formerly held by the late Dan Adams, of the 12th, and T. C. Morris, of the fifth.

Other committees probably will be retained almost intact with the exception of naming successors to resigned members of council, it is believed.

JAPAN'S EMPEROR IS CRITICALLY ILL

Tokio, December 11.—(AP)—Six oxygen tanks were installed to day in the sick room of Emperor Yoshihito, indicating his condition is critical. Empress Sanako is at his bedside. The stricken ruler's weak pulse is causing considerable anxiety. Heart stimulants are necessary.

The navy is considering dispatching a cruiser to Vancouver, B. C., to bring Prince Chichibu homeward in case he is unable to make connection with a transpacific liner on his arrival there from England.

The entire nation is anxiously watching the reports from Hayama, where the emperor is confined in his villa. Holiday business already has suffered. The merchants may lose millions if New Year's parties and other celebrations are halted.

ORMISTON ARREST IN CHICAGO URGED

Philadelphia, December 11.—Asa Keyes, district attorney of Los Angeles, tonight told the United News he would appeal directly to District Attorney Crowe, of Chicago, to order the immediate arrest of Kenneth Ormiston in the event Police Chief Collins, of Chicago, failed to arrest him.

Keyes said he had telegraphed Collins requesting the arrest, but so far had not heard directly from the Chicago police chief.

Ormiston, recently discovered in Harrisburg, Pa., is wanted by Los Angeles authorities in connection with charges against Mrs. Aimee McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist.

Man Is Slain In Gun Fight With Woman

Perry, Okla., December 11.—(AP)—A woman's aim was the more deadly and Bill Dearborn, 50, was killed in a gun fight on the main street here this afternoon with Mrs. Ellis Hobbs, 30.

Mrs. Hobbs, who walked to the courthouse and surrendered to the sheriff immediately after the shooting, would make no statement. Bystanders, however, said a loud argument preceded the shooting.

Dearborn is survived by a wife and two children. Mrs. Hobbs is married but has no children. Acquaintances say the two families had been intimate.

The duel was fought around Dearborn's automobile, which was parked on the street. Witnesses said Mrs. Hobbs produced a pistol and started shooting after ignoring Dearborn's demands that she enter the car.

Dearborn took an automatic pistol from his car, and emerging from the opposite side, opened fire. Two bullets passed through the woman's coat, one going through a pocket and puncturing her powder-puff, but neither struck her.

Mrs. Hobbs' third shot struck Dearborn above the heart and he died almost instantly.

Yule Gold Rush Begun; 90 Million In Gifts Likely

New York, December 11.—(AP)—Wall street's annual "Gold Rush" has begun.

Stacks of gold pieces in the $2.50, $5.00 $10.00 and $20.00 denominations are now leaving the vaults of the New York Federal Reserve bank by the truckload, bound for country and city banks which will supply the stream of gold coins that pour into Christmas stockings and gift envelopes.

Every year at this time the New York and other Federal Reserve banks have watched a growing flood of gold pieces pour forth, and then suddenly, after the holidays, pour back and become a part of the bank reserves until another Christmas rolls around.

Officials of the Chase National bank estimate that between $80,000,000 and $90,000,000 in gold coins will be withdrawn this year, probably setting a new high record. Last year it was estimated that $75,000,000 in gold was put into circulation at this time. In New York alone, it is expected that between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 will be distributed this year.

Boys Admit School Well Poison Plot

Three Young Brothers of Two Already Held Make Confessions.

Warsaw, Ind., December 11.—Three young farmer boys have confessed to helping their two older brothers put poison in a country schoolhouse well, endangering the lives of 15 pupils and the teacher, according to an announcement today by Prosecutor Morrison Rockwell.

The youths who confessed were Robert, 13; George, 10, and Edward, 7, sons of George B. Riley, a Kosciusko county farmer. The two older sons, Samuel, 18, and Athol, 23, are held under bonds of $3,500 each, formally charged with the attempted poisoning.

Samuel and Athol were arrested late yesterday following an investigation started last month when 13 children of the Mount Tabor district school became violently ill after drinking water from the well. An analysis ordered by the county health physician revealed that the water contained a heavy solution of Paris green.

Investigators learned that a large quantity of the poison had been purchased by the two older Riley boys shortly before the well became contaminated.

Investigators also learned that the Riley family had been involved in a petty community quarrel over the assignment of teachers to neighboring schools.

Mary and Ruth Riley, sisters of the accused youths, formerly had taught at the Mount Tabor school, which is near their home. Last year Ruth was replaced by Mrs. Pearl Applegate, the present teacher, after Mary's application had been refused.

Woman Battles Negro Bandit, Saves Valuables

Although overpowered by a vicious negro snatch thief, Mrs. F. E. Cheatham, of 184 Central avenue, early Saturday night put up a hand-to-hand battle for several minutes and in the tussle saved more than $200 and an expensive diamond ring. The bandit escaped with her purse containing only a small amount of money, according to police records.

Mrs. Cheatham, in her story to Detectives W. C. Duncan and A. H. Davis, which was substantiated by witness, stated that she was knocked down and dragged several feet by the negro but was uninjured and held the money and ring in her closed hand all the while.

During the struggle Mrs. Cheatham's screams attracted a crowd that gave chase but lost the bandit in the darkness. Police were furnished with a good description of the thief.

M. E. Wilson, of 372 Ormond street, was held up at the point of a pistol by three negro men in front of 112 Electric place and robbed of $40 early Saturday night, according to police reports.

Morris Chesser, a delivery boy, of 1364 McPherson avenue, was held up by three young white masked bandits early Saturday night on McPherson avenue and robbed of $4.86, according to police reports.

Young Chesser told Detectives W. J. Stephens and J. H. Davis that the trio drove up in an automobile. One held the gun, another robbed him, and the third waited in the car.

P. J. Caper, of 50 Ormond street, reported to police that his pocket was picked of $50 late Saturday afternoon at Five Points. He could not give a description of the suspects and did not know when he was relieved of his money.

Mrs. T. F. Peaboby, of 1050 Ponce de Leon avenue, reported the loss of an expensive diamond ring, a valuable platinum wrist watch and a diamond lavalier.

The Martin-Nash Motor company at Peachtree and North avenue, reported the loss of an automobile battery and several automobile tires.

Pussyfoot Finds Home Caretaker Is Liquor Maker

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 11.—When Pussyfoot Johnson, world renowned dry crusader, arrived in New York aboard the President Harding today, he learned that, technically, he was and is in the bootlegging business. Johnson bought a farm at Smithville Flats, Chenango county, just before he sailed for Europe, four months ago. He left it in charge of a caretaker.

Today Pussyfoot learned that the caretaker had been operating a distillery on the premises. Johnson will remain in New York several days to see what can be done about it, he said.

DESTROY TREES, SAY PEACH MEN

Macon, Ga., December 11,—(AP)—Recommendation that all Georgia Belle trees south of Macon and all Carmen trees north of Macon be pulled up to save fruit growers from ruin, was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the general committee of growers and shippers of peaches held today at the office of W. C. Bewley, chairman of the committee and general manager of the Georgia Peach Growers' exchange.

It was the sense of the meeting that a marketing and standardization law should be passed at the next session of the state legislature. The standard would have to be flexible from year to year so as to conform to the needs of the particular crop. Such a law would be effective over the entire state and would fix the minimum sized peach to be shipped, depending on the size of the entire crop each year.

Representatives in congress will be asked to make an appropriation to provide funds for extending the work of the Fort Valley peach laboratory to the locating of diseased peach trees to be destroyed.

Details for working out these measures will be put into effect as soon as possible, it was announced.

FORMER OFFICERS ARE INDICTED

Cleveland, Ohio, December 11.—(AP) Forty men, including two former justices and a former mayor of Newburg Heights, were named in four conspiracy indictments returned today by the federal grand jury in connection with the government investigation into administrations of dry raiding justices in Cuyahoga county.

One indictment named 30 persons, including former justices, dry raiders and alleged bootleggers, and another secret true bill named six persons whose identity was not revealed. The investigation is directed against alleged bribery and corruption in justice courts.

Chief among those named in the blanket indictment are Charles E. Zimmerman, former Newburg Heights mayor; Herman Geltman, former Parma justice, and C. O. Peters, former justice in Independence. About 25 overt acts were charged to Geltman alone in this bill.

Another indictment against Geltman contained six counts. Three occasions are cited when he is alleged to have received bribes for "fixing" liquor cases.

The blanket indictment also named 17 victims of alleged fixing operations. These persons were not made defendants, but are included to explain operations of those participating in the alleged conspiracy.

CONVICT CAMP GUARD BREAKS LEG IN CRASH

J. W. Tolbert, a guard at the Bellwood convict camp, was taken to Grady hospital early Saturday with a broken leg after being knocked from his wagon by an automobile driven by D. T. Argo, of East North avenue, according to police records.

According to information given to Patrolman M. O. Evans, the automobile that struck the wagon was struck by another automobile, the driver of which has not been learned by police. Mr. Tolbert was driving east on Marietta street when struck by Argo's automobile at Johns street.

J. E. Williams, 15, negro, of 13-A Lawshe street, was treated at Grady hospital for injuries received when he was knocked down by a private ambulance at Baker and Courtland streets Saturday afternoon, according to a report filed at police station. The ambulance was driven by L. Lamontague who reported to Captain A. J. Holcomb, that the accident was unavoidable. No case was made.

Robert Monroe, negro, of 80 Magnolia street, was treated at Grady hospital for injuries received Saturday morning when knocked from his bicycle at Ivy and Gilmer streets, according to police records. The automobile in this case was driven by Mrs. N. A. Coulter, of 129 Sherwood road, and, according to information given to Call Officers John W. Lowe and Jack T. Malcolm, the accident was unavoidable. No case was made.

MOOSE IN MAINE MENACE PUPILS ON WAY TO SCHOOL

Augusta, Maine, December 11.—(AP) Moose are growing so plentiful and bold in some parts of Maine, school children are reported in danger. In a letter received at the statehouse today, a Washington county man complained that his four young children were unable to walk to their school, a mile distant, without becoming frightened and turned back by these monarchs of the forests.

"The state protects the moose, and I hav. to protect my children," he wrote. "They will not go to school unless someone takes them. We are poor people and cannot afford to keep a horse or automobile."

THE $4,000,000,000 BUDGET.

The federal budget for the next fiscal year exceeds four billions of dollars. The budget for the current fiscal year was slightly under four billions—a difference, to be exact, of $16,543,728. The excess is accounted for in increased demands of the Veterans' bureau, due to last year's pension bill, and to increased expenses in the postal service.

It was only a few years ago when congressional appropriations totaled a billion dollars. The country seemed alarmed at the time, and the "billion-dollar congress" became the target for political attack by almost every radical and by demagogic politicians everywhere.

And now, four billions!

What a difference! And yet with these enormous expenditures the nation has been enabled to reduce its war taxes more rapidly than any other nation that engaged in the world struggle; its national credit is as firm as at any time in its history; and its general economic conditions are as satisfactory as at any time since the establishment of the government.

And that is not all. With a four billion dollar budget we still see in sight a $355,000,000 surplus, which can be absorbed by further permanent tax reduction, as very properly proposed by the democratic leaders in congress.

It is obvious that the great expansions in the services of government have justified the yearly increasing budget. It emphasizes the economic status of taxation, which after all represents investments in services which benefit all the people. While the budget today is four times as great as at the time the "billion-dollar congress" was sorely attacked, the government is just as ready to meet this budget as to meet the appropriations of that earlier date, and the people are more able to provide the funds.

There are many features to the new budget, just submitted in a special budget message by President Coolidge, that are significant. Outstanding is the renewed opposition of the executive to federal aid for highway construction. While a $75,000,000 item for this purpose is included it is incorporated with a renewal of the recommendation that the government hereafter cut down this appropriation and confine federal aid only to interstate highways, leaving to the states the building of secondary roads without federal aid. There will be a vigorous fight on this proposal, which will undoubtedly find later expression in a bill. This fight will come largely from the south, as the road systems in most of the eastern, northern, middle western and Pacific coast states have been completed. On the other hand, there is economic sense in the president's position, and it is growing in favor so rapidly that the 70th congress will very probably follow the recommendation. It is the same position that we take as to the state system—that is, that the state should build her own state roads, with federal aid, and that the counties should be left to build their local and lateral roads. It is sound. The government, however, should never withdraw federal aid from the through-state highways, linking up with abutting through-state highways, whether such highways are incorporated in what is known as the new "federal system" or not. All interstate highways should be placed on a parity. This renewed recommendation of the president gives the so-called "pay-as-you-go" element in Georgia something to think about.

The appropriation demanded for prohibition "enforcement"—which is a misnomer—is both startling and alarming. For the next fiscal year $30,000,000 is asked, and it will be recalled that the omnibus deficiency bill will carry an enormous amount for expenditures during the current year in excess of the last budget—a prophetic signal. With all of the enormous sums poured into this branch of government the bootleg situation is notoriously getting worse. To date almost a quarter of a billion dollars has been expended in trying to arrest a tide that has been running to a flood all the while—and the end is not in sight. There must be some remedy to this situation.

Other appropriations named in the budget appear to be in keeping with efficient services, and the national defense items appear ample, despite the protest of the house naval committee that the president has "deliberately" cut out the items for three new cruisers and one dirigible.

THE 1927 FARM PROGRAM.

Time is here for planning the 1927 farm program. It is of the utmost importance that not only community farmers, but bankers, merchants and business interests generally, unite in a cooperative spirit that no mistakes, or certainly as few mistakes as possible, be made in preparing these programs.

They will differ in sections necessarily. But in one particular there should be entire uniformity—and that is the provision, first of all, for growing all—not part—of the food and feed required for home consumption from harvest to harvest.

This is as imperative in any schedule of "balancing" on a farm, be it small or large, owned or rented, as it is imperative to make a farm pay at least running expenses if the sheriff is to be kept from the gate. Every farmer is entitled to a profit on his investment and to proper pay for his labors. In nine instances out of ten it is his own fault if he doesn't get both.

As to a balanced program for 1927, especially in the southeastern states, an editorial from the Country Gentleman, republished in part on this page, should serve a good purpose. This is one of the highest class farm magazines in the world, and has been a consistent friend of Georgia. The associate editor, Mr. Taylor, has made several trips through the state, and Georgia's marked progress in getting away from the "misery crop," as the Country Gentleman calls cotton, has been commended by him numbers of times.

In the editorial in question it is pointed out that while the 1927 gross cotton acreage will probably be cut, "from dire necessity," the southwest may be expected to continue to add to its cotton acreage each year, as it has been doing, certainly after 1927, should reduced acreage that year restore market normalcy. It emphasizes in the connection the overwhelming importance of turning farm production in this section to other than cotton money crops, providing first for the food and feed crops. It points out the many opportunities in the southeast, not enjoyed in other sections, for a farm schedule that will either eliminate cotton altogether or make it a surplus.

This is true, and there isn't a farmer in the southeast who doesn't know it. As much progress as Georgia has made in crop balancing, with marked increases in the production of grains, hay and meat, the fact remains that Georgia must buy largely of all of these commodities from other states to meet her own consumption demands. In other words, the proceeds from cotton, whether the market is high or low, must largely go out of Georgia to pay for the very commodities that we can grow just as well and just as profitably in Georgia. The false economy in such a course is as plain as a potleg.

Then what? Grow what we are now buying. Then the proceeds from cotton, or fruits, or whatever may be accepted as money crops, will stay in the state and represent profits to producers. Such proceeds, thereby, will become actual and not fictitious accretions to our state wealth.

These are matters for the business men to consider. They demand cooperation. With increased production in other-than-cotton cash crops there must be set up increased marketing facilities.

The Country Gentleman is a strong advocate of the system of cooperative marketing. There can be no challenging of the soundness of the principle. Their success depends, of course, upon management, but vitally—vitally, we say—upon the attitude of the producers. The peach-growing industry in Georgia has developed that fact. No cooperative marketing movement can serve to its best advantage unless a large percentage of the growers of the commodity, whether peaches or cotton, enter into the movement so that its usefulness cannot be destroyed by the larger element on the outside.

The editorial from the Country Gentleman deserves to be widely read—and heeded. To plan the next farm program wisely is the duty of all concerned interests.

TIME FOR RECIPROCITY.

Secretary of Interior Work, who secured from congress last spring an appropriation of $100,000 for a survey of southern agricultural areas looking to their reclamation from idleness to productivity through a government aid process of settlement and community building, has just presented to congress a schedule of appropriations necessary for completing 24 reclamation projects in the west. The amounts total the enormous gross figure of $97,000,000, and not one of the projects in the schedule is east of the Mississippi river. They include reclamations of arid lands by irrigation, and also reclamations of overflow lands by canaling and drainage.

There is perhaps in the entire program not one project that is not meritorious. Some of them are of enormous proportions, as, for instance, the Owyhee irrigation project in Oregon for which $17,714,000 is asked, and two drainage projects in Idaho for which $8,000,000 each is asked, etc.

All of these activities have already been undertaken, and it is assumed congress will grant the funds necessary to carry the work on, as requested. So far as we know there is no objection.

The facts simply accentuate, however, the importance of southern members of congress actively pushing the latest proposal of the interior department to show activity in this section also, in reclamations of another kind, but no less important. That is, the bringing into the south of great numbers of experienced dirt farmers from other sections, especially from the ice-bound states of the northwest, to occupy and settle idle farm lands, along constructive lines, with government help and encouragement. The commission is now at work to outline a sound colonization policy in keeping with the intents of the movement.

For generations we have been pouring money into the west for various reclamation programs. These projects have been uniformly supported by the southern members. They have as a rule warranted support, but the tendency necessarily has been to take the people away from the east and the south, rather than to materially help populate these sections, and to add to the material wealth of these sections.

Despite the activity of the government in western reclamation, however, the shift of population has in the last ten years been to the south. This shift has intensified until today it is a veritable flood tide.

Secretary Work, with commendable foresight, has turned his eyes to the south twice in the past three years, first with the plan for the establishment of national parks. This was a direct result of the park program being vigorously brought to his personal attention by The Constitution.

Now has followed the even greater and more constructive program for the reclamation of southern farm lands from idleness.

A southern member of congress who does not enter actively into the interior department's newest and most unique reclamation proposal, while continuing support—obviously necessary, as is granted—to the western projects, involving huge expenditures, will show either a blindness to southern opportunities, or an unworthy indifference to the progress of the south, and to the potentiality of the plan proposed.

It is not assumed, of course, that southern members will be so neglectful of their duties, and for the reclamation innovation of the department the fullest support of every individual and interest is imperative.

THE ROANOKE TIMES.

One of the best morning newspapers in Virginia is the Roanoke Times. It was founded on December 1, 1886—40 years ago. At that time Roanoke, the metropolis of the southwestern section of the state, was in the midst of a great land boom. It was springing ahead as few cities of the south, and as no other city in Virginia. It was called the "Magic City," and appropriately so.

The first publisher of the Times was M. H. Clayton, who is now a resident of California, and Col. Alfred B. Williams was its president and editor during the period when the Times achieved state-wide prominence—from 1909 to 1915. He is now retired but hearty and hale on the sunset of a useful, colorful career.

The present editor and publisher is J. P. Fishburn, a young newspaper man of great force and ability who believes—and correctly—that an editor's greatest opportunity for service is through his own columns, and not in the holding of public office.

Mr. Fishburn, who is scarcely more than 30 years of age, is one of the outstanding men of Virginia, and was prominently mentioned for governor before the primary in which Governor Byrd was nominated. He frowned upon the suggestion, and frankly told those who called upon him to urge his candidacy his conviction as to an editor's duty to his state and people.

On the evening of November 30 the Times celebrated its 40th birthday with a notable banquet at which its department heads, former editors and publishers, and friends from all sections of Virginia, gathered. The founder travelled from the Pacific coast to be present, Colonel Williams was a guest of honor. Senator Carter Glass, who is also a newspaper man, was a guest of honor, as was ex-Governor Trinkle, and other notables in the public, business and industrial life of the state.

Young Mr. Fishburn, who is an outstanding figure in southern journalism, is also the publisher of the Roanoke World, the afternoon newspaper. Few men in the profession have made so marked a success at his age. He is a newspaper man to-the-manner-born, loves his work, keeps industrially at it, and enjoys the personal esteem of his fellowcitizens—city, and state. His newspaper reflects his ability and energy.

There is an inspiring lesson in his unwillingnes to leave his duties as a journalist to accept public office. Newspaper men can always serve best and be most useful, if not entangled by personal political aspiration.

THE SAVANNAH NEWS.

Herschel V. Jenkins, prominent business man of Savannah, has acquired the controlling stock in the Savannah News company and will on Monday be elected to the presidency of that organization. He will retire from the Central of Georgia railroad, with which he has been connected in an official capacity for many years, and devote himself exclusively to The News, as its publisher.

Members of the newspaper fraternity in Georgia will extend the hand of cordial welcome to him.

Mr. Jenkins' entry into the fraternity becomes the more unique because of his lack of former newspaper experience. He will devote his personal energies largely to the business management, and his long and successful business record will assure for him eminent success in his new activity. It is understood there will be no changes in the present editorial staff, with Roy Neal editor; D. G. Bickers, associate editor, and J. P. Miller, news editor.

The Morning News is one of the oldest and most substantial daily newspapers in the southeast. It occupies a modern home, completed shortly before the death of Frank Bell. It has a reputation for reliability that is nation-wide, and deserved. It is progressive without being radical. It is sound in its policies, and there is no cleaner newspaper in the south, nor one with a more enviable history.

To the new publisher The Constitution extends greetings and good wishes.

PHILIPPINE POLICY.

The announced policy of President Coolidge to extend the autonomy now granted to the Philippine natives, and to withdraw the military government at the earliest possible moment consistent with America's good faith in protecting the best interests of the archipelago, ought to meet with general approval.

If the plan is made official so that the Filipino leaders may understand that it is more than a gesture, it is entirely probable that the existing breach between the administrative officers in Manila and the native government, which includes the legislative and judiciary branches, may be healed.

It is quite important that this should be done. As the situation stands there is a lack of cooperation, and a lack of government coordination, that is not only disturbing to the people of the Philippines, causing civil unrest and apprehension, but it is destructive to the continued material development of the islands.

Governor-General Wood is not to blame. His administration has been marked by a progress in education, civilization, agriculture, industry and economics, that had not seemed possible when he took up the duties. He has been cooperative with natives to a most encouraging extent, and has gradually replaced American officials with natives. In round numbers, 97 per cent of all the office holders in the Philippines are natives.

At the same time this government is honor bound to establish a complete native sovereignty as quickly as the people are capable of self government, and that time seems to be near at hand. By this the Philippine voters would elect their own executive.

It is the president's plan to maintain a protecting vigil over the islands the same as this government maintains over Cuba under the existing treaty, and the provisions of the Platt amendment.

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

The Mood of a Nation.

Nations, like individuals, have their moods, and these moods differ so widely that we wonder sometimes if they can represent the same individual, or the same nation. So, it would be just as wrong to judge a nation by any one mood, as it would be to make a definition of an individual, expressed in some particular mood.

I have just finished reading President Coolidge's annual message to congress. It is so cool and complaisant, smug and self-satisfied. As I laid the paper down the question forced itself upon me: "Does he speak for America?" And the answer also is forced upon me: "Yes," that is America now. But there came to me, in revealing comfort, the faith that this is only one mood fo America. One could not say that Calvin Coolidge is popular with the American people. People could not cheer Mr. Coolidge. His name, or voice, or features, cannot arouse one throb of enthusiasm, nor enlist one degree of passionate loyalty. And yet, an overwhelming majority of the people will vote for Mr. Coolidge. Indeed, if it were not for the hold which old parties still have on many people, the election of Mr. Coolidge would be almost unanimous. Why? Because, in the present mood of the American people, Mr. Coolidge is an almost perfect expression of the prosperous, self-satisfied, well-fed, well-clothed, America.

Why Worry?

Consider these sentences from the message of President Coolidge:

"It is because of our historical detachment, and the generations of comparative indifference toward us by other nations, that our public is inclined to consider altogether too seriously the reports that we are criticized abroad. We never had a larger foreign trade than at the present time. Our good offices were never more sought. And the necessity for our assistance and cooperation was never more universally declared in any time of peace. When we consider the real sacrifice that will be necessary on the parts of other nations, considering all their circumstances, to meet their agreed payments, we ought to hold them in increased admiration and respect. It is true that we have extended to them very generous treatment, but it is also true that they have agreed to repay us all that we loaned to them, and some interest."

Spirit of a Crusade.

Now, read these sentences from the message of another American president, not quite ten years ago:

"We are glad, now that we see the facts with no veil of false pretense about them, to fight thus for the ultimate peace of the world and for the liberation of its peoples, the German peoples included; for the rights of nations, great and small, and the privilege of men everywhere to choose their way of life and of obedience. The world must be made safe for democracy; its peace must be planted upon tested foundations of political liberty.

"We have no selfish ends to serve. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when those rights have been made as secure, as the faith and the freedom of the nations can make them.

"To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth, and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other."

One might well ask, which is the real America? The answer is, that both utterances truthfullly represent two startlingly contrasted moods of the same nation. When we attempt to account for the difference in these moods, the answer is not simple but exceedingly difficult. The conditions of the world are obviously very different, but, it seems to me, the difference is only superficial. When Mr. Wilson spoke for America, civilization was in need of a champion upon a field of battle, and America was answering a challenge to heroic sacrifice. But today the world needs, and needs so desperately, a champion in the arena of peace. The question forces itself: "Is there not an America today, sleeping beneath the weight of its wealth, anaesthetized by luxurious self-indulgence, which could be awakened by that same challenge to heroic self-sacrifice, if made in the interest of the peace and good will of mankind?

Everyday Questions

ANSWERED BY

Do you think that two people who have known each other all their lives should marry? Is it not possible for a man and woman to be so well acquainted that if they marry they will grow stale in their relationships, whereas a couple who have been acquainted a comparatively short period of time and who married would be a constant source of vivacious and novel companionship?

The fact that you have known each other for years ought to be an advantage rather than a disadvantage. Husband and wife get to know each other after a time, but in your case there is the gain of a long and satisfactory previous acquaintance. You would not be so likely to expect the impossible of each other, and the same face at the breakfast table each morning would not have the terrors for you which it inspires in some couples contemplating or practicing matrimony.

Providence, R. I.

Bishop Stires recently stated that the morale of our women is lower today than it ever was.

When I see our young girls walking the streets and sitting in restaurants, cafes and cabarets smoking and drinking, I feel that it is a serious situation and agree with the bishop.

I'm not prudish, but what is there sweeter than a wholesome young girl? Today they are too few and far between. I grant they are smarter and more clever than girls once were, but if education takes away their refinement and injures their morals, I say less education.

How has this change come about in our young women and what can be done to remedy the situation?

Education is not solely to blame for the objectionable features in the behavior of some types of girls today. It is also true that certain forms of knowledge and social practices contain dangers for immature minds, but these are often the risks of growth.

It would require many columns to give an adequate account of the ideas which have the most motive power among young girls of our time. I have space to speak only of one or two. Take those represented by the words repression and expression. We have had a dead set against repression, engineered chiefly by the psychoanalysts, and a consequent advocacy of expression. But things are not as easy as all that. When the young ladies have had three months of vigorous "expression" they are usually weary in mind and body. Some are out of sorts or forfeit their positions because they "expressed" themselves too freely. Others have no optimism left. They draw in and balance the account by an enforced repression.

The truth is that girls especially are apt to be caught in the embrace of this ruthless rhythm.

As for remedying the situation, first they should get rid of false ideals. How utterly childish it is to be proud of having taken a drink or smoked a cigarette in a noisy restaurant or a dingy cabaret. It would be laughable if the associations were not so vulgar and potentially hazardous.

Next, let them replace a false aim by a true one. Instead of all leisure time being given to gayety, why cannot some of it be spent in higher social or intellectual undertakings and forms of recreation. Membership in local societies insuring this result is to be recommended and if such societies do not exist the older people ought to organize them.

But methods for the elevation of character are empty devices unless the heart is behind them. Its natural stimulus is within the home, where too many domestic conditions are injurious to the symmetrical and sensible development of girlhood. When several hundred parents were recently asked to devote three nights a week to their children, 30 per cent declined the overture.

Last, but not least, are you quite sure that our maidenhood is not on its way after a stormy interval to a more real and broadly based womanhood? I incline to this view, although I admit that the sights which depress you are too numerous for one's complacency.

Where was God before He created Heaven and earth?

So far as we know, He was then where He is now, pervading His universe, whether in forms created or uncreated.

It is surprising how often such questions are asked, despite the fact that those who ask them are beating their wings against the irremovable barriers of human thought.

The human mind is so constituted that it cannot think except in terms of time and space. The questioner is therefore recommended to the study of a compact history of philosophy, from which he can learn more fully the nature of the problem he propounds. It suffices to say that it has engaged the attention of the best equipped philosophers in all ages.

And Then There Is the "G. P. U."

To the casual reader Russia seems a government by initials. There is the Tz. I. K., the M. O. P. R. and, most potent of all to the average Russian citizen, the mysterious long arm of the G. P. U.

Junius B. Wood, in a communication to the National Geographic society describing "Russia of the Hour," writes:

"The G. P. U., a name formed from the first letters of its long Russian title, is not a new institution, merely a new name, in Russia. It is the successor of the okhrana under the tsar, with its 40,000 to 50,000 farmers and a smaller number of paid agents permeating every class of society. The cheka of the revolution was a transition between the two.

A System That Russia Knows.

"The scope has been enlarged by uniformed ranks of police and soldiers. Such a surveillance, with its absolute power, is a system with which the Russian has long been familiar.

"'Where's Ivan Ivanovitch? I saw him last night,' may be a question at the afternoon tea.

"'Lubianka,' is the awed whisper.

"The answer is perfectly clear. Ivan 'sits,' the vernacular for being in jail, in Lubianka, the 'imposing Moscow building which formerly was an insurance company's offices, the red clock of which now glows through the night over Lubianka square, the dreaded preliminary jail and headquarters of the G. P. U.

"Just what Ivan has done to get himself within the clutches of the law is usually a surmise, even among his closest friends. However, it is quite certain that the G. P. U. has some information. The arrest is not a haphazard happening.

"He may have been peculating with government or cooperative funds in his charge, smuggling in violation of the foreign trade monopoly, leading a private life which was not exemplary, or indulging in activities which did not contribute to the stability of the government.

When Curiosity Is Restrained.

"However, the scene enacted during the hours he was supposed to be peacefully sleeping in his home is a familiar picture. Around 1 o'clock in the morning a chugging motor truck has stopped in front of the building where he and possibly his family have a room. Other tenants may have been awakened, but they do not open doors or stick their heads out of windows when a motor chugs in front at that hour of the morning. Their curiosity is bridled until the truck is gone and the building has a tenant less.

"The detail, usually two agents and two policemen, enters Ivan's apartment. There is no rough work unless the host starts it. The visitors are polite, but firm and thorough. In fact, they are so meticulous that usually they express regret to other members of the family for the necessity of disturbing them, and present a paper for their signature to prove that the proceedings have been conducted courteously.

No Explanations Given.

"Few questions are asked, but the search is painstaking. Pages of books are ruffled, clothes are examined, as are carpets, furniture, pictures on the wall, even the heating ducts. Such documents as are pertinent or which they do not have time to read are taken along. Ivan goes with them.

"The news of the arrest is not in the newspapers the following day and no explanation is asked from the G. P. U., nor would one be given if it were.

"In a few days Ivan may be back among his friends, possibly having been merely suspected of something serious because he was too garrulous. More likely he will 'sit' in silence in Lubianka, and the first word to the outside will be that he has been transferred to Butyrki, a prison where relatives can call and exchange a few words with him through an iron grille."

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Will Southern Prosperity and Power Be Smothered by Surplus Cotton?

The catastrophic drop in the price of cotton has reduced enormously the purchasing power of 30,000,000 people in the cotton producing states. Farmers who grow cotton at an average cost of 18 cents a pound cannot, by selling it around 12 cents, do much business with the stores, the automobile agencies, the machinery and implement men, and various recreational enterprises.

A lean farmer lengthens his leanness down all the lines of trade. His profits oil the engines of enterprise; his poverty puts ratchets to their wheels.

These fish-bone facts are sticking in the throats of the business men of the nation as, perhaps, never before. That is why manufacturers and distributors of commercial wares are flocking here to Washington in the wake of the congress and pleading that some means be found to stabilize the production and the prices of the staple crop, the money-maker and the builder of the buying power of the south.

The New England industries in general, the middlemen and importers of all the eastern ports, the mills, foundries and factories of the midwest are all joining in the petition, for their prosperities are vitally interwoven with those of the south and especially dependent upon a profit price of cotton.

Heroic Treatment Needed.

These profoundly interested people are telling administration and congressional leaders that the cotton industries, including every one who touches the staple from the smallest grower to the largest exporter of finished goods, are national in extent and importance. To treat this cotton situation as solely a southern planter's crisis is to proceed upon a monstrously erroneous conception. One of the most important mill men in New Bedford, Massachusetts, told a congressional leader yesterday, in my presence, that "whatever it may cost the government to restore the southern profits the people of the whole nation can well afford to pay!"

He cited the registered fact that in the past three years the cotton planted area in the south has increased by over 10,000,000 acres and the annual crop has increased by over 8,000,000 bales. All that has come to pass since the harvest of 1923.

The average price of middling in New York in 1923 was 29.40 and the total value of the crop was $1,571,815,000.

This year the average price of middling in New York in 12.40 to date and the estimated total value of the crop is $1,116,000,000.

By that calculation the cotton growers of this year's crop are figured to be nearly half a billion dollars poorer than were those of 1923. So it is no wonder that they are short of buying power.

The Pivot of the Problem.

Everybody who is interested in stabilizing the cotton growing industry knows that the crux of the matter is the reduction of acreage and harvest. Any other treatment must necessarily be transient, partial and uncertain in effects.

But how is that needed reduction to be obtained and kept upon a ratio that will equalize supply with demand?

To suggest that the millions of cotton growers in the south, including self-farmers, renters and croppers on shares, con be compactly organized and brought to agreement on acreage and output is to chase a rainbow. It simply cannot be done. The small farmer whose family bellies are fed by his possible bales will never "join up."

There are authorities that contend that icreasing credits to the cotton growers to carry over their surplus is an aggravation of the situation. They have had too much credit already and that is why we have a 7,000,000 bales surplus in sight. More credit means more debt and more strenuous efforts to pay out by growing more cotton next year.

Cooperative marketing by voluntary association is a regional remedy only and can easily fail through the competition of non-cooperators in either adjacent or remote areas.

The federal department of agriculture has no practical remedy in its repertoire. It is afraid to suggest any such, if it conceives one, for fear the wheat and corn, the cattle and hog people will demand to share in the relief.

Let the Surplus Surfeit Them.

A southern senator from a valley state, discussing the cotton problem, said:

"During the summer campaign I traveled all over my state and talked with many hundreds of our cotton farmers and general storekeepers. They were all worried over this cotton situation, but scarcely one of them could suggest any sensible, feasible plan for curing their troubles. I have almost reached the conclusion that the surest remedy is to let them go on their way until debt and want teach them to change that way for a wiser and profitable one."

That is too pessimistic. The end of that policy in the south would be the condition we were in when Lee and Johnston surrendered in 1865.

The members from the southern states have come back to this session of the congress fully impressed that there must be some practical legislation here to handle a $700,000,000 cotton surplus. If they are forced by legislative circumstances to combine with the western farm bloc and challenge a reluctant administration with an adequate farm relief measure, why they will do that. The political objections to a south-and-west alliance will be overborne by the economic necessity for it.

That combination would compel President Coolidge to make good on his butter-words of sympathy with the distressed farmers, or force him into the open with his policy of cheap food and raw cotton for the mill workers of the east.

The Lankford Proposition.

Since its introduction and since they have read its provisions some of the prominent southern representatives are giving Congressman Lankford's bill for the creation of a federal cotton corporation their serious consideration. The corporatoin would be after the order of the war finance corporation. It would have ample capital and credit at its command to finance a normal crop, predetermined each year, and to stabilize a price for good middling cotton of 22 cents per pound. If the market price, because of a short crop or an active demand, should go above that price the corporation would have no purchases to make and could unload its accumulated stock at a profit for the redemption of its securities.

The plan is sure to receive the careful study of all those who are concerned in farm relief legislation and it may in the end be found the most promising proposition for handling the cotton phases of the agricultural problem.

The most general opinion here among southern members is that the acreage in 1927 should be cut down at least 30 per cent—anyhow, as much as 25 per cent. A crop next fall of not more than 12,000,000 bales would mean a highly profitable price for both the new crop and the carry over. But none of those who so believe can figure how the reduced acreage can be assured. Who can?

Time Has Come When the South Must Diversify Crops

(From The Country Gentleman.)

Cotton was in a strong position at the end of the cotton year, July 31, 1925, when the carry-over was down to 1,353,514 bales. By the exercise of judgment in planting it could have been kept in a strong position. But the 1924, 1925 and 1926 plantings showed the acreage jumping three and four millions a year. By the end of the last cotton year, July 31, 1926, the carry-over had moved up to 3,342,560 bales—more than a comfortable quantity even without this year's heavy surplus being added to it.

These facts were well known at each stage of their development. For two years it has been apparent that more cotton was being grown than the world could take. So, too, it was well known that cotton acreage was expanding rapidly on the western range of the cotton belt as new and cheaper-producing lands were being brought in. Year by year Texas increased its acreage from 10,900,000 acres in 1921 to 18,948,000 this season; Oklahoma from 2,300,000 to 5,160,000 this year. The cotton trinity of the old belt—the country banker, the supply merchant and the landlord—shook their heads over this rising competition in the west—but went ahead financing the planting of as much cotton as ever.

Now the usual swearing-off process is on. A 25 per cent cut in acreage is being demanded. Whatever the effect of these resolutions, a reduction in both acreage and crop is certain to come next year. The pinch of circumstances, if nothing else, will attend to that.

But after that what? Is the old story of chasing prices with acreage to be repeated all over again?

Dominance in an industry goes with low cost of production. Texas averages 3.3 horsepower per farm worker, Oklahoma 4.3. The contour of the land, more individual farm ownership, less necessity for chopping cotton, with none at all in west Texas, a larger dependence on seasonal labor for picking—all allow the western cotton grower to use more machine and animal power and to handle much larger acreage. Then, too, the boll weevil, because of differing climatic conditions, is less of a hazard, or is absent altogether, as in west Texas.

Texas and Oklahoma now produce around 40 per cent of the total cotton crop. Their proportion is more likely to increase than otherwise, for there are still several million more acres adapted to cotton growing in west Texas waiting to be brought into production.

Except for certain individuals and localities favorably circumstanced to produce cotton in large volume or of a premium quality at relatively low cost, the old south should reduce its reliance on cotton as far and as fast as possible. It has many splendid climatic advantages for the production of other agricultural commodities. It falls far short of supplying its own food and feed needs, annually paying out to other sections for these articles a sum fully equal to the value of its cotton crop. It has rapidly developing industrial resources, which will mean larger markets near at hand for other products than cotton.

More than in any other section the financial and business interests of the south control agricultural operations. They should concern themselves with bringing these other opportunities into action, with setting up facilities for the financing and marketing of crops other than cotton, with helping their agriculture to make a gradual shift into safer and more profitable lines.

And, a better marketing plan failing to appear, they should lend all possible support to the cooperatives so that these may secure a sign-up of cotton growers that will allow them to be a real factor in the marketing of the crop. Their contracts expire with this year's crop. It is imperative that they go on.

A sharp and permanent cut in cotton acreage will meet with opposition. The cry will be raised that a large export surplus is needed to maintain the national trade balance. The answer is that it is better to lose our trade balance than to keep it at such a cost. There is no place in the American system for a "misery crop," a title which cotton long ago earned.

LONGSWORTH LOOMS AS REPUBLICAN PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE

Picking of a Candidate Is Likely To Consume Much of Congress' Time

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, December 11.—(Special Correspondence.)—At the beginning of this session of congress, as is the custom, the republicans gave out a program of legislation they propose to consider and pass. The democratic leaders gave out an analogous program they propose to bring up. These programs are a conformance to custom and a response to the demand of correspondents for something definite rather than schedules meant to be lived up to. At the end of this session, as at the end of every session, a comparison of these preliminary programs, with the legislation actually passed or considered, will reveal how much the programs are at the mercy of conditions, how little they reflect any compelling urge in the hearts of senators and members as a whole.

Actually the programs omit the one topic that is most in the minds of congressmen and senators at a session like the present one, which is on the eve of events that will determine presidential nominations. In the cloakrooms of congress there will be more private talk about who is to be the republican nominee and who the democratic nominee than there will be public talk in the senate and house about pending legislation. Senator Moses, when he was on his way from New Hampshire to Washington after his reelection, was interviewed in New York about what the session would do, and said in effect that the senate would give more thought to presidential nominations than to any legislation, that senators would make their speeches and take their positions with relation to the coming presidential nomination and that in the senate there would be ninety-six candidates for one or the other of the two party nominations.

The last clause about every senator being a candidate was one of those impish exaggerations which the pungent New Hampshire senator occasionally uses to carry home the perfectly true point he is making. There will not be ninety-six candidates for the coming presidential nominations in the senate, but there will be quite a few. Also those senators who are not candidates will be partisans and planners for those who are. And in the sense which Senator Moses probably had in mind, the sense that practically every senator thinks about the presidency, if not this time then some future time—in the sense that hardly any man can get as high as the United States senate without having quiet moments of reflection in which he speculates about himself in relation to the presidency—in that sense Senator Moses' figure was no great exaggeration.

The cloakroom gossip of the republicans begins, of course, with the question: What is Mr. Coolidge going to do? That for the republicans is the beginning and the end of all things. Until they know the president's mind about another nomination they cannot go much further in their own speculations. Whichever republican leader first knows on dependable authority whether Mr. Coolidge wants or does not want another nomination will have a flying start toward charting his own future course. The man who can answer that question can have the attentive ear of each individual senator, and all of them collectively, at any time.

So far, obviously, there is only one man who can answer it, and he doesn't. Republican leaders go to the white house on errands, sometimes in good faith, sometimes ostensibly. On all occasions the really vigilant parts of their minds are focused on grasping any faintest hint of Mr. Coolidge's intentions that may appear in his words, inferences from his words, in his countenance or in his manner.

Congress would be the last body to which Mr. Coolidge would reveal his intentions. If he postpones the making up of his mind or postpones the announcement after his mind is made up to as late a date as possible the reason and the justification will lie partly in his relation to congress. To congress a president who may continue to be president for several years is one thing; a president known to be about to cease to be president is quite another thing. President Coolidge is quite tepid in his disposition to try to get congress to pass legislation he desires. He, more than most presidents, is content to go his way and let congress go its way. Nevertheless, every president has some things he desires, and to abrogate his own power to confer reciprocal favors is to give up most of his hope of bringing pressure or persuasion to bear on congress.

Accepting because they must be condition that for the present all their gossiping and planning must be speculative, members of the lower house talk about Speaker Longworth. Longworth himself does not talk about himself in relation to the presidency except when some episode forces him to adopt the protective coloration of the jocularity that is his frequent manner. Longworth does not make the impression of a man of eager ambition, although beneath the surface he necessarily must have had a good deal of steadiness of purpose and of willingness to work in order to remain in congress continuously (excepting one term of two years) since 1903 and to have risen to the office which is the highest congress can confer and the third highest in the government. Longworth has conquered a good many handicaps. He is wealthy—his family has been for generations among the rich of Cincinnati—and wealth is one kind of handicap. Wealth must tempt a man with distractions. On any one of the days when Longworth was spend sweaty hours in congress, long summer sessions when the heat of Washington is a burden, long days of snarling about petty points of parliamentary procedure, long sessions on committees, listening to dreary data and windy arguments about the tariff—on any one of the days Longworth has spent that way he could have been, if he had so chosen, at any one of the places where wealth finds ease and pleasure. He could have put his inherited wealth in any of those trust companies which organized society provides for the purpose; he could have rid himself of every material responsibility, even the responsibility of collecting his income, and he could have followed the seasons from Deauville to the Riviera and to Florida.

Many men, let us admit, would have preferred that (or if not that, then some other individual conception of a pleasant pursuit) rather than the boring business of keeping long, fixed hours in congress and the vicissitudes of politics, including the necessity of getting one's self reelected every two years. Service in congress is one of the few careers in which a man, no matter how able, must solicit a new engagement from his employer every two years, in which a man faces the possibility of professional death every other summer. It is the only career, also, in which the employer does not always look on good service as the sole test, in which the employer makes his decision on the basis of a whim as often as on the basis which in the case of other employers is universal.

Congressmen realize these aspects of their careers better than any one else. That is why they so often pay an added respect to a rich man like Longworth when, as in Longworth's case, the rich man is not in politics merely for the sake of a ribbon to put on his coat, but actually works as hard as any other congressman, and harder than most.

To some other types of rich man congress is quite accustomed: A rich man of the sort who has made his own money, going to congress partly as an honor and partly to look out for the interests of his industry—that is not uncommon. Another type, the rich young man who goes to congress for a term or two, partly for distinction, partly as a stunt, like playing polo—that happens occasionally.

But Longworth was a rich young man who came to congress, and came again, and stayed. Not only stayed, but worked, spent his days in his seat and most laboriously in his committee room—made it a career of which his speakership is now the appropriate flowering. For the hard work he did Longworth could have had no extraneous motive, no motive except an inner urge within his spirit—the career for the career's sake.

Other congressmen respect that. Other congressmen who are not rich, some of whom stay in politics for various motives of self-interest, ask themselves whether they would stick to the routine of congress if they had Longworth's wealth and the command of leisure, the freedom to choose vocation and avocation which wealth affords. Other congressmen have times and moods in which they ask themselves that question and are candid enough to answer no. Consequently if a wealthy congressman has qualities that makes a good congressman and a good politician, including the important quality of at least reasonable devotion to the work of congress—in such cases other congressmen give an added touch of respect to their wealthy fellow member. They have a different attitude toward another type of wealthy man in politics.

Other careers must have allured Longworth as a youth. He plays the violin, plays it in the way that involves both native talent and hard early training. One feels he might readily have had a career in music. Playing the violin is, however, the only thing about the outward Longworth that suggests the artistic temperament. In all the respects in which observers judge a man Longworth is as far as possible from the artist. He is indeed rather hard-boiled and most conspicuously a man's man. (One wonders if Longworth's hard-boiled quality may be the reaction that came with some early deliberate decision to renounce all impulses toward the softer arts? Modern psychologists have such explanations for this sort of phenomena.) In Longworth's speeches there is no faintest touch of art. In his associations he is at home with the plainest. Possibly there may be something of the artist in Longworth's capacity to judge other men, in his insight into other men's personalities. Longworth has that quality strongly—it is one of the cornerstones of his success in politics.

Longworth is at once a plain personality and a complex one. Few would call him subtle, yet some of his political cronies must be puzzled a little about the part of Longworth that retires to his home in the evenings—some of the evenings at least—and plays the violin. Some might understand his playing the fiddle, which would be like Joe Cannon, but be puzzled by the violin and the particular kind of thing Longworth plays—sonatas, obligatos, arias—things from Chopin, Meyerbeer, Pagliacci. That recondite taste in music is only one of what must have been Longworth's rather numerous handicaps in becoming "the most popular man in congress," as he is described.

(It is an odd coincidence that the man who presides over the lower house, Longworth, and the man who presides over the senate, Vice President Dawes, are both musicians—the word is used in the sense that goes with classic music, not merely enjoyment of the fiddle.)

Longworth's marriage to the daughter of a president, Theodore Roosevelt, taking place at a time (1905) when Roosevelt was in the white house and at the height of his power—that also might have been a handicap to Longworth. He might have been looked upon as the political equivalent of a "squaw man," a term meant to imply lack of complete approval, sometimes used for white men who marry Indian women. Longworth could readily have been that, could have used his powerful connections for leverage and his own wealth for the lubricant of campaign contributions, and could have spent his life in one kind of public career much less sweaty than congress—being secretary to the embassy at Paris—and that sort o fthing, the "cookie-pusher" of diplomacy, Hugh Gibson called them. In fact Longworth owes no obligation to his Roosevelt connection, but does owe his one defeat to it. That was in 1912, when Longworth was retired for two years as a result of the progressive party split that Roosevelt led.

Longworth stands squarely on the bottom of his own personality. He is "Nick" to the roughneck congressmen from the stockyard districts of the big cities; to the farmer democrats of the southwest as much as to his Harvard classmates. He doesn't get that universal "Nick" through mere easygoing joviality. He is quietly jovial, in the way that is rarely the life of the party but rather the balance wheel of it. He can tell stories like the one about the two bankers visiting New Orleans, who in a moment of artificially magnified vision found themselves beneficiaries of the friendly companionship of an amiable tiger. But Longworth's is not a case of shallow joviality nor obtrusive gayety—far from that.

A very unusual personality, Longworth. Reams have been written about him. Most of it has been accurate, so far as surface facts go, and some of it has been penetrating. The best picture of Longworth I have read was one by William Hard. Hard saw two aspects in Longworth's personality.

"Longworth is inwardly aesthetic, sensitive, impressionable, and thereupon impressioned, fixed, inflexible. Outwardly he is worldly, tough fibered, rough languaged, careless, accepting, accommodating. Under his skin he is pretty nearly Washington's feelingest human being and knowingest, exactingest politician. He is full bodied, florid, stanchly and stubbornly sturdy, with nothing gone of his youth except hair from his head. He has both irreverence toward others and humility about himself. He comes into a room in the evening time, jesting, gibing, slapping greatness on the cheek, diminishing his own greatness with laughter to the lowest visibility. On Sunday mornings he puts on a heavy sweater and does many miles of walking (often with Senator Wadsworth, of New York), and comes back weighing a few pounds less. "His victuals nourish him." He puts on pounds, and takes off pounds. There is nothing the matter with what new-fangled persons would call his metabolism or what old-fashioned persons would call his nutrition—or his stomach. He never asks anybody in Washington to support him for anything. He just keeps on being amazingly industrious in working hours and incredibly playful in off-time hours; and people come and snatch him from play into honor. Now, nobody can tell how high the highest honor may be that he may come to."

Not the whole of Longworth is in that extract, nor in this article, nor in all that has been written about him. It is safe to say the whole of him is all right. The associates and rivals and friends that have watched him for years may lack the gifts of words and analysis, but the certain thing is they like him and approve him—like him in the way a man ought to be liked.

If Longworth himself entertains ambition to leap one step and go to the highest office in the country he conceals it with humorous indifference.

And yet such an attitude on Longworth's part toward his own further elevation would be only a part of his habitual manner about most things. In him an air of indifference, an impression of being easygoing, is a part of his art of getting things accomplished in the particular arena where he finds himself, rather than any reflection of his real self. To refuse to get heated up is an essential part of the strong hold Longworth has on his fellow members.

If Longworth were sitting in the speaker's chair and if a communist revolution were to sweep up Pennsylvania avenue led by Trotzky, Longworth would greet the usurper with a, "Well, old sport, what's it all about—by the way, your tie's come undone." Everybody thinks of Longworth as imperturbable, and that world clearly belongs with him. But with it goes, one may suspect, an extremely unusual psychic understanding of other men's personalities. Possibly the combination, which is very unusual, may be one of the sources of Longworth's strength and popularity.

With perfect truth you can call Longworth, as William Hard puts it, "aesthetic, sensitive and impressionable." That's the violin-playing part of him. Then you can with equal truth describe him as sturdy, solid, rather inflexible. That is one thing his democratic rivals in leadership like and respect in him. He says "no" and he means "no" he says "yes" and he stays "yes." His decisiveness is no less decisive and no less liked, from the fact that his way of saying both "no" and "yes" is merely different shadings of the same grunt—a B-minor grunt for yes, and B-flat for no, so to speak—a method of communication which is another personality than Longworth's would cause his associates and adversaries to detest him.

When occasion calls for it he takes strong positions, says "yes" firmly, or "no" with equal firmness—to be speaker he is obliged to. But he always does it with a kind of grave frankness. Last year, when the republican leaders decided that the insurgent La Follette republicans in the senate and house must be excommunicated from their respective party organizations, Longworth carried out his portion of the official responsibility put upon him more successfully than the republican senate leaders. The house insurgents were disciplined to the same degree as the senate republicans. But those in the house had less resentment than those in the Senate. It was said of Longworth's part in the excommunication of the insurgents that "He kiddied them out," and they harbored no personal rancor.

Among the forces that makes presidential nominations Longworth is the beneficiary of that one which is the most direct. The republican members of the lower house know him and like him. He is their man. With Longworth in the white house every congressman would have the agreeable feeling of being able to call the president by his nickname.

Each of these congressmen is, in nearly all cases, the center of national politics in his district. These congressmen in the aggregate have more power in the selecting of delegates to nominating conventions than any other one group.

Not only members of the present congress, but exmembers. In the years Longworth has been in congress many hundred of congressmen must have come, made Longworth's acquaintance and gone home. Ex-congressmen pile up rather rapidly through the country. In the present house there are but five who were there when Longworth first came.

All these ex-congressmen regard Longworth as one of their fraternity. Each of them is likely to be powerful in the politics of his community. At the word that there is a possibility of nominating Longworth they would leap into the game with joy. In the aggregate they could readily determine a majority of the personnel of a republican national convention.

Throw Open the Gates!

and let in the Industries that need what ATLANTA Offers

HUNDREDS of concerns sorely need what Atlanta has to offer them. Shall we tell them about it? Shall we open the gates and let them in? Or shall we keep silence—and let them go to other cities in the South?

You must decide.

This week—Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday—you will have to decide whether your business and your city are important enough to warrant a proportionate investment in Forward Atlanta.

There isn't any question of what the million dollar advertising fund can do, or will do. That has been amply demonstrated in the past ten months, by the arrival of 136 new concerns who were brought here by advertising, and who will disburse annually from now on more than seven millions of extra dollars.

The Dividends of the First Ten Months

In ten months advertising has brought to Atlanta 136 new concerns. $7,309,250 of new annual payrolls. 4,630 Atlantans and newcomers have been given better jobs, increased spending power.

In addition, the advertising has interested many hundreds of executives in all parts of the country, whose interest has not yet crystallized into action—and we must continue to put Atlanta's story before these men if we hope to bring their concerns here.

If ten months have brought so much, what may we expect over three years with a million dollar investment?

And you get your share of those seven million dollars. You will get your share of the other millions that will come in if Atlanta's selling campaign goes on.

When a committee calls on you Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday, be ready to make your investment. Be prepared to assume your just share of the million dollars that is to tell Atlanta's story to the world over a three year period.

Invest your share. Let your investment be a sign to all Atlanta that you are a big shareholder in the city, that your standing is high, and that you have the vision to invest money to make your share grow

The fund is to be called for at regular intervals over the three year period, so that you will not be asked to make the three-year investment all at this time. You can put Atlanta very literally on your payroll.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

David Freedman, author of "Mendel Marantz" (Harper's), which is soon to be produced by Eddie Cantor on Broadway. Mr. Freedman has been called the greatest Jewish humorist since "Sholom Aleichem." He was born and raised and educated in the Ghetto of New York.

NEW FICTION.

Little Mrs. Mannington. By Cecil Roberts, author of "Scissors," "The Love Rack," etc. This brilliant novelist places his heroine, who was born on a Texas ranch, in a brilliant setting in London and in the political world. It is a strong, dramatic story which is presented by two representatives—America and England—and it can be said that both countries are well represented. (Doran, New York.)

The Chariot of Fire. By Bernard De Voto, author of "The Crooked Mile," etc. The background is typical of the western frontier. "Ohio Boggs," a native of a little Ohio town perhaps a hundred years old, was called the village drunkard. He made his living on the banks of the river. During an old-fashioned camp meeting it was rumored that he had "got" religion, and that he was going to build a place of worship in the wilderness, or, in this instance, out on the open prairie; that he had received a message in which it was revealed to him that he must be a new prophet and establish a new faith.

The picture so cleverly drawn of this new leader by the author and of the new religion, of its rise and fall, and its final tragedy is very impressive. All through the story like a winding silver thread is the love story of a girl who becomes one of his most enthusiastic followers. The story is an old, old story when it comes to the foundation and yet in many instances the reader will find himself applying it to America and to this century. Price $2.50. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

King Koshawk and the Birds. By Eimar O'Duffy. This story sounds like a fairy tale, for it starts out this way: "One upon a time there was a philosopher who lived in a little room in a tumbledown house in a back lane. The American wheat king bought up all the songbirds in the world and proposed to 'cage' them—this made the philosopher very mad—first, for caging the birds, and next for charging a fee to hear them sing." The story is intensely interesting. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

The Penfold Adventure. A stirring story of the sea, by Ralph D. Paine, which has all the color of romance and adventure and readers who like sea stories will find it interesting from the first chapter to the last. It is the story of the Nautilus which, after being overhauled, was refitted for a voyage for the Indies, the passengers consisting of Miss Penford, the owner; her beautiful niece, a Harvard supercargo; two stowaways and a Yankee crew. It was a thrilling voyage! (Houghten Mifflin Co., Boston.)

The Sun in Splendor. By Thomas Burke, whose interesting autobiography, "The Wind and the Rain," is in itself a dramatic and an emotional appeal. While yet an office boy in London, England, he wrote his first short story which was accepted—this started him on his literary career.

As a boy he knew very little of life, not much of London, for his locality meant sometimes hungry and sometimes not, of tramping the streets with different boy friends of the same type as he, of four years in an orphanage without one ray of light to tell him that the world had more sunshine in it than shadows. But, in later life, he learned that there was still another side of London, for he played Mayfair, lunched at exclusive Pall Mall clubs. During which time he learned life with all its realism.

The author is a great story writer—his short stories proved acceptable—and in his own country he is being called the modern Dickens. His story of Christopher and Connie—two children of the London slums—like all strong characters, rise above their environment, and through its dramatic and swift action there are times when it appeals, entertains, causes a smile, but, all in all, it is a wonderful, strong story in which a real story-teller has woven some bright as well as dull threads from Life's loom. (George H. Doran, New York. Price $2.50.)

The Mad Busman. By the author of "Black Harvest," "The Dark Horse," etc., is Ida M. Wylie, whose name has become familiar through the pages of the current magazines and on the covers of popular books. This work is a most attractive collection of stories by a very well-known author. (Doran's Book.)

The Varanoff Tradition. By Oliver Pandourne, with jacket design by Ethel M. Rockey. The story of the tradition of the Varanoffs is woven around the miniature of a princess which had been stolen from an exiled Russian prince. It is a stirring modern romance of the former Russian court. (McRae-Smith Co., Philadelphia.)

The West Virginian. By H. E. Danford, who from the very beginning plunges his reader into a vortex of plot and counterplot. The exciting story of the adventures of Bob Montgomery in the mine war at Mingo, is both thrilling and exciting. There is not a dull page in the book, but always plenty of action. (Harold Vinal, publisher.)

Mad Rapture. By Elizabeth Irons Folsom, is truly a study of the young woman who finds nothing but the pleasure of a day in life. It is a dramatic story. (Macaulay, New York.)

The Entertaining Angel is a story of life, love and laughter. It is a story of romance, a moving romance for the players in it are a man and a woman who have leading parts in a theatrical caravan that goes from town to town. The story is by Samuel Merwin, of whom it is said, "throughout thi joyous story are 25 of the most charming pictures that ever pleased a reader." (J. H. Sears & Co., New York.)

Candles' Beams is a collection of short stories published by Benziger Brothers, which are beautifully pictured by Father Francis J. Finn, S. J. The stories are all appealing but "Round Christmas Footlights" will not soon be forgotten. The little lines taken from the Merchant of Venice are quite appropriate:

"How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty

The Palm of the Hot Hand. By King Phillips, who writes of the western desert, the hunt for the treasure, the adventures experienced, and the romance which is just as true on the prairie, or in the desert, as in the beautiful states of Florida and California, or under the Italian skies of a far-away country. (A. C. McClurg & Co.)

The Hill of Happiness. By George N. Shuster, with preface by Padraic Colum. This volume contains 13 short stories and sketches of life in an American Franciscan community. It is composed of "brothers who are genuine, broad, sympathetic in their attitude towards life and in their relation to each other." The story has a delightful humor and yet it is filled with the real truths of life. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

The Two Virginites. By Herbert S. Gorman, who wrote "Gold for Gold."

Mad Rapture. By Elizabeth Irons Folso , who says her motive in writing this book is to show the contrast between the home-loving woman and the woman who lives "only to enjoy the passing day."

Marketing Deb. By Hughes Cornell, who wrote "Born Rich." It is a fascinating story of a young and thoughtless girl who joins the "Big Parade." (Macaulay's Books.)

JUNIOR BOOKS RECEIVED.

Next Door Neighbors. By Josephine Lawrence, author of "The Berry Patch," etc. The illustrations are by Clara Burd. All the young readers who enjoyed the story of the Berry family, who were called "The Berry Patch," because of the "cross-patch" disposition of the children, (not that they were ill-tempered but that they all had a little too much energy and were always busy trying to find out things) will enjoy this new book by the same writer.

It isn't always that a writer can tell pleasant things about real neighbors for they are not always agreeable, but this story is woven around three young neighbors who had just reached the age of real-fun loving. So, when a little girl with a timid look came to live with her uncle Donald, the boys said she had "no pep," and David said "what a pity she's the kind of a girl that is afraid of spiders and mice." But a real home with plenty of good food, and healthy boys and girls for companions soon made a new girl out of Marian and it was not long before she became the real leader. (Cupples & Leon Co., New York.)

Tom Martin, The Breaker Boy. By R. P. Phelps, is a most interesting story of a friendless boy who tried to make good in the hard, heartless coldmining regions. The poor boy began life in tragedy, and fate made him a friendless wanderer. But it is a good story of a boy's determination and courage and how he succeeded in making his way, and how at last he found his own people, is a story that should be read by every boy. (Cupples & Leon Co., New York.)

BOOKS FOR GIRLS.

Brenda Stays at Home. By Margaret Ashmun with frontispiece by Rhoda Chase. This is a story of a young girl who had to see the other girls leave for college. She was left behind. It was hard for Brenda to give up her girl chums and devote her time to her family. She is the example and the type which will appeal to the American girl of today. The author lived in Wisconsin and taught English at the University of Wisconsin for many years. Recently she has moved to New York state. (MacMillan's Book.)

Martha the Seventh. By Jane Abbott, author of "Barberry Gate," "Polly Put the Kettle On," and other charming stories. She has written a New England story for girls and one that will delight every girl who reads it. Somewhere up in the green hills of Vermont is Twin Farms and it is there that you will find Martha the seventh child of a seventh child who with her little freckled face and stuck-up nose has a way of making everybody like her. She is a lovely heroine and you must read the story of what she did, where she went, and the good time she had. (Lippincott's Book.)

Mary Rose, Graduate. By Mary Mabel Wirries, is another delightful book for the heroine has so many girl friends who were delighted to learn that she had been graduated from St. Angela's Academy with highest honors.

All girls, especially the big girls, will find this interesting story just the style they like—the heroine will no disappoint them, for she becomes a useful and a popular young lady as time goes on. (Benziger Brothers, New York.)

Children of the Tide. By Daniel Henderson, who writes of beach and ocean wonders. He paints a word picture of the mystery of the sea and beach creatures that has ever appealed to the young as well as the old. It is attractively illustrated. (Appleton's Book.)

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

Little Abe Lincoln. By Bernie Babcock, the charming writer of quite a number of historical books, among them being "The Soul of Ann Rutledge," "Booth and the Spirit of Lincoln," etc. The frontispiece is in colors and the illustrations are in black and white. It is not only a story for boys, but for girls also, for it tells of the early life of Lincoln and his sister Sarah.

Mrs. Babcock in her usual appealing style has written a book which has been termed "a wildwood story of joy and sorrow, of adventure and achievement." It is a true story, which adds to its interest, for it tells of the old-time candy-pulling in the country home and of the young American hunters of deer, bear, beaver and 'possum—all these with many other real descriptions of life will delight the heart of both boys and girls. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

Wisdom of the Woods. By Dan Beard, national scout commissioner, B. S. A., founder of the first Boy Scouts; author of "The American Boys," etc. With 242 illustrations by the author. The boys and girls, too, who know Dan Beard realize the vast amount of information that is contained in this book about the pleasures of the woods—it belongs to the woodcraft series, and, as Dan Beard says, "you don't have to have a wilderness trail to study woodcraft. I will show you what you can do with the trees and fields everywhere."

All this information, which is both original and practical, has already been tried out at the Dan Beard camp. It will be of special interest to anyone who loves the great out-of-doors. Price $2.50. (Lippincott's book.)

CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

The Sons of Kai. The Story the Indian Told. By Henry Boston. Pictures by Don Dickerman. The twin sons of Kai, who was a god, were stolen away from their cliff dwelling during a dreadful storm. This is the story of their fearful journey, their bravery, and how they got back to their own land at last. (MacMillan's book.)

A Mid-Century Child and Her Books. By Caroline M. Hewins, with an introduction by Anne Carroll Moore, with attractive illustrations. This is not only a delightful story of child life, but it describes the little girl of the fifties who learned to read, write and spell from quaint books which she still prizes very highly. The "mid-century" was the day of the little red schoolhouse which always had an exhibition at the close of the June term. The boo kalso includes the Peter Piper alphabet which every child learns at some time during life. (MacMillan's book.)

Statesmen of the Civil War. A Study of the Conduct of War. By Major General Sir Frederick Maurice, with illustrations. The preface says: "These studies of the relations of a prolonged war were delivered at Trinity college, Cambridge. The idea was inspired by a conversation the author of these lectures had with Lord Kitchener in 1915—not long after he had joined the headquarters in France." (Little, Brown & Co.) $3.00.

The Bugle Sounds. Life in the Foreign Legion. By Major Zinovi Pechkoff, officer of the Legion of Honor and adopted son of Maxim Gorky. With preface by Andre Maurois. The author tells the true story of the life of the world's famous military unit. He tells the story of this group of men differing in temperament, nationality, ability and equipment, but welded by a strict military discipline into a wonderful organization ready for quick military service.

The author was a soldier of the legion, and he tells of the soldier at work and at play, of who they are and the life they led, all of which will appeal to the reader. (Appleton's.) $2.50.

The Other Door. A Challenging Pic-Picture of Modern Life. By the author of "The Great World" and "The Mirrors of Downing Street." "A Gentleman With a Duster." The book is divided into three parts—Finis—The Weariness, The Fever and The Fret, and "Exit." (Doran's.)

The New Balkans. By Hamilton Fish Armstrong, managing editor "Foreign Affairs," with an introduction by Archibald Cary Coolidge, professor of history, Harvard university. The Balkan problem is most interestingly discussed. (Harper & Brothers.) Price $3.00.

THE GOLDEN AGE OF MUSIC.

My Adventures in the Golden Age of Music. By the late Henry T. Finck. This makes it of peculiar importance for the final proofs of the book were received but a few days before his untimely death—October 4, 1926.

The name of the author is closely connected with all musical circles. For 43 years he was musical editor of the New York Evening Post, and while those in whose midst he lived knew him best and appreciated his writings most, he was known and appreciated by music lovers everywhere. The love and interest in music is nationwide, and his criticisms were always looked forward to with interest and accepted as authoritative by the people who loved music in every state in the union. With reference to his work the following is said:

"My Adventures in the Golden Age of Music" is the autobiography of a man who was probably the most brilliant writer and keenest critic of music in America. With the same flashes of wit and searching inquiry that characterized his musical criticisms, Mr. Finck examined his own life and gave us a volume to be prized and cherished by everyone who enjoys music. It is not only as the record of his own life that it is of interest but also as a series of brilliant pen sketches of famous musicians. It is, in a larger sense, a summary of the important musical activities during a period of nearly 50 years.

The numberless admirers of Mr. Finck will appreciate this book and will feel that it is the crowning achievement in literature of a great artist. There are reminiscences about the great and glorious musical stars whom the whole world has honored, Patti, Melba, Caruso, Schumann-Heink, Paderewski and others who belong now, and in the past, to the "Golden Age of Music." (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLROOM.

Music Appreciation in the Schoolroom. This handsome volume in blue and gilt of more than 500 pages, is a Teacher's Book to accompany the records of the Music Appreciation Course in the Music Education Series. It is by Thaddeus P. Giddings, Will Earhart and Ralph L. Baldwin—all directors of school music, and Eldridge W. Newton, managing editor.

This is one of the handsomest volumes on the subject of music that has been prepared, for, with its many illustrations, it has been a most difficult undertaking. It is the combined work of musicians, teachers and research workers. The selections include folk classics, children's classics, and many well-known great classics, all of which have been arranged by masters of music.

Dr. Henry Hadley, the noted symphony conductor, together with eminent members of the New York Philharmonic orchestra, assisted by famous singers, worked together for months in the selecting and the making of these records for music classics. In writing of this work Dr. Hadley says: "The Music Education series presents a wonderful opportunity for musical growth in the schools of this country. I feel gratified and honored to be associated with a project so great in its scope and so ambitious in its purpose—that of making America a genuinely musical nation." (Ginn & Co., Boston.)

GENERAL REVIEWS

The Trail of Glory. By Leroy Scott. (Houghton Mifflin Co.) $2.

"The Trail of Glory" is not exceptional as a novel, but it is written in a style that is clear if not remarkable, and concerns a problem of interest to anyone interested in sports. It is the story of a world champion of tennis and his struggle between his love of glory and his self-respect.

Jerry MacAllister is sent to college and later given a nominal job at an actual salary by a promoter of amateur tennis whose obsession in life is to have America keep the Davis cup. Jerry tries to stop playing and go to work, but finds that people, at the mere suggestion of his following such a course, look upon him as a traitor, not only to his benefactor but to the entire American public. American standards are such that a man is expected to earn his living, and that he who holds a sinecure is an object of contempt. Jerry finds himself condemned whatever he may do, and the story concerns itself with his escape from what he calls "the cage of glory."

The novel would be much better if more attention had been paid to the development of character. Jerry and his friends are all alike, fine, clean sportsmen with grit and pleasant manners. The girl whom Jerry marries after his escape from tennis is a figurehead only, and the patrons of the sport are as like as the players themselves. We have in "The Trail of Glory"—Mr. Tilden's enthusiastic preface to the contrary—only the skeleton of a story, but for all that it makes reasonably good reading and draws to the problem confronting the amateur sportsman the attention it deserves.

Backyard. By Gloria Goddard. (Robert M. McBride & Co.) $2.

"Backyard" is almost an exceptionally good novel. In content and structure it is one, but the author has worked too hard in her endeavor to build up a style. The shadow of the thesaurus is on every page and it is too bad that this is so, for she has successfully done what Sinclair Lewis failed to do in "Main Street"—give an objective picture of a small town without bringing in anyone's reactions to it. A critic of Mr. Lewis said recently in The Saturday Review of Literature that he was not so much concerned with Main Street as with his own annoyance at it. No critic could say this of Miss Goddard, for she holds herself and her characters in such check that the book contains scarcely a line in regard to what anybody thinks of the situation that is depicted.

Without comment or moralization, "Backyard" traces the growth of a southern town from the time of the first settler until that settler's great-granddaughter elopes with the chauffeur, whose mother takes in washing and lives in the alley at the back of the mansion where the girl has grown up. It shows the clandestine, degraded intercourse between the daughter of another alley washerwoman and the head of another fine house that pretends not to know of the alley's existence. Finally it shows the mansions torn down to make room for apartment houses built by an Irishman from the alley, who moves his family into the first one completed, while the girl who eloped with the chauffeur, now living in the alley, watches his children take possession of what had been her yard.

The book is interesting and worth reading. At the end of it one hopes that Miss Goddard's next one will be soon forthcoming, and that when she writes it she will forget about the thesaurus.

By Candle-Light. By Gertrude Knevels. (D. Appleton & Co.)

Read "By Candle-Light" and remember how you felt when you heard your first fairy tale! No, it's not a juvenile, but it gives you the same thrill your first prince and princess story did. In a day when so many books are written obviously in an endeavor to make a name for the author it is a real pleasure to find one that apparently is written purely for the delight of the reader and the actual joy of writing.

It concerns a New York society girl who "hires out" at the old Hudson river home of Cornelius Van Tienhooven in order to find out the truth about his supposedly demented and dying niece who is destined in less than a month to inherit the estate. What she discovers about the real state of affairs and the lengths to which longing to own the place himself has driven Cornelius, her meeting of the "prince"—in disguise as all good princes should be—and final defeat of Cornelius make up the plot.

Gertrude Knevels' novel is a moderately mysterious mystery story, a frankly sentimental love story, and a novel of graceful style and sound construction. In addition, it is written with an easy, unaffected style that maintains throughout the book a high level of excellence. As entertainment for people who like their light reading well handled and graciously expressed it certainly could hardly be improved upon. It should be on everyone's Christmas list.

The White Circle. By Carroll John Daly. (Edward J. Clode, Inc.) $2.

"Eerie—mysterious—heart-racing—pulse-thumping . . ." These are a few of the adjectives in the cover blurb for "The White Circle," which is guaranteed to "give you a whale of a jolt on every page." Unfortunately, the blurb is entirely misleading.

In the dead of night an anonymous man comes to Stacey Lee, broke but adventurous gentleman, and offers him good pay for rounding up a gang of blackmailers under the leadership of the "Black Circle." The midnight visitor represents the "White Circle" which is trying to stamp it out. Lee accepts the proposition and finds himself embroiled in plots of average movie and detective-story character which are not even puzzling for very long. The identity of the Black Circle is guessed on page 202—if not before—and that of the White very little later.

A mystery story that fails to mystify is a poor thing. As for the way the love story in this one is handled, let me give a sample:

". . . Just love, nothing more. I guess I acted like a fool and told Josey so over and over. Yet it didn't seem new to me, but like I had known it all along. It was the same with Josey, too. Those in the windows of the big hotel or the New York Athletic club must have grabbed some eyeful."

This selection is sufficient comment on the style and grammar of the author.

The Strange Adventure of James Shervinton, and Other Stories. By Louis Becke. (J. B. Lippincott company.)

Louis Becke never sentimentalizes in dealing with the South seas, never tries to give any but an accurate picture, but his stories leave at least one reader with more real desire to visit the islands he describes than the writings of more sensational authors have ever aroused. Perhaps it is because he writes smoothly and easily, as though the things he told slipped out of his pen by nature instead of by the work that is the pay with everyone for the privilege of getting into print, but it is more probable that it is because his sketches and stories are honest. Now, most of us have never been nearer the scenes he describes than Los Angeles, so perhaps it is presumptuous for us to pass judgment on their portrayal by anyone. Without ever traveling at all, though, one can tell the true from the spurious in literature. Lord Pembroke says in writing of Becke: "He was one of the rare men who have led a very wild life and had the culture and talent necessary to give some account of it. As a rule, the men who know don't write, and the men who write don't know." Louis Becke certainly knows. Nothing spurious enters his pages.

At that, he is more successful in pinning atmosphere to paper than in handling his plots. The title story in this collection creates a most complicated situation for its hero in connection with two women, and then, just when things are most interesting, the problem is settled, or rather eliminated, by a purely extraneous occurrence which, though possibly, would improbably have come at so convenient a time. If the story is based on fact it should have been arranged to suit fiction. As it stands it is disappointing although thoroughly enjoyable up to the last page. The other stories are more correctly sketches and impressions, and in reality have more merit than the longer tale, but it is hard to say that one part of the book makes better reading than another. It is good throughout.

Caleb Peaslee. By Frank K. Rich. (Henry Altemus Co.) $2.

Caleb Peaslee is probably the very nicest person you will meet in fiction this year. As a matter of fact, he's not fiction. Whatever Mr. Rich's qualifications as an author, he could never have created Caleb. Only generations of New England stock, only a true Maine environment could have done that. Mr. Rich probably created the love story and what other semblance of plot the book has, but certainly he has only written Caleb as he saw him.

After all, creation is not the test of art, it is re-creation. Caleb is made alive as he is, or was, in his own village, and Mr. Rich has accomplished something to be proud of even if he never writes another book. All of his readers, however, will hope for him to go on, for we should all like to hear more of the doings of Caleb and his friends.

Caleb himself tells most of the story, although it is written in the third person. He has the rare ability of speaking colloquially at great length without being tiresome, and he will appeal most especially to the person who likes to enjoy every page of a book instead of rushing madly through it to find out what happens. A splendid book for a [illegible]day, a splendid gift [illegible]ful adventure [illegible] philosophy and humor, "Caleb Peaslee" is worthy of far more than casual attention.

NINE BRIEFS FILED FOR FELONY CASES IN SUPREME COURT

T. R. Gress, assistant attorney general for Georgia, Saturday filed with the state supreme court briefs for nine capital felony cases to be considered at the high court's next term, beginning Monday.

The briefs were all prepared this week by Mr. Gress and constituted a record number for any one week since he came into office in 1922. The previous record number for a week, he said, was seven.

Records of the cases briefed this week averaged 75 typewritten pages in length, the assistant attorney general said. The longest record of the 248 capital felony cases he has condensed since he has been in office, he recalled, was 750 typewritten pages in length. In preparing the brief for the supreme court, Mr. Gress said he read this ponderous document through six times.

Chaliapin and Great Cast To Present 'Barber of Seville' Here Next Tuesday

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Bringing with him a personally selected cast of opera stars, with a 25-piece symphony orchestra, and a scenic investiture from the brush of Konstantin Korovin, the famous Russian artist, Feodor Chaliapin will present "The Barber of Seville" at the auditorium next Tuesday night.

The event is one of primary importance in musical and opera loving Atlanta, and will attract hundreds of out-of-town visitors, as well as leaders in social and cultural circles.

In some respects this is an even more significant engagement than the annual performances given here by the Metropolitan Opera company, every April. It is, of course, a single performance and cannot, therefore, touch in sustained interest the full week of opera given every year. But is is doubtful if any single performance by the Metropolitan has carried as much interest as this.

Chaliapin's Own Production.

In the first place, it is always an important event when Chaliapin, with his unique combination of the singing and acting arts, appears. In Atlanta the great Russian basso is exceptionally popular, through his four appearances here in the past. He has, however, never appeared here in the role of "Don Basilio," and thus we shall have the first opportunity, on Tuesday, of witnessing one of his most famous comedy interpretations.

Added interest is given the production, by the fact that it has been staged and produced entirely under Chaliapin's personal supervision. He has frequently declared that many of his appearances have ben handicapped owing to the necessity of conforming to the ideas of a producer not in entire sympathy with the performance that Chaliapin himself feels should be given. This time, however, it being his own production, he has been enabled to have his own way in every detail. The result is a remarkable and magnificent opera.

The scenic investiture, for instance, is from the brush of Korovin, of Paris, the Russian artist who is known as the greatest living authority on Spanish subjects. The two Russians spent many hours together in devising the strikingly modern settings used.

World Premier in 1816.

The engagement further serves to introduce to Atlantans the famous Spanish coloratura soprano, Elvira de Hidalgo, who will sing the role of "Rosina." It is interesting to note that when this star made her debut with the Metropolitan, on November 27, 1924, "The Barber of Seville" was revived especially for the occasion. Senorita de Hidalgo is now an important member of the Metropolitan roster and returns to their ranks immediately after the close of the present tour. She is universally regarded as the greatest interpreter of this role living.

"The Barber of Seville" was written more than a hundred years ago, having its world premier in Rome on February 5, 1816. Since then it has been one of the most popular of the lighter group of grand operas and has served as a vehicle for many famous stars. It was the first opera sung in America in Italian, in New York, on November 29, 1825. Madame Patti sang Rosina in it in New York in 1892. Madame Melba made her first American appearance as Rosina. Madame Sembrich used it as her farewell role and Tettrazini sang it here.

Centenary Revival.

The Metropolitan staged a great revival performance of the opera on its centenary anniversary, February 5, 1916, and in the cast on that occasion were Barrientos, Mattfield, de Luca, Damacco and Segurola. Then, in 1924, it was again revived for the debut of Senorita de Hidalgo.

The cast to appear here Tuesday is composed of performers with whom Chaliapin has appeared in Europe and America, chosen for their particular excellence in the particular role. Joseph Bobrovich will be the "Count Almaviva"; Gorges Dorando, the "Figaro;" Guiseppe La Puma, the "Dr. Bartolo," and Anna Lissetzkaya, the "Berta."

With a capacity audience indicated arrangements have been made for special street car service after the performance.

Bones of Monster 30,000 Years Old Found in Oklahoma

Bones of a prehistoric monster, estimated to be at least 30,000 years old, have been unearthed near Ponca City, Okla., by contractors building a new line of the Rock Island into that city from Billings and Tonkawa. News of the discovery has been received in Chicago by C. A. Morse, chief engineer of the Rock Island, from Roy Leas, engineer in charge of construction of the new oil line.

The discovery has created no little excitement among the citizens of Ponca City, as well as among a group of scientists who are excavating Indian mounds some 14 miles northeast of Ponca City. The bones unearthed are about five feet long and twelve inceh sin diameter. A tooth 5 inches in diameter and 18 inches long also was found. An effort will be made to find the remainder of the skeleton. The bones were unearthed while digging through a sandy hill along the right of way of the new railroad.

During recent months the attention of scientists has been drawn to several points in Oklahoma because of discoveries in the excavation of Indian mounds. So far as is known this is the first discovery of a prehistoric monster in this section of Oklahoma.

New York, December 11.—(AP)—The cotton market was quiet, but generally steady today, January contracts selling up to 11.87 or 9 points net higher and closing at 11.83.

The general market closed steady at net advances of 4 to 7 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 7 points in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables. A little southern selling and realizing were soon absorbed by trade buying and covering. Brokers with domestic mill connections were moderate buyers of the spring and summer months, and appearance of this demand combined with the absence of any important selling pressure from the south, no doubt increased a disposition to cover short contracts for over the week-end.

The buying was by no means active, but offerings were light, and prices reached the highest levels of the day in the late trading when December sold at 12.20, and May at 12.34, about 7 to 9 points net higher. The close was within 3 or 4 points of the best.

Private cable advices said hedge selling in Liverpool had been absorbed by calling, covering and Manchester buying and also reported better demand for some lines of cotton goods from China.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 239,000 bales, against 169,000 last year. Prospects of large midmonth clearances may have contributed to the steadier ruling of prices. The volume of business, however, was not considered sufficient to indicate any particular change in general sentiment and local brokers attributed the advance chiefly to weekend covering and the comparative absence of selling pressure.

COTTON MODERATE IN NEW ORLEANS BUT GAINS.

New Orleans, December 11.—(AP)—The cotton market was only moderately active today and price fluctuations were within a narrow range, although after showing little definite trend during most of the session they developed firmness at the end.

Although Liverpool was considerably better than due the market here opened barely steady 2 points up to 2 down, but soon rallied 5 to 6 points from the opening figures in sympathy with the northern market and the favorable cables. The market eased off a little around the middle of the session on a forecast for good weather, but near the close prices rallied 9 to 10 points from the lows on shorts covering. The close was near the best, showing net gains for the day of 5 to 8 points.

Liverpool came in 4 to 6 penny points better than due, but the market here made but a poor response. The market later rallied to 11.88 for December and January, and 12.03 for March, or 5 to 6 points up from the opening, but lost most of this gain later. Near the end prices rallied on shorts covering to 11.91 for December, 11.90 for January and 12.04 for March, or 9 to 10 points up from the lows. These were the highs of the day. The close was near the top. Exports for the day totalled 40,239 bales.

The Day in Finance

Heads of Active Financial Institutions in Wall Street express Belief That Prosperous Year Is Ahead.

By R. L. BARNUM

New York, December 11.—People who have been in Wall street long enough to have a background find it difficult to recall a time when at the close of a year so many recognized financial and industrial leaders have been on the fence in their views on the outlook for the new year. This fact was admitted by the head of one of the largest and most active financial institutions in Wall street who told your correspondent:

"What I am going to say will probably surprise you. I am willing to go on record with the prediction that general business for the first half of 1927 at least will be as good with the possibility that the last six months will be better than the first." This was before Secretary Mellon gave out his optimistic statement.

Leaving this office your correspondent went to a nearby bank, the head of which is looked up to by all well-informed bankers and business men in and out of Wall street. The gist of the foregoing discussion was repeated, with the surprising predictions regarding the general business outlook for 1927.

Good Outlook Seen.

The quiet reply to this was:

"That is what we think. I am not saying that the first half of 1927 will continue to show monthly high peaks for all time in this and that direction. But I am saying that from our viewpoint while we may get lulls here and there even with such slowing down, general trade will still be very good."

It does not take long for what these two men think to get around Wall street and undoubtedly between now and the end of the year one after another of the recognized financial and industrial leaders in Wall street will climb down from the fence with outspoken optimism.

Later this question arose: If two of the smartest and most successful bankers in Wall street, leaders in two widely separated groups, are of the belief that general business for the first half of 1927 is going to be good, why it is that the rank and file of Wall street stock market wise either uncertain or pessimistic, the stock market continues highly professional? If good business is to continue it would seem the average price of stocks would be advancing instead of more or less marking time.

Market Marks Time.

The stock market is marking time because the big outside public continues to stand aside looking on at professional traders first going long and then short, sometimes both the same day.

Probably the answer is that good business for the first half of 1927 has already been discounted by the stock market in the existing high level of average prices, which, since last March, has recovered to the high record then reached. Those who have long stocks are not buying more, but appear willing to hold what they have. Traders who sell stocks short do not remain short because, so far, they have been unable to force any selling of long stocks. Hence, the stock market continues to drift.

A round of Wall street will disclose many successful investors and speculators who are out of the market and expect to remain so until technical conditions in the market bring about a price decline that may not run as far as that of last March, but which could easily duplicate that of October. There are many careful investors and speculators in and out of Wall street content to await until on some unexpected unfavorable news the stock market has a break offering a more attractive income return on stocks worth holding. In such quarters it is frankly admitted there is nothing in sight to indicate the source from which unfavorable news might come, but, it is added, experience has taught that when prices of stocks are high enough to create uncertainty, usually something unfavorable unexpectedly happens.

The ablest men in Wall street cannot see a bull stock market starting from the existing price level. What can be seen is a market made up of swings of ten or twenty points in the average price with smaller swings in between.

A real bull market must have as a foundation a sustained upward movement in the earnings of one or more basic industries. In the best informed Wall street circles the feeling is that the expansion of the past few years in the automobile and building industries has run its course. In such quarters the feeling is that the only substitute in sight for the part that has been played by the automobile and building industries is in possible legitimate extension terminal and main line track work by the railroads. It is realized, however, that before being able to raise needed working capital through the sale of stock, railroads have some distance still to go in increasing dividends, to make their shares more attractive to investors and speculators.

Sophie Mae Candy Display Will Open Here Tuesday

Chocolate dipping methods employed by the Sophie Mae Candy company, now on display in Atlanta. Skill and experience is required of the young women engaged in the work, as Atlantans will see at an exhibition opening Tuesday at the Henry Grady hotel.

Atlantans will have the opportunity to purchase their Christmas candies at wholesale cost, according to officials of the Sophie Mae Candy corporation, in announcing plans for a demonstration store and miniature candy factory during the Christmas holidays.

Spacious quarters have been secured in the Henry Grady hotel, where candies will be offered to the public at cost prices and where girls from the Sophie Mae candy plant will demonstrate how the candy is made.

"Our candies are made here in Atlanta and are sold all over the United States," stated the president of the company, J. B. Coppedge. "We have paid little attention to the home trade, because we have been too busy developing our wholesale business. Starting less than 10 years ago with one outlet for our goods, we have spread all over the United States and today have more than 6,000 dealers. We manufacture, probably, more peanut brittle and more stick candy than any other candy manufacturer in the south. New York city alone consumes 120,000 packages of our stick candy each year. They pay 50 cents for it; during our demonstration sale here in Atlanta, our home folks will be able to purchase the same package for 39 cents.

Explains Objective.

"Our object in establishing this store is purely to get acquainted with our home folks, to enable them to discover the quality of our candies and to show them how they are made. During the demonstration they will see luscious, ripe, fresh strawberries dipped into their protective chocolate covering to make the truly delicious Sophie Mae chocolate covered strawberries. Our policy has been to produce the highest grade candies at the lowest prices. To this end, we have put the quality on the inside of the box—no fancy packages, just all candy! We aimed to supply the family trade with the best at prices the average family can afford, and that this policy has been successful is attested by the fact that within the short space of 10 years we have grown into one of the largest candy producers in the country."

Mr. Coppedge called particular attention to the fact that fruit flavors are derived whenever possible from the actual fruit rather than from synthetic extracts. And in the item of chocolate covered cherries, he demonstrated how real Maraschino cherries are used instead of preserved cherries.

Pure Juices Used.

"The luscious juice from the cherries, confined within a creamy filling and then covered with rich chocolate, blends with its cream center and within a day or so forms a peculiarly fine flavor that a poet would find difficulty in describing. It must be tasted to be appreciated. These cherries will be on sale during the demonstration at actual wholesale prices," said Mr. Coppedge.

According to the announcement, souvenirs will be given on the opening day to all who make any purchase of any size. A novelty candy walking stick will be the souvenir for the opening day, and other souvenirs will be given during the rest of the time to those who purchase $1 worth of candy; but on the opening day, a candy walking cane will be given free to those who make any size purchase.

The store will open Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, and will remain open from 9 in the mornings until 10 at night, up to and including Christmas Eve.

Mr. Coppedge called attention to the fact that the store is roomy enough to accommodate big crowds and that ample facilities will be provided for those who desire to mail packages.

Market Gossip

News From Wall Street and New York Editorial Comment

(By Fenner & Beane Leased Wire to The Constitution)

BROKERS' STOCK OPINIONS.

Hentz—Expect the strong rail market to continue.

Prince & Whitely—See indications that the market is going to advance still further before long.

Newman, Bros.—Think during the periods of strength "holdings" should be lightened with a view of repurchasing on normal setbacks.

Fenner & Beane—We look for a higher market next week with the oils and rails increasing in activity.

CURB STOCK LETTER.

New York, December 11.—The week ended on the curb exchange today with prices strong and volume of trading well maintained. The usual Saturday profit-taking appeared but was not of sufficient weight to influence prices materially. The South American oils, which have been leaders of the market nearly all week again led the list today in volume of sales. Caribs was extraordinarily active and advanced to within a fraction of its previous high record established two days ago. American Maracaibo and the lesser South American petroleums were lively but scored no material gains.

Victor Talking Machine proved the outstanding feature of the industrial specialty stocks. The company, according to a recent official statement, is earning at rate of $20 a share.

DOW JONES REPORT.

New York, December 11.—A persistent rumor to effect that an important change in executive personnel will be announced at regular monthly meeting of directors of U. S. Industrial Alcohol company after close on December 16. The change is said may result in an addition to the personnel of Cuba Co. Officials of U. S. would neither confirm or deny the rumor.

Nash Motors company on November 30 closed most successful year in its history, establishing new records in both sales and earnings. While final figures on year's operations will not be available until early in January, it is estimated profits were in excess of $22,000,000, equal to upwards of $7.50 a share. The year just closed was sixth consecutive year in which Nash Motors established a new high record in earnings. In 1925 profits were $16,256,216, or $5.56 a share on present share basis.

In view of large gain in earnings and company's strong cash position prospects of a liberal extra dividend in cash at January meeting are promising. At present Nash is paying at rate of $4 a share annually. On basis of estimated earnings for the year, company will have nearly $10,000,000 available for surplus or distribution to its shareholders.

It is understood that directors of Chile Copper company at next meeting will call outstanding 6 per cent convertible debentures. The 6 per cent bonds, amounting to $34,991,500, are callable at $110 and accrued interest at any interest date, interest being payable April 1 and October 1 and are convertible into stock at $35 a share. The issue is callable only as a whole and it is understood that the retirement will be as of April 1.

Calling this issue of convertible bonds will tend to keep outstanding stock at the present amount of 4,391,302 shares and will be a great advantage to stockholders, not only that it will keep down outstanding stock but will also reduce standing charges. It is understood that some of the funds that come now has invested or out on call will be used in retiring the 6s so that the amount 5 per cent debentures issued to replace convertible bonds will probably be under $30,000,000.

Guy Stevens, director of the Association of Producers of Petroleum in Mexico, says: "My attention has been called to a dispatch from Mexico City published in this morning's Washington Post to the effect that the oil companies through Roberto Pesqueira have reached an agreement with the Mexican government whereby in consideration of the government waiving a requirement recently set up by it regarding the proof of titles (a requirement by the way which has no basis in the law itself but is supplemental to the law), the oil companies would file applications for concessions under the petroleum law before December 31. There have been no negotiations on petroleum matters through Pesqueira, no such agreement has been made through any channel and the entire report is without foundation."

WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Confidence regarding the outlook for a strong Christmas market was strengthened by price movements in the week-end session. Although some of the leaders of the recent advance came under the influence of profit-taking the general market maintained a buoyant tone and aggressive bullish demonstrations went ahead in many sections of the list.

Constructive interests were encouraged by the healthy ivestment demand reflected in the strength of the bond market and in the action of high-grade preferred stocks. These indications of the underlying soundness of the money situation fostered vigorous buying activities in various groups of stocks. Sugars were stimulated by final action regarding the curtailment of the next crop, while the sharp advances which occurred in International Harvester and Case Threshing Machine suggested that important banking interests were not concerned over the possibility of serious impairment of rural purchasing power next year. Shares of companies whose earnings are benefiting substantially from record holiday business, particularly Montgomery Ward and Radio corporation, were also featured on the upside. Recessions which occurred in Steel, Allied Chemical, eneral Motors were clearly of a corrective nature and the performance of these stocks indicatd that people lined up in the constructive camp were preparing for further advances next week.

NEW YORK EVENING POST.

Simultaneously with the publication of President Coolidge's views on the state of business and Secretary Mellon's forecast for 1927, the stock market this week developed unexpected strength. Quotations now are back to the record peaks of February and September and if we accept certain standard compilations we must conclude that stocks now are higher than they have ever been before. The general movement has shifted repeatedly this fall from the up to the down side, but the expressions of confidence of business that came this week from the government were seized as a basis for a move forward not equalled in the recent weeks. What the secretary of the treasury said was digested with particular satisfaction since he gave assurances for the coming year.

News of the actual signing of the measure for restriction of the new Cuban sugar crop to 4,500,000 tons created a broad demand for the sugar shares. Stocks of producers operating outside of the island were, however, most favorably influenced, though Cuban stocks were generally higher. Great Western Sugar and American Beet Sugar, two of the largest beet sugar producers were run up briskly, the first mentioned advancing three points to new high levels for the year. South Porto Rico Sugar, whose product enters our ports duty free because of the United States protectorate also was taken up sharply to new record to new levels.

NEW YORK TELEGRAM.

After a long series of weekly increases in the production of crude oil the tide has perhaps turned. Production last week showed a decrease. That is important in that consumption is now proceeding at a greater pace than ever before. Automobile needs are no longer seasonal affairs. The increase use of the large motor buses by railroads and by municipalities has more than offset the decrease in the consumption of gasoline occasioned by any falling off in the use of pleasure cars in winter months. Almost 90 per cent of the automobile production is of the inclosed type, in fact, several of the larger manufacturers have discontinued the manufacture of the open car. The improvement in the oil industry was concident with greater activity with the seasoned oil shares.

NEW YORK SUN.

While the dividend inundation of the past summer and autumn probably has marked the peak of extra and increased rates for some time, a number of following waves probably will sweep over the market early next year. It is difinitely known that a number of companies are planning to go on a dividend basis or increase their current rates "after the first of the year." Interest in next year's developments will be centered on United States Steel corporation. It is by no means certain that Judge Gary will yield to the pressure from certain directions and capitalize some of the huge surplus of the corporation by giving a stock dividend. Still many expect that to happen next year. Among the many companies expected to do something special are Allied Chemical, United States Distributing, National Dairy Products, Rock Island, Pere Marquette, Chesapeake & Ohio, Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Pacific, Texas & Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Norfolk Southern, Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Chicago & Northwestern, Atchison, Nickel Plate, New York Central, Erie, Lehigh Valley, Case Threshing, Bethlehem Steel and Radio corporation.

Red Grange's Crew Meets Wilson's Team Tuesday

FORT BENNING ROUTED, 100-TO-0 SCORE, BY WYCOFF'S BEARS

Brilliant Conflict Expected

BY DICK HAWKINS.

The Wildcats of George Wilson will meet the famous Red Grange outfit at Spiller's field Tuesday afternoon in what is expected to be the best exhibition of football that has been seen in Atlanta this year.

Wilson and his undomesticated felines have been in Atlanta for the past several days, staging frequent workouts at Spillers' and otherwise pointing for the battle with Grange.

Grange and his outfit will arrive from the frozen north some time today and their practice session will necessarily be limited to one day, Monday.

Grange, Eddie Tyron, et al. have bitten off a mighty big chew in booking the tilt with the Wilsonites. They have been marching through the east and midwest this season, suffering only one defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Panthers.

Wilson, on the other hand, has assembled a mighty aggregation of Pacific coast stars. Some of the men that have made the western teams the terrors of the nation are enrolled in the Wilson squad. Therefore Grange's Yankees will have to battle as they have not battled before this year to stave off defeat. It is the first time that the two professional aggregations have come together.

Grange is history. Everyone knows the history of Illinois' famous "77" and the Wheaton ice man. He is the nation's greatest contribution to football of recent years. And his team is assembled of such men as can boast of records similar to those he established at Illinois. Look at Tryon, for instance. According to reports, this gentleman makes a practice of taking punts on the fly and by the time a tackler gets to him he is going like a locomotive.

What more elusive and hard-to-stop man could be expected.

Wilson, at the same time, is confident that his coasters will take the measure of the Grangeites. He vaunts the superiority of the team from west of the Rockies, or any team from west of that famous chain for that matter—and he believes that Stanford will lick Alabama.

Battle of Backs.

The battle at Spillers looms as a game of backs. It will be several of the greatest backs of the age pitted against each other, for Wilson and Grange have both achieved an undeniable place among those truly great in football history.

Wilson's work has stood out throughout his collegiate and professional career, even in the movies when he rammed and battered at the "Grange" line with remarkable effectiveness as the cold and merciless Kleig lights looked on.

There is much of the aroma of a great battle hovering over this conflict. It brings together two of the nation's outstanding pro elevens. No such thing as either of them staging a field day is possible, even though Doug Wycoff and his remarkable aggregation did against the Fort Benning Tanks.

It will be an exhibition of heads up football. Grange, except for his Florida tour last winter, has not invaded the south thus far. His appearance here will be the prelude to a number of future games in the south, the next of which will be Saturday in Birmingham.

Winner vs. Wycoff.

One game that would probably draw a great crowd, and in addition prove one of the best football menus ever dished Atlanta fans would be to have the Doug Wycoff aggregation meet the winner of the Grange-Wilson melee.

It was Wilson who stood out in the Rose Bowl battle of a year ago when Alabama carved its own niche in the gridiron hall of the truly famous by handing Washington a 20-19 drubbing. It will be Wilson, George not

SCENES FROM TANK-WYCOFF BATTLE

Photos by Kenneth Rogers.

Wycoffers Hold Pro Field Day

BY BEN COTHRAN.

One of the largest scores ever made in Atlanta was run up at Spiller's Saturday afternoon when Doug Wycoff's Newark Bears, pro-football team, defeated the Fort Benning Tanks 100 to 0.

It was Atlanta's first chance to witness a professional grid eleven in action, and the 3,000 or more fans who ventured out were given their money's worth.

Action was fast, especially when Ark Newton, former all-southern back at the University of Florida, and Adrain Maurer, who thrilled Atlanta fans when he carried the ball in Oglethorpe's backfield while attending that school, got hold of the ball and demonstrated that they still knew quite a bit about lugging the pigskin-covered oval.

Maurer Big Gainer.

Maurer was the biggest ground-gainer for the Newark team, and led in the scoring with five touchdowns to his credit. Newton pushed him closely, putting the ball across the chalk line four times. Maurer was as elusive as he used to be, and slipped through tacklers, and usually made a good long gain, and each of his touchdowns resulted from a long end run.

It was a familiar sight to see Doug and Ike—that is, Wycoff and Williams, in case you don't remember them—in action again. Both performed well, and although Doug didn't carry the ball as much as he did when he played for Tech, he was right there when it came to giving interference. He made the final score of the game, with a 25-yard dash off tackle.

Ike played his part well by scoring a touchdown and kicking 10 points after touchdown, with Doug holding the ball.

Most of the Bear plays were end runs, and the line hadn't much of a chance to show what it could do in the way of opening up. But on defense the entire forward wall broke through and stopped the Tank backs before they got started. Mylenzacker, Army full, made a few gains, but the Tanks' longest gain resulted from a forward pass, one of the three that they completed.

The Bears scored their first touchdown on the two initial plays of the game. On the first play, Ark Newton took the ball to ride for 36 yards at left end. He was again given the ball, and told to try right end. He did—and stopped across the goal line, after making one of the prettiest runs that an Atlanta football crowd has seen this season.

Forced to Punt Once.

All of the touchdowns were made in five or six plays, and the Bears were forced to punt one time. They had been thrown for losses while attempting to pass, and had to try punting.

Maurer, with his five touchdowns, also made the longest run of the game, going around left end for 59 yards and a touchdown in the final period.

Newton came next to Maurer, with Wycoff having two touchdowns to his credit. Brewster, Ike Williams,

UNIVERSITY MEETS TECH HI THURSDAY

While the professionals are giving Atlanta grid fans a treat, there is still one prep game left on the schedule that will cause the convocation of a l..ge number of people at Spiller's Thursday afternoon.

The underlying reason for this large gathering will be the fact that University school and Tech High are meeting each other on the grid for the first time in three years.

The game was closed at the end of the annual argument between Tech High and Boys' High as to which has the best football team. Both participants in Thursday's game got down to work and coaches of the elevens will add their finishing touches this week.

An interesting duel is looked forward to when Armin Waugh, Smithie quarterback of renown, who has broken the prep record this year for ground gained from scrimmage, meets John Hunsinger, who has come close to the same record.

Not only will it be the meeting of two good backfield men, but it will be a case of a good line trying to stop another one equally as good.

None of the members of either squad are seriously injured and the coaches report that their charges will be in the best of shape for the game.

There is no title of any kind at stake, but a hard-fought game always takes place when these two schools meet.

S. S. A. A. OPENS CAGE SEASON MONDAY NIGHT

BY ERNEST OWEN.

With some of the fastest basketball played in Atlanta this year provided, the Sunday School Athletic association will open its cage season Monday night at the Atlanta Athletic club at 7:30 o'clock.

All teams are requested to have their sponsors present at 7 o'clock so that a committee can be appointed to select the most beautiful girl, who will be the sponsor of the S. S. A. A. the rest of the season. This girl will have the honor of throwing the first ball of the season.

The first game of the season between Druid Hills Baptist and Grace Methodist has the outlook of a very good game.

The second game between Jackson Hill Baptist and T. N. T. Class of the Baptist Tabernacle should be a very interesting game. Jackson Hill were winners in one of the leagues last year and T. N. T. Class were runners up in the same league.

The third game will be between Fortified Hills Baptist, winners in one of the leagues last year, and Druid Hills Pesbyterian. From all records Druid Hills will have a good team.

Pryor Street Presbyterian, winners in the National league last year, meets a new-comer in Clifton. This is the first game of any kind Clifton has played in the S. S. A. A., and from all reports and records they will be in position to put up a good defense against the champions of last year.

The curtain falls when the G. F. G. Class of Capitol Avenue Baptist meets Grant Park Baptist.

Petrels Are Facing Tough Grid Practice Before Geneva Game

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

Earnest preparation will be the keynote of every practice held this week by the Stormy Petrels in their conditioning for the coming New Year's day tilt with the famous Geneva college eleven, conquerers of Harvard and the holder of an enviable record in the east. The game will be played in Jacksonville, Fla.

During the past week the Petrels enjoyed a very successful week of practice so far as conditioning is concerned—physical conditioning. For the most part signal practices were the order of the workouts; but some of the time was used by Coach Robertson as a means of explaining defects in the execution of some of the most important plays—the whys and wherefores of it all.

Word received from very authoritative sources recently has it that if the Petrelites expect to tame the fighting gridders from Beaver Falls, Pa., the hangout of "Bo" McMillan's well-coached, aggressive football machine, that they must "get off the dime." And hence the announcement by Coach Robertson was immediately issued to the effect that football on Hermance field would be once more carried on in that serious attitude which has been so beneficial to successful Oglethorpe football teams.

Scrimmage Booked.

It is expected that a light scrimmage or so will be held toward the latter part of this week, the freshman using the plays of Geneva; also the regular routine of work will be followed during the workouts, namely, tackling the dummy, bucking-board practice, the running under the ropes and the like.

It will be necessary, according to Coach Robertson, for his charges to once more adhere to the rigid training rules necessary for excellent physical and mental condition. And it has always been Coach Robertson's policy to have his football team in as good condition as possible. Hence it is his purpose to place on the field New Year's day a team that can "stick in there and fight" for full 60 minutes.

MOBILE SELLS EDDIE MORRIS TO NASHVILLE

Mobile, Ala., December 11.—(Special.)—Eddie Morris, veteran hurler of the Martin loop, will hurl baseball for Mobile next season. He was secured today in a trade in which the Nashville Vols released him to Mobile for Oscar Fuhr, the one-time ace hurler. Fuhr is the third regular to pass from the local diamond to other fields, it being part of the policy of the new baseball association to give local fans as many new players as possible.

Fuhr was obtained in 1922 by the Mobile club from the Chicago Cubs and helped the Bears win the pennant that year and the Dixie championship with his remarkable hurling, winning 22 games. In 1923 he won 23 games for Mobile and was traded to the Boston Red Sox, where he remained for two years. He returned to the Mobile club last season and won 12 games, and lost 15.

Morris is a veteran in this league and is one of the best relief hurlers in the Martin loop. Morris last year won 16 games and lost 12.

Shriners' Benefit Jan. 1.

The East vs. West Shriners' benefit football game will be held in the Kezar stadium, San Francisco, January 1, 1927.

TEN BATTLES PROGRAMMED BY MARYLAND

College Park, Md., December 11.—(AP)—University of Maryland has listed ten football games next fall and may add Tulane for December 3 in New Orleans, according to an announcement of H. C. Byrd, athletic director and coach.

Seven of the games are with teams in the southern conference and the big contest of the other three is with Yale in New Haven on November 5.

Washington college, for the opener on September 24; South Carolina and Washington and Lee are to be played at College Park and the annual Thanksgiving day game with Johns Hopkins in Baltimore also is considered a "home" contest in that the Maryland university professional schools are in the Monumental City.

Maryland's game with Virginia on November 12 also will be made a "home" affair as the entire old line student body will be taken to Charlottesville.

Starting with the 1928 season, Byrd has announced that four major games and a minor cnotest will be played at College Park annually, in addition to the Hopkins clash, with four major engagements away.

Two changes appear in the 1927 list from that of the past season, Virginia Military Institute and Vanderbilt replacing Gallaudet and Chicago.

The schedule:

September 24, Washington college at College Park.

October 1, South Carolina at College Park.

October 8, North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

October 15, Virginia Poly at Norfolk.

October 22, Virginia Military Institute at Richmond.

October 29, Washington and Lee at College Park.

November 5, Yale at New Haven.

November 12, Virginia at Charlottesville.

November 19, Vanderbilt at Nashville.

November 24, Johns Hopkins in Baltimore stadium.

Pate, in 47 Games, Has Mark of 1,000

Few pitchers in the history of major league baseball have enjoyed as unusual a season as did Joe Pate, making his big league debut with Philadelphia last year. Joe won nine games for the Athletics, even though he didn't pitch a complete ball game. He started only one battle; the rest of the season he was used in relief roles, entirely. Pate managed to break into 47 ball games for Mr. Mack.

COBB DENIES PLANNING TRANSFER TO EUROPE

Augusta, Ga., December 11.—(A.P.)—Ty Cobb, former manager of the Detroit Tigers, from his home here tonight denied reports from Atlanta that he is to leave America with his family and take up residence in France, but admitted that he is planning a vacation trip to France and other European countries.

Mr. Cobb had retired when reporters called at his home, but spoke through Mrs. Cobb, saying that while it was true that he hoped to take his family to Europe on a vacation tour next year, probably about May 1, and would likely be gone some months, he had no idea of giving up his residence in Augusta.

He explained that he had long desired to visit Europe with his family and that his recent retirement from baseball afforded his first opportunity to carry out this wish. He added, however, that he had not defintiely decided as to making the trip.

"Penny a Point" Football

We have heard of "penny a point" card games but Saturday was the first time we have had the exquisite pleasure of seeing a penny a point football game. There were something like 1,500 football fans sitting in $1.00 seats at Spiller's Saturday and they received one point for every penny when Doug Wycoff and his Newark Bears out-tanked the Fort Benning Tanks by 100 to 0.

The debauch might have been called a "dollars-to-doughnuts" affair—Doug taking the dollars and the Tanks getting the doughnut. It was a perfect scoring drunk for the professionals and a more perfect scoring machine would be hard to find.

The Tanks did well despite the fact that they ended the fracas on the small end of a 100 to 0 score. The Bears have a team which would make short work of the best Fort Benning team, whereas the Tank outfit is selected from but one battalion and has not been playing as an organized unit for more than a very few weeks.

One might be inclined to depreciate the work of the Bears because of the apparent weakness of the Soldier team on defense, but make no mistake about the power of the Wycoff aggregation. They will score on almost any team in the country, and the fact that they piled up such a score against the Tanks is indicative of their great strength rather than of any great weakness on the part of the Doughboys.

Every play run by the Bears except the straight line bucks was fortified by a perfect four-man interference and if one were to pick the meat from the game the interference of the Bear offense would be that meat.

With Wycoff, Williams, Newton and Connelly in the backfield—with Brewster, Maurer or Hanson in there to replace any

CHATTANOOGA DRAWS NEXT S. I. A. A. MEET

Birmingham, Ala., December 11.—(AP)—Allocation of the various athletic tournaments, selection of Chattanooga as the site for the 1927 convention and election of officers comprised the chief business enacted at the final session of the annual meeting of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association today at the Birmingham Athletic club.

Birmingham fared well when distribution of the tournaments came before the convention. Not only was the track and field meet awarded to the Magic City, but also the first tennis tournament to be sponsored by the association was given to Birmingham. The Citadel, of Charleston, S. C., in conjunction with Charleston college, was awarded the 1927 basketball tournament, while to Mississippi college went the cross-country run.

Both chief executive officers were reelected, Dr. J. W. Provine, of Mississippi college, as president, and Robert T. Hinton, of Georgetown, as secretary-treasurer. The new executive committee is composed of, in addition to the foregoing officers, E. H. Shuler, of Wofford; G. W. Meade, of Birmingham-Southern; C. Cottingham, of Louisiana college and J. W. Edwards, of Chattanooga.

Four recommendations were presented by the committee on constitution and by laws, three affirmatively and one negatively. In each case, the committee's action was upheld. The changes effected are as follows:

1. Add to article 9, section 13, "a student who enters the freshman class, drops out and later returns to the same school without having in the meantime entered another institution, may take part as a member of freshman teams in any sports not in progress while he was previously in the school."

2. Add to article 2, "for each month of delinquency in the payment of dues, the dues shall be increased $2 with nine months of delinquency rendering a member liable to expulsion; and that the treasurer render monthly statements of financial status to delinquent members."

3. Add to article six, section 5, "that all requests for emergency action shall be sent direct to the president, instead of to the various members of the executive committee."

A recurrence of the annual squabble over what constitutes eight months in school, required for varsity eligibility, provoked the most heated contention of the day's session. After numerous conflicting opinions had been voiced with the misunderstanding apparently gaining strength, a motion to table the question was passed, it being pointed out that the association ruled presumably with finality on the matter last year.

Bethea and Jones Land on Composite All-Southern Prep

Deland, Fla., December 11.—(AP)—Shand, tackle of Columbia, S. C. High school, and Suther, halfback of Tuscaloosa, Ala., High, have been picked for the second consecutive year on the All-Southern High school football teams, John "Red" Davis announced tonight. Mr. Davis, chairman of the high school advisory board, said the selections represented the nominations of 55 southern sporting writers.

Two teams were compiled, each with the same rating, he said. They follow:

Dowling, end, Biloxi High, Biloxi, Miss.
Walter, Tackle, Jones C. High, Hattiesburg, Miss.
Winson, guard, Waco High, Waco, Texas.
Darst, center, St. Christopher, St. Christopher, Va.
Taylor, guard, Central High, Nashville, Tenn.
Shand (C), tackle, Columbia High, Columbia, S. C.
Chappelle, end, Woodlawn High, Birmingham, Ala.
Mason, quarter, Charlotte High, Charlotte, N. C.
Tetlow, half, Baton Rouge High, Baton Rouge, La.
Bethea, half, Riverside, Gainesville, Ga.
Proctor, full, Hillsboro High, Tampa, Fla.
Boineau, end, Columbia High, Columbia, South Carolina.
Dedge, tackle, Miami High, Miami, Fla.
Baumgarten, guard, Male High, Louisville, Ky.
Schneider, center, Gastonia High, Gastonia, N. C.
Lucky, guard, Richmond academy, Augusta, Ga.
Montest, tackle, Morgan City High, Morgan City, La.
Jones, end, Monroe A. & M., Monroe, Ga.
Worrall, quarter, Montgomery Bell, Nashville, Tenn.
Suther (C), half, Tuscaloosa High, Tuscaloosa, Ala.
Deddens, half, Dupont Manuel, Louisville, Ky.
Lumpkin, full, Oak Cliff High, Oak Cliff, Texas.

Shand as captain of one of the teams and Suther of the other have been outstanding on their respective elevens during the past season. The former played an important part in his team's successful march to the state title of South Carolina. Suther found his Tuscaloosa eleven placing bid for national honors after disposing of all teams on schedule, including a post-season match with Senn High, of Chicago, rated the leading scholastic team in that city.

Mason, on the Charlotte, N. C., eleven, held his team up well all the season in its fight for Tar Heel honors. The team was beaten in the final game for the state championship

INTERSQUAD TRACK MEET WON BY HAMM

BY JULIEN SAKS.

Tech's first intersquad track meet came off very successfully Saturday afternoon. Though the track is not in good shape on account of being torn up during the football season, several events were run off in fast time.

Ed Hamm stepped the 50 and 100 yard dashes in 5.7 and 10 seconds respectively, the latter equaling the Tech record, and Coffee took the 150 yards in 15.7 seconds. Ed. Hamm was high point man with 20 points gathered from four first places, Jimmy Boyd came second with 16, while Stewart and Saks were tied for third with 13 each.

Following this meet Coach Barron will divide the track men into two squads, as nearly equal as possible, and these two teams will be dubbed the "Yellow Jackets" and the "Golden Tornado." This is done to give the intersquad meets an aspect of regular competition, as the men will not only be competing in each event but will also be running as a team.

The Summary.

50 yard dash, first, Hamm; second, Saks; third, Hicks. Time 5.7 seconds.

50 yard high hurdles, first, Boyd; second, Roberts. Time 7 seconds flat.

80 yard hurdles, first, Boyd; second, Saks.

100 yard dash, first, Hamm; sec-

OGLETHORPE AND HORSEGUARDS IN POLO FINAL TODAY

Brilliant Battle Is Seen at Fort; OrangemenFavored

BY C. F. THOMPSON.

Orange and white will mingle on the polo field this afternoon in the final struggle of the southeast polo tournament, beginning at 2:30 o'clock.

The orange will be the Sixth Cavalry four from Fort Oglethorpe and the white will be the Governors Horseguards of the National Guard, and the spectators will be dished their full admission's worth of assorted sensations.

Preliminary to the finals, the Fort Benning aggregation, defeated and eliminated Friday by the Oglethorpians will ride against the Fort McPherson four, defeated and eliminated in the opening match by the Horseguards. This will be a four chukker setto and will begin at 1:30 o'clock.

The riding of Lieutenants Sutton and Donaldson of the Orange Cavaliers against the saddle work of Christian, Moran and Love of the Horseguards will probably afford the customers one of the best exhibitions of riding and malleting seen here in many days, if ever before.

If the battle was being staged under the National Polo association, then Sutton, Donaldson, of the Orangemen, and Moran and Christian, of the locals, would be riding under the handicap of at least a goal each. But it is not, and therefore they all ride even. The Oglethorpians should be the victors.

Sponsors row, really an attractively colorful spot along the sidelines will be occupied by Misses Isabelle Breitenbucher, Henrietta Mikell, Juliane Hagan and Marie Brown for the Orangemen and Misses Isabel Hunter, Christine Wolfle, Louise Nelson and Frances Cooper for the Horseguards in the final match.

The Lineup.

OGLE.	Pos.	HORSEG'DS.
Lt. Sutton	one	Love
Lt. Donaldson	two	Christian
Lt. Culton	three	Clark
Capt. Meador	four	Moran

Officials: Lieutenant E. H. DeSaussure, referee; Major A. T. Colley, umpire; Lieutenant E. H. McDaniel, scorer, and Lieutenant A. J. Thackston, timekeeper.

GENEVA TEAM IS POINTING FOR JAX TILT

Jacksonville, Fla., December 11.—Geneva college of Beaver Falls, Pa., has just completed a most successful season under the tutelage of Coach Alvin "Bo" McMillin. Seven out of the nine games on the 1926 menu were won. As a reward the Geneva college officials have allowed the Covenanters to arrange a post season game to be played New Year's day in this city against the Oglethorpe university eleven of Atlanta as part of the Orange Blossom festival.

Geneva shot into national prominence after the first two games of this year's schedule, the McMillin machine barely losing to Cornell 6 to 0, after a heartrending battle and the next week springing a sensational surprise by whipping Harvard 16 to 7 in the Cambridge stadium.

The early season strain was hard on the Beaver Falls athletes but they were still able to cop the Tri-State conference title after turning from the east. Grove City, champions of this conference, caught the Geneva team napping near the close of the campaign and nosed out the Gold and White by a lone field goal.

The forward line of Geneva has enabled the team to keep a remarkable defensive record during the past two years. In the Tri-State conference records, no team has scored a touchdown on the Covenanter linesmen for the past two seasons. The titular cup has been captured for the last two seasons by McMillin's squad.

During 1926 there were but two touchdowns earned against Geneva. Cornell and Harvard each counted one touchdown over the Gold and White forwards but Carnisius, of Buffalo, recovered a fumble to register their lone tally.

Most sensational among these stellar linemen is the lumbering "Big Cal" Hubbard, who plays end. He was awarded a place on Parker All-American team of the New York World. This writer was the only prominent scribe to see the Cornell and Harvard games against Geneva, and in both Cal Hubbard was at his best. Hubbard got a place on the third All-American teams of "Red" Grange.

IOWA PLANS HONOR TO OLD CHAMPIONS

Iowa City, Iowa, December 11.—Men, who in their youth some 23 to 38 years ago, competed on University of Iowa football, baseball, basketball and track teams are being called back to the university from 14 states.

Dispatches from the university athletic authorities, notifying the men that their services will be awarded have been sent from New York to California and from Minnesota to Texas. The middle-aged veterans are scattered in Texas, South Dakota, Ohio, Illinois, Minnesota, Montana, Washington, Oregon, California, Utah, Oklahoma, Arizona, New York and District of Columbia.

Debts of long standing will be settled on January 14, when all the former athletes who are able to return to the university will receive "I" sweaters as part of the field house dedication ceremonies.

The eligibles, who competed on some team of the four sports between 1889 and 1904, are 69 in number, of which 30 are football men, 26 played base ball, 10 were track stars and three played basketball.

Miami Tourney Entries Swelling

Miami, Fla., December 11.—Entries for the Miami open golf championship and the Miami Beach open championship are coming in rapidly. Gene Sarazen, who arrived here Thursday to take up his work as golf park professional, brought word that the field will be a strong one again this year.

Willie Klein, last year's winner of the Miami open, will again be on hand, as will Jock Hutchison, Jim Barnes, Gene Sarazen, and Walter Hagen, all winners of American or British open championship; Al Espinosa, Al Watrous and a number of other well-known stars.

Landis' Reelection Believed Assured; Season War Looms

New York, December 11.—(AP)—Reelection of Baseball Commissioner Landis for another seven-year term at the joint major league meeting in Chicago next Thursday is regarded as a forgone conclusion by National league men gathering here today for their own annual meet-meeting next Tuesday.

National league already has gone on record as a unit in endorsing Landis' regime and in favor of keeping him in office. As a result no further formal action is considered likely or necessary when the magnates go into session Tuesday.

Although baseball men as a whole do not anticipate much opposition to Landis, if any, from American league club owners, it was pointed out that a majority already is assured by the fact that President Jacob Ruppert, of the Yankees, and Charles Comiskey, of the White Sox, are committed to the commissioner's support.

Opposing points of view, however, may develop an issue over the closing dates for the 1927 major league season. Under the present law, favored by the American league and put into effect by the vote of Landis, the season must close on the last Saturday in September.

This would end the coming campaigns on September 25. The National league, President John A. Heydler said today, while not against an early closing, is opposed to fixing the date arbitrarily and feels that the schedule committee should not be restricted in arranging the playing dates.

Reports of the most prosperous season in its history have been prepared by President Heydler for submission to the club owners next week.

The need for major league pilots who can develop young talent as well as supply qualities of leadership largely has influenced the wholesale managerial shifts that have taken place since the close of the 1926 playing season, in the opinion of a majority of the baseball men gathering here.

William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, in pointing out the first year success of his own manager, Joe McCarthy said:

"It was in the development of young players that McCarthy helped the Cubs most this year, although at the same time he had the club up and around the top most of the season. I hired McCarthy because of his success in developing young players in Louisville, rather than because he was a winning pennants.

"The time has come when every league club must have a manager who can teach and train young players, not just lead them."

Realization of this, Veeck and others believe, accounts for the retirement of such famous playing leaders as Sisler, Collins, Speaker and Cobb. Ray Schalk, another playing manager, has replaced Collins with the White Sox, but Morarity and Dan Howley, bench pilots, have assumed the reins with the Tigers and Browns, respectively. Donnie Bush, at Pittsburgh, is another new bench pilot, while the Boston Red Sox have called back Bill Carrigan to rebuild their team. Stuffy McInnis, new boss of the Phillies, also is likely to do most of his directing from the side lines.

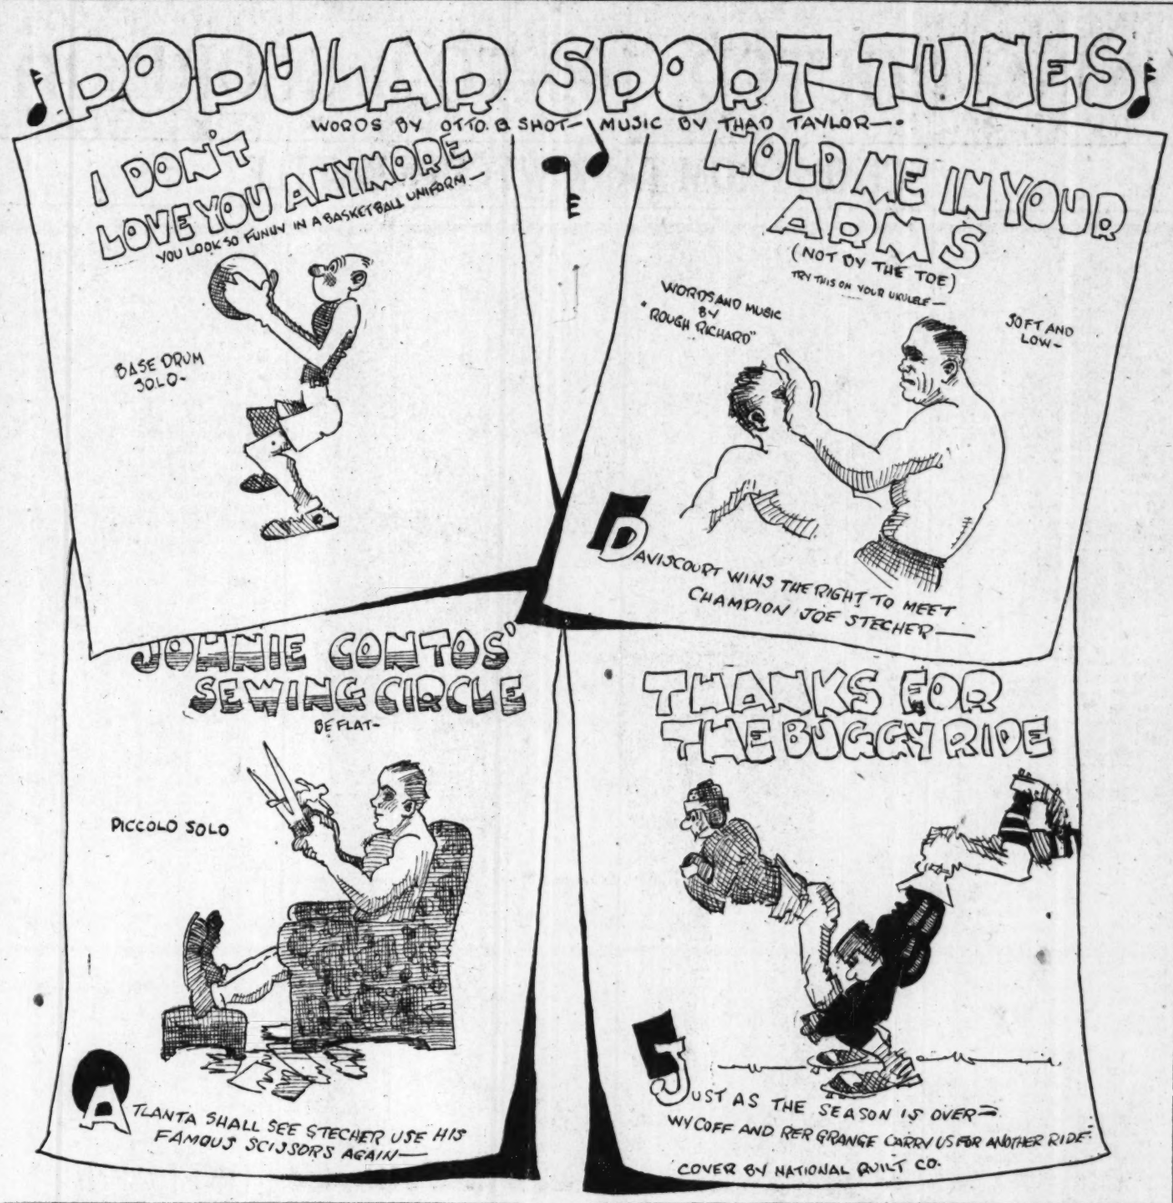

Grid Gambling Termed Danger

Syracuse, N. Y., December 11.—(AP) The greatest danger to college football is gambling, in the opinion of Chancellor C. W. Flint, of Syracuse university.

At a banquet to the team last night he said gambling destroys sportsmanship and without sportsmanship college football cannot survive. Friendly wagers are just as harmful to the game as those laid by professional operators, he said, and he requested members of the chamber of commerce to lend their assistance to wiping out the gambling instinct by not making any such wagers themselves and by discouraging their friends from doing so. The chamber was the team's host.

Jack Dunn Retails $400,000 Worth of Ivory

Jack Dunn, who as manager of the Baltimore Orioles, has sent more players to the major leagues than any other individual, has received over $400,000 in cash for these prospects in the last 15 years.

Jewish Progressives Will Open Basketball Season December 28

BY CLARENCE NIXON.

The Jewish Progressive Basketeers will swing into action December 28 on their home court with something like 18 games staring them in the face.

The Wofford cage artists will journey over from South Carolina to pry the lid off the coming season. This game will take place December 28.

They have been working hard every day preparing for the opening of a long, hard schedule. Joe Bean, coach of the J. P. C. and also the A. A. C., has been putting his boys through some real hard work for the past few weeks.

Many veterans have returned from last season and with the many promising lads up from the junior team of last year, the J. P. C. mentor is expecting to put out his usual machine. Last year Bean coached both the J. P. C. and the A. A. C. quintets and turned out two of the best teams in the city.

Several outstanding cagers from the junior team are on hand with many others who promise to furnish Bean with the right kind of material for his team. The junior quintet last year stood up with the rest of the teams in the city in the same class has turned out some real players for the senior cage outfit.

Following the game with the Wofford cagers, the J. P. C.'s will tangle with Furman, January 5, on the South Pryor floor. Then comes the Burke Terrors, of Nashville, Tenn., on January 10. The Burke Terrors will ship a real team to Atlanta to play the Bean boys. Last season J. P. C. invaded the Terrors' stronghold in Nashville and found plenty of opposition there.

Then comes what is expected to be the biggest game on the schedule for the South Pryor boys. They will do battle with the Atlanta Athletic club, a team also coached by Joe Bean. The game will be played January 12, on the A. A. C. court. Last season these two teams met on the local court and basketball fans saw one of the best games ever seen in Atlanta. Coach Bean was absent from the game, leaving the playing entirely up to the leader of the team.

Bean gives both teams the same brand of coaching, and both are always on even terms. That does not mean that he teaches them the same plays, but that he treats both quintets the same. Bean is noted for his wonderful basketball coaching ability, and both teams are looking forward to a great season.

Following the A. A. C.-J. P. C. struggle, the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. outfit will take on the South Pryor streets boys on the J. P. C. court January 17. The Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech are the next on the schedule. They will play J. P. C. at Tech January 19.

January 25 the Bean boys will entertain the Nashville Peps on the local floor. After that game the Yellow Jackets will visit the South Pryor court for another game with the Bean boys, on February 2.

Then Coach Bean will pack his team in a coach for a three-game road trip. First, they will journey to Birmingham for a game with the Y. M. C. A. of Slagtown. This game will take place February 7. Then the Bean boys hop over to Nashville for a two-game stay in the Volunteer City. February 8 they will play Nashville Peps, and the next day they will take on the Burke Terrors, and on the following day they play a game in Chattanooga, winding up their only road trip of the season.

Upon their return to Atlanta they are faced with another big game. They will encounter the Atlanta Athletic club again, this time on their own court. This second family battle will take place February 16. The local Y will entertain the Bean boys on the Y court February 24.

Games with Oglethorpe, Mercer and Birmingham A. C. C. are pending. When dates are arranged for these games the Progressive club will have 17 games on tap for the coming season.

Following is the Jewish Progressive club's schedule up to date:

December 28—Wofford at J. P. C.
January 5—Furman at J. P. C.
January 10—Burke Terrors (Nashville) at J. P. C.
January 12—A. A. C. at A. A. C.
January 17—Atlanta Y. M. C. A. at J. P. C.
January 19—Georgia Tech at Georgia Tech.
January 25—Nashville Peps at J. P. C.
February 2—Georgia Tech at J. P. C.
February 7—Birmingham Y. M. C. A. at Birmingham.
February 8—Nashville Peps at Nashville.
February 9—Burke Terrors at Nashville.
February 10—Chattanooga A. C. at Chattanooga.
February 16—A. A. C. at J. P. C.
February 24—Atlanta Y. M. C. A. at Y. M. C. A.
Games with Oglethorpe, Mercer and Birmingham A. C. are pending.

MEHLHORN HOLDS LEAD AT MONTEREY

Del Monte, Cal., December 11.—(AP) Playing flawless golf, Bill Mehlhorn, Chicago, turned in a 70, two under par, today to maintain a substantial lead in the 72-hole $5,000 Monterey Peninsula open championship.

The Chicagoan's card with yesterday's first round 72, gave him a total of 142, three strokes below the field. Most of the outstanding entrants had completed their second round and it was not held likely that Mehlhorn's mark would be surpassed.

Three other cards of 70 also were chalked up today with Olin Dutra, Fresno; Harry Cooper, Los Angeles, and Johnny Golden, New York, as the luminaries. These scores gave Dutra a total of 148 and Cooper and Golden each 145.

George von Elm, Los Angeles, national amateur champion, stroked a 71 to bring his total score to 147.

H. Chandler Egan, Medford, Ore., former national and present California amateur title holder, made a comeback after a somewhat disastrous 85 yesterday. His score today was 73, or a total of 158, which was expected to qualify him among the 64 finalists tomorrow.

Other scores:

Al Watrous, Grand Rapids, 75-72—147.

Johnny Farrell, New York, 77-71—148.

Tommy Armour, New York, 75-73—148.

Cyril Walker, Inglewood, N. J., 75-73—148.

Willie Hunter, Los Angeles, 74-75—149.

Singleton Leaves A. A. C. Cage Squad; Strong Team Seen

Another of the famous Atlanta Athletic club basketball stars has passed from the scene.

Joe Singleton, star forward on the A. A. C. cage team for the past several years, has passed out of the picture as far as the Athletic club is concerned, it was announced Saturday.

The passing of Joe, outstanding forward of last season's quintet, makes the fourth star to leave the team since the close of the season last year. Steve Hartney, "Scrappy" Sullivan and Tom Ryan are the stars who have put their A. A. C. uniforms in the locker for the last time.

This leaves Coach Joe Bean, farfamed basketball coach, minus several men he had counted on to carry the A. A. C. colors through the coming season in the same fashion that they always did. However, Bean need not worry for he has plenty of first-class material to build up a team.

Coach Bean has been putting his men through some stiff practice for the past several weeks and is expecting to turn out one of the best teams that has represented the A. A. C. in many seasons.

Joe Bean has Cy Bell, crack forward, Lyman Johnson and Pat Stephens to count on this season. All of these men are carried over from last season's stock and promise to play the same brand of ball that they put out last season. Brewer, Tech star, is also lined up for a place at forward on the team.

At center, Bean has Eckford and Bennett to rely on. Latimer, Bass and Morrow are back for another season at shooting at the loop.

Several new additions have been made to the team for the coming season and with all of this material on hand Coach Bean is working hard almost every night getting his men in shape for the opening game of the season. The A. A. C. cagers will uncork the season with a game with the Georgia Tech basketeers January 5 on the Tech court.

Bean will not play any practice games this season, devoting all his time to training his men to play real jam-up basketball. He has been working out his men for many weeks and will continue to do so until the season opens.

Insurance League Opens Tuesday

The Insurance league will swing into action Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock with three games at the Atlanta Athletic club court.

Fireman's Fund Insurance company and Commercial Union will be the first contestants. Little is known of the teams in the league, as this is their first year at basketball in quite a while; however, one thing is certain, there will be some mighty good players listed on some of the teams. Such men as Joe Singleton, of A. A. C. fame, and others will be on the teams. There are other good players among those listed, and the season should be a big success.

Admission to these games will be free of charge, and with this as an incentive there should be quite a crowd on hand to see their favorites perform the opening night.

The Insurance league will play each Tuesday night, and all six teams will be seen in action.

The schedule for opening night is as follows:

Fireman's Fund against Commercial Union, at 7:30; referee, Glassman.

Southeastern Underwriters against Royal Insurance company, 8:30; referee, Slate.

Insurance Company of North America against Hartford Fire Insurance company, at 9:30; referee, Samuel Glassman.

ADAMS PICKS N. GEORGIA ALL-STAR TEAM

LaGrange, December 11.—Eight north Georgia schools furnished players for the LaGrange Reporter's All-North Georgia High School football team. The selections were made by Sammy Adams, sports editor of The Reporter, after carefully going over information furnished by coaches, newspapers and referees of north Georgia. Jeff Bolden, LaGrange, fullback, was unanimously picked as fullback and captain of the all-star team. The remainder of the team, however, was selected after much consideration as a number of players on various teams had to be given much thought for their alround playing the past season.

The following men were selected for the All-North Georgia team:

Tackle	Culpepper	Rome
Guard	Awtry	Marietta
Center	Cleaveland	LaGrange

Glenna Collett To Visit Florida

St. Augustine, Fla., December 11.—(Special.)—Miss Glenna Collett, several times national woman's golf champion, is planning to return to Florida this winter, in quest of some of the laurels she was forced to relinquish last season, according to word received here today from her home in Providence, R. I. If she comes to the southland as she expects, America's greatest female player will start only in the major tournaments, and these competitions will inaugurate a campaign to reestablish her supremacy on the links during the coming year.

While Miss Collett played some of the best golf of her brilliant career in the year just drawing to a close, yet she suffered her worst season since she attained the heights. She managed to win two of seven tournaments, a fair enough record for any other player, but a poor one for a competitor of the caliber of Miss Collett.

Heston Was Michigan's First on 'All-America'

Willie Heston was the first Michigan football star to make Walter Camp's famous All-America. For two years people kept telling Camp about "Heston out at Michigan." Finally, the third year, Camp came west to take a look for himself. As a result Michigan, in 1903, got its first representation on Camp's All-America. Later Camp placed Hester at left half on his All-Time All-America.

Wade To Put Eleven Through Hard Work Before Taking Trip

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., December 11.—One more week of practice remains in the path of Alabama's football squad before they depart on December 21 for Pasadena. The Tide is fast rounding into shape for their second invasion of the Pacific city to defend the prestige of the east against that of the west against the Stanford Cardinals on New Year's day.

Scimmage is expected to feature the work of the Tide outfit this week. Coach Propst was kept busy all last week tutoring his frosh outfit in the ways of the Pacific coast champions, and the "Rats" are beginning to run the Californian's signals right well. With the varsity crew in about as good condition as Coach Wade wants them to be before they leave, it is firmly believed that he will pit them against the Stanford plays many days this week so as to allow the varsity crew ample opportunity to familiarize themselves with the Stanford formations.

Many To Make Trip.

Alabama's party of 100 is just about definitely arranged. Following the first announcement of the low rates offered, inquiries began pouring in to Jess Long, assistant athletic director, and his force has been kept busy all the week giving further information about the trip. In addition to several reservations from Alabama, Long has made reservations for individuals from Tennessee, Mississippi, Georgia and Kentucky.

There remains no question now but what the Crimson Tide will leave here on a special train the morning of December 21. That fact is assured. There also exists little doubt about the party of 100 and indications are now that fully 150 will be in the party.

Those players who last year participated in that whirlwind game against Washington are taking this game much more seriously than they did last season, and that's hard to understand. It seems as if they took the 1925 game just as serious as they could. But the way these California writers speak of this Cardinal outfit of Pop Warner has caused them no little worry.

Stanford has, without doubt, a great team. Alabama is likewise rated. But the Tide is working with the intention of having just a bit more drive, a bit more reserve, a bit more punch in both attack and defense than the Cardinals will have that day. In other words, they want to have that extra ounce of power necessary to win.

Counting on Stars.

Captain Barnes, "Wu" Winslett and Hurschel Caldwell are the trio of ball-toters who will play their last game against Stanford. These are the three men upon whom a great majority of the responsibility will rest and upon whom will be fastened the eyes of the majority of that fifty-odd thousand that is expected to see the game. In them Alabama has implicit confidence, and it would not be surprising to see them lead their mates through one of the hardest fights of their careers.

Archie Taylor and "Red" Brown are doped as the other two starters in Alabama's backfield against Stanford, if all things seen at Denny field run true to form. Both are fleet, steady advancers of the ball. Both have showed their heels to many opponents this season. And both should have ample opportunity to sneak away for long gains when they face Stanford.

They're light, it is true, these four backs who are likely to face Stanford on New Year's day, but they have the punch as many, many people can testify who saw them play through the 1926 campaign in Dixie.

Alabama's front rank should be able to battle on even terms with the Stanford line. It is hard to imagine a line much better than this present Alabama line with its two stalwart tackles and the smooth-working Sherlock Holmes at center. Messrs. Winslett and Enis are very, very capable ends, and there is really nothing shy about the ability of Messrs. Bodwoin, Pearce and Hagler at their guard positions. So it looks very nice, provided these seven men function as usual.

TUSCALOOSA HIGH PLANS TILT IN WEST

Tuscaloosa, Ala., December 11.—(AP) Tuscaloosa High school has accepted the invitation of Los Angeles promoters to oppose Bellefonte academy, of Pennsylvania, in a championship high school football game at Los Angeles either December 30 or 31, it was announced by Coach Paul Barnum here today. With the closing of negotiations for the titular contest Coach Burnum issued a call for practice and the Black Bears will begin preparations this afternoon.

Coach Burnum stated that he would start his team to practicing again Saturday and would make the trip on the Crimson Tide special, Alabama's football train. Twenty-two men will make the trip to Los Angeles, Coach Burnum announced.

The Alabama team plays New Year's day and the Tuscaloosa coach wants to play either December 30 or 31, preferably December 31.

The Tuscaloosa team has piled up an impressive scoring record during this year's campaign and climaxed the season by defeating Senn High school, of Chicago, runners-up to the champions, 42 to 0.

Only 16 points have been scored against Tuscaloosa, while more than 500 have been piled up by the Black Bears. "Flash" Suther, captain and star back, has scored more than 300 points alone.

MARQUETTE CAGERS BEGIN WORKOUTS

Milwaukee, Wis., December 10.—Under the direction of Head Coach Frank J. Murray, who assumed command only since the close of the football season, Marquette university varsity cagers are winding up their second week of intensive training in preparation for the heavy holiday season schedule which has been drafted for the Hilltop quintet.

While the situation at Marquette this season isn't exactly hopeless, it is far from brilliant. Sporadic early fall workouts and the more intensive grind since Murray stepped in have brought to light no new material, and it is evident that the Blue and Gold must go into the battle with the remnants of last year's aggregation. A hard blow was struck on Thanksgiving day when Connie Dunn, brother of Marquette's famous "Red" Dunn, and Murray's best bet for center, cracked a bone during the football game with the Oregon Aggies, and he probably will be out of uniform all year.

A few fooball performers of the Marquette grid squad have responded to the call for material, though they have come out for drill only since the close of the pigskin season. Vic Vrobel, Fon du Lac, Wis., and Bob Crowley, Shorewood, Wis., football halfbacks; Guido Gauckler, Milwaukee, a guard on the eleven; Dick Bader, Green Bay, Wis., fullback, and Johnny Padden, New Richmond, Wis., end, are all out for basketball. Harry Clancy, Eau Claire, Wis., reserve back, also is out.

Just at present, the best prospects for the forward positions are Captain Eddie Herte and his brother, Ervin. They both came through nicely last season, handle themselves well on the floor and will be real assets this year. Center is a problem, but it is likely that Floyd Razner, Stevens Point, Wis., will be shifted from forward to center. Razner played center at Stevens Point and was one of the best players at that position in Badger prepdom. Among the guards are a trio of football men, Gauckler, Padden and Vrobel.

V. M. I. CAGE TEAM FACES 13 CONTESTS

Lexington, Va., December 11.—The Virginia Military institute basketball schedule, as announced by Manager E. T. Allen, contains 13 games with two open dates. In addition, the Cadets plan to compete in the Southern Conference tournament at Atlanta following the close of the regular season.

Eight Southern Conference games are listed, including home-and-home arrangements with V. P. I. and Virginia. V. M. I. will also play a game with Roanoke college at Roanoke on February 22. The season opens January 8 with Bridgewater, and closes February 22 with Roanoke.

Four letter men are available this season: Captain Bellinger, Mondy, Frost and B. Fulkerson. Besides these players Raftery can draw on the strong freshman squad of last year, which includes eight winners of numerals. These are: Bishop, Barnes, Harner, Hewlett, McGlone, L. G. Walker and Harrison.

The indications are that the Cadets will have plenty of guards and forwards to choose from, but that the pivot position may cause trouble. Hewlett and Harrison, of last year's freshman outfit, and Cheek, a substitute last year, are in the lead for the center job.

The schedule follows: January 8, Bridgewater; 12, Richmond; 15, open; 19, Elon; 21, N. C. State; 26, Virginia at Charlottesville; 29, V. P. I.; February 2, open; 5, North Carolina; 7, Virginia; 10, Duke; 12, Maryland; 14, South Carolina; 19, V. P. I. at Blacksburg; 22, Roanoke at Roanoke; 24, Southern Conference tournament at Atlanta.

INFANTRY 5 IS BEATEN BY 'Y', 73 - 17

The Twenty-Second infantry of Fort McPherson was overwhelmed Saturday, by the fast and furious attack of the "Y" quintet and the "Y" Cagers by the decisive score of 73 to 17. The soldiers fought gamely but could not compete with the strong offense led by Captain "Urb" Wilkinson and Mike Nichols of the "Y." The soldiers were compelled to take long and desperate shots at the basket, due to the close guarding of O'Connor and Cordele. Tedesco sunk three long shots and was the main star for the soldiers.

The Y. M. C. A. started scoring early and substitutions were soon used. The first half ended with the "Y" leading 24 to 8. In the last half the "Y" scored 49 points, with Nichols shooting 20 in this period. Wilkinson was the high scorer with 27 points and Bumstead registered 11 points.

Tedesco was the star for the losers and played a good game, shooting eight points for his team. The winners started at a fast gait, never slowing up and flashes of fine team work were displayed time after time. The team work of the "Y" was very smooth and worked well with the substitutions.

Lineup and Summary.

Y.M.C.A. (73.)	Pos.	FT. McP. (17).
Bumstead (11)	r.f.	Tedesco (8)
Wilkinson (27)	l.f.	Hunter (4)
Nichols (20)	c.	Simpson (5)
O'Connor (7)	r.g.	T. Smith
Cordele	l.g.	Morrison

Substitutions—Y.M.C.A. Brock for Bumstead, Adamson (2) for Wilkinson, Adcock (6) for Nichols; Fort McPherson, F. Smith for T. Smith, Sutton for F. Smith, Strickland for Morrison. Score at end of first half, Y. M. C. A., 24; Fort McPherson, 8.

Willie Ritola Tells People To Eat Sensibly

Willie Ritola, the Finnish distance runner, whose triumprs have featured the New York cross-country season, said a few days ago: "All the talk of eating fried fish or any other Finnish dish is foolish. We Finns eat what we like, but we eat sensibly. That, coupled with the fact that we are conscientious and consistent with our training, makes us good distance runners." Ritola is a carpenter and after a day's work makes it a point to run six miles to his home.

DAVISCOURT MEETS STECHER FOR TITLE WEDNESDAY

Boxing Commission Sanctions Mat Bout; Jones Meets Vadalfi

Atlanta's boxing commission Saturday added its official sanction to Paul Jones and Oreste Vadalfi meeting in the semi-windup of the championship wrestling match at the city auditorium Wednesday night. That left Promoter John Contos with very little to do to complete his program. He yet has to select a referee and the principals for the preliminary bout, but with more important details already arranged Contos is not worried about such trifles.

Joe Stecher, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, who risks his title in the two-hour main event match with Dick Daviscourt, will arrive in Atlanta either late Monday or early Tuesday morning. Such an arrival will leave him plenty of time to get the travel kinks out of his system. Daviscourt was to have reached Atlanta Saturday night, but failed to do so. Contos now expects him sometime today.

A Spectacular Bout.

This championship bout between the world's greatest wrestler and Daviscourt, the world's roughest grappler, promises to be the most spectacular ever staged in Atlanta. Daviscourt, who has won 30 straight matches and the enmity of the majority of Atlanta's wrestling fans, considers this match the opportunity of his life and intends doing everything in his power to throw the champion.

Any doubt as to what line of tactics Daviscourt will follow in the title match has been dispelled. Rough Richard declares that he has always contended that only a rough and "hard-boiled" wrestler stands a chance of beating Stecher, the most scientific of all wrestlers. Having advanced that theory it stands to reason that Rough Richard will do everything possible to prove it.

It will be interesting to see just how Stecher will combat Daviscourt's slapping, biting, kicking and slugging. The champion is a past master of all holds and specializes in the use of body and head scissors. He very probably will punish Daviscourt with those applications.

There is no doubt but what Daviscourt is as strong or stronger than the champion. However, those who follow the wrestling game closely contend that the latter is the more skilled and versatile of the two.

Large Crowd Expected.

At any rate the largest crowd ever to attend a wrestling match in Atlanta is likely to be on hand. There are hundreds of Atlanta fans who have developed a strong dislike for Rough Richard and they feel that they will be well repaid for their trip to the auditorium if they see him defeated, something that has not happened during the current wrestling season.

Then there are those who never miss the opportunity to see a champion in action, regardless of whether he is the world's greatest chess player or athlete. In addition to the Atlanta fans it seems that Promoter Contos will have numerous out-of-town customers. Orders for tickets have been coming from all of the small towns around Atlanta and there have been modest requests from a few fans in neighboring states.

At the insistence of Stecher, who gets a percentage of the gate in addition to his healthy guarantee the Atlanta boxing commission has given its guarantee that there will be very few passes issued for the championship match. The free list has virtually been suspended, the commission declaring that only working representatives of the newspapers will be admitted without paying.

A Good Semi-Windup.

While the personal appearance of the world's champion eclipses anything that Contos might offer on the program Wednesday night there are those who will derive considerable satisfaction and thrills from the one-hour semi-windup. Vadalfi has appeared here twice, winning his first match and losing to Daviscourt in the second.

However, Vadalfi, an Italian who is one of the most versatile and strongest wrestlers ever to appear at the auditorium, gave Daviscourt a furious battle and extended their match almost to the time limit. Vadalfi won the first fall and weakened by Daviscourt's rough tactics lost the next two.

In his first match at the auditorium Vadalfi threw John Paxos in 25 minutes. Some idea of comparison between the two semi-windup opponents can be gathered from the fact that Jones recently wrestled Paxos in Los Angeles and defeated him in no less than 11 minutes.

Contos is firm in the belief that Atlanta fans will be very much impressed with Jones' ability. The latter is 24 years old and has been wrestling since he was 18. He has defeated Dan Koloff and all other outstanding grapplers on the Pacific coast.

In addition to knowing how to apply and break all wrestling holds, Jones is sufficiently strong to cope with any man in the wrestling business. He is six feet tall and weighs 213 pounds, which weight will give him a few pounds advantage over his opponent.

Gotham's Fistic Commission Plans Etiquette Tome

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 11.—The gentlemanly manners of prize fighters in the New York ring were revised in the direction of uncouthness when the cauliflower commission, sitting as a committee on manners, decided that politeness had bene carried to offensive extremes.

Henceforth when one gentleman pastes another gentleman in any of the various illegal ways or bites or trips or otherwise offends against good taste and decorum, he will be forbidden to offer his right glove for a conciliatory handshake, as was done heretofore. Referees will be instructed to restrain the boys from undue handshaking and other manifestations of over-politeness. Just one handshake will be allowed, at the beginning of the final round, provided, as the commission rather mysteriously explained, that the fight lasts until the final round.

Although the prize fight profession in these parts makes quite a boast of its refinement there have been complaints lately that some of the fighters were carrying refinement to disgusting lengths and, indeed, certain fights took on the appearance of handshaking contests between aspirants for public office. The extreme was reached last Thursday evening at the Garden when Sandy Seifert, of Pittsburgh, endeavored to while away much of his bout with Jack DeMave in pleasant handclasps.

Comb Your Chest.

Seifert presents a strange phenomenon in that his head is bald, but his chest is hairy, and DeMave, with shocking vulgarity, is said to have inquired: "Why don't you comb your chest?"

Seifert offered his hand to indicate that he forgave this tactless remark and DeMave replied: "Don't wave it, my dear sir, throw it!"

The referee had left his Outline of Etiquette in the dressing room and he was about to disqualify DeMave for a breach of manners when the last bell rang.

Broadway John Cox, manager of Farmer Joe Cooper, who boasts that his fighter cuts his own hair, sleeps in his underwear, doesn't wash his neck and never says "excuse me," is understood to have protested against the unbridled refinement of the prize fight business, declaring that an ordinary prize fighter without the social poise of a Gene Tunney or a Sammy Mandell might be disqualified for neglecting to inquire after the health of his opponent's mother-in-law.

Bow Is Tabooed.

"It is my idea that a prize fighter should make himself as disagreeable as possible to the other bum and statistics show that nobody ever got knocked out shaking hands," Mr. Cox stated, explaining his attitude toward the alarming spread of refinement. "I think something should be done to curb the growth of politeness and restore the customs established by John L. Sullivan, Kid McCoy and the other founding fathers of the cauliflower business."

A motion to require all prize fighters to begin each round with a bow from the waist was defeated after a warm debate on the ground that most fighters nowadays wear the waistline near the arm-pits so that all blows below the belt will be scored as fouls. It was held that Willie Stribling, who trained to be an acrobat, would be the only one who could bow from the arm-pits.

MOBILE CLUB UNDERGOING RENOVATION

Mobile, Ala., December 11.—(Special.)—The 1927 directors of the Mobile Southern association team have started out to clean house and during the past week disposed of two of their old timers—Pat Kelly, who covered second base, the first time that the late Emil Huhn managed the Bears in 1924 and Pete Ritchie, a first string catcher. Kelly was sold to the Denver club of the Western league, while Ritchie went to the Shreveport team. Kelly came here from the Supulpa, Okla., team. President Nib Wilkins, a new leader in the ball game in this city and Milton Stock, manager, who succeeded Duffy Lewis after the latter made a failure at the helm of the team, have taken on four players this week. There are more in the "can" ready to be unpacked.

They have signed to date Catchers Palm from the Wilson team of the Virginia league and Wray Query from the Wichita Falls, Texas league club; Second Baseman Manuel Herrera from the Boston Americans, and Bill Mizuer from the Terre Haute club of the Three Eye league.

Manager Stock announced that he was in the market for several pitchers and these will be taken on between now and January 1.

Every Young Finn Hopes To Be a Nurmi

Most every boy in Finland hopes to be a Nurmi. Childhood dreams are not centered upon the presidency of the republic, but rather upon world championship athletics. For the present, the street urchin's height of ambition is the attainment of a wrist watch. Nurmi, he figures, is successful because he times his race. Hence the first prerequisite for a future Nurmi is a timepeace. Watch makers expect to do a land-office business this Christmas.

RING CHAMPS PRODUCTION GRIND BEGUN

New York, December 11.—(AP)—The padded knuckles of more than a score of recognized contenders were rapping out challenge music today at east and far west training camps in a widespread title drive against the champions of six fistic divisions.

In the wake of a string of dethronements which marked the passing of seven title holders this year, three class leaders found themselves immediately threatened, while the names of at least 18 candidates were lined up in four elimination series. Heavyweight, middleweight, welterweight, featherweight, bantamweight and flyweight titles all are involved in the scramble.

The general roundup for the miss-and-out campaign was extended yesterday when the New York State Athletic commission placed its official stamp of approval on a welterweight series, Joe Dundee, of Baltimore, and Willie Harmon, of New York, representing the east, were paired off against Mushy Callahan and Eddie Roberts, of the far west.

Latzo Concerned.

Pete Latzo, incumbent of the 147-pound throne, was more concerned, however, with a challenge from Sergeant Sammy Baker, against whom he has a scheduled ring argument next week in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The match will precede two other championship fights to be waged here, with Fidel Labarba risking his flyweight crown against Elky Clarke, of England, and Charley (Phil) Rosenberg, bantam title holder, opposing Bushy Graham, of Utica, N. Y.

Tex Rickard manifested no discouragement in his middleweight series plans despite an announcement that Manager Jack Kearns will demand a $200,000 purse for the next "outstanding contender" to take a crack at Mickey Walker's newly acquired crown. In his first elimination battle next Monday Tex will toss K. O. Phil Kaplan into the ring against Maxie Rosenbloom, with hopes that Tiger Flowers, deposed king, will consent to meet the victor. Rosenbloom has decisions over Dave Shade and Flowers.

Big Ones Ready.

Rickard also has filled in all the blank spaces on his next heavyweight elimination card for a show December 22, in the feature match of which Jim Maloney, of Boston, will tangle with Harry Persson, Swedish challenger. The supporting fights will match Monte Munn, Nebraska gridiron product, against Knute Hansen, Wisconsin Dane, and Ott Von Porat, of Norway, former Olympic champion, against Martin Burke, of New Orleans.

Jack Dempsey, Jack Sharkey, Paolino, Jack Delaney and Paul Berlenbach will be waiting around the corner with both hands cocked for the main bout winner.

Upsets have thrown the feather-weight elimination machinery slightly out of gear, Babe Herman, whose title hopes have been revived by victories over Tod Morgan and Benny Bass, gets a new chance to reestablish himself firmly in the front rank when he meets Eddie Anderson, of Wyoming, Monday night. The bout will precede the Kaplan-Rosenbloom clash. Bass, Red Chapman and Honey Boy Finnegan, of Boston, have been given official places in the elimination parade, with Bass and Chapman scheduled to lock shortly.

HEAVY CARD FOR WAYCROSS BASKETEERS

Waycross, Ga., December 4.—The Waycross Y. M. C. A. Red Flashes will open their cage season with the Thomasville Y. M. C. A. in Thomasville on Tuesday night, December 7, it is announced officially by secretary Ben Husbands.

Two other games follow in quick succession, both on foreign courts. The Flashes journey to Jacksonville on Saturday, December 11, for an engagement with the Ralph Dry Cleaners, and on the following Tuesday will be matched against the powerful Savannah Jewish Educational Alliance in Savannah.

This is a heavy opening week, indicating that the Flashes are jumping into the heaviest basketball card ever offered in Waycross, taking on real opposition from the beginning.

Thomasville cancelled two games last season when their club was disbanded early in the season, and it has been two years since "Y" teams from the two cities have met. In the contest in the spring of 1925 the Waycross cagers were victors by a narrow margin. This year the Rosebud from southwest Georgia have open... a good prospective season, having annexed several wins to date.

Dan Neely, tutor and forward of the Flashes, has had his men working for several weeks, but there has been nothing heavier than scrimmages with second string material. On Monday night of next week he will issue uniforms and a captain will be elected for the ensuing season.

Mrs. Chapman Wins Tourney

Pinehurst, N. C., December 10.—(AP) Mrs. John D. Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., today won the woman's Carolina golf tournament for the second time in succession, defeating Miss Dorothy Doyle, of Philadelphia, one up in 19 holes.

At the same time Mrs. Francis T. Keating, of Boston, was defeating Miss Doyle's mother, Mrs. Francis J. Doyle, by the same score in the first of the consolation flights.

Mrs. George Magoon, of Pittsburgh, won the second division consolation, one up in 18 holes, from Mrs. Horace Rackham, of Detroit.

Extreme Ages Noted In Golf in Illinois

Illinois lays claim to the oldest and youngest performers in major golf tournaments this season. Lewis W. Pitcher, G. A. R. veteran, won second low net honors in the Illinois senior tournament a few weeks after his 84th birthday. Sammy Alpert, a 15-year-old southpaw, won the western junior championship after a training period which began when he was 11 years of age.

CHAMP AND CHALLENGER

Two principals in the big wrestling show to be staged at the city auditorium Wednesday night by Promoter John Contos. Joe Stecher, left, holder of the world's wrestling championship, and Rough Dick Daviscourt, who will meet in the main bout of the show. Daviscourt boasts a string of 30 straight victories, some over the best bone-crushers in the country, and is looking forward to his match with the champion Wednesday.

McCallister Signed To Manage Indians

Cleveland, December 11.—(AP)—Jack McCallister, for 13 years scout and coach of the Cleveland Indians, will manage the tribe during the 1927 season. E. S. Barnard, president of the club, announced today that McCallister had been appointed to succeed Tris Speaker, veteran outfielder, who resigned as manager several weeks ago.

The announcement followed a consultation between McCallister and Barnard at Asheville, N. C., last week, where they attended the National Baseball association meeting. He will take charge of the team immediately and will attend the American league meeting in Chicago next week as the Tribe's new chief.

Although McCallister never played a game in the big leagues, he was selected over more than a dozen applicants, some of whom have starred under the big top for years.

Wide experience as coach and scout, and his knowledge of players in the American league led to his selection, Barnard said.

McAllister's many years' service with the team was given as another reason for his selection.

Jack started in the sand lots of Marietta, Ohio, now home town, and from there went to Columbus. At Hartford, where he played in the old Connecticut league, he attracted the attention of big league scouts and was slated to go to the St. Louis Cardinals when the season ended.

At the close of the season he played in a benefit game in his home town and while sliding to the plate split his knee cap. The injury kept him out of baseball for two years and he then went to Albany. In 1912 he went to Akron and the following year became scout for the Indians.

When Speaker became manager of the Indians he became coach and chief lieutenant of the veteran campaigner. He devoted much of his time to developing the infield, and assisting Matty Mathews, battery coach for the Indians, in coaching the pitching staff.

Jack is well known in the American league, and has the confidence of the Cleveland players. His knowledge of the American league players and of the weaknesses of clubs in the league was regarded as particularly in his favor, Barnard said.

ILL. SEEKING STABLE BASIS FOR BOXING

Chicago, Ill., December 11.—(AP)—The Illinois State Athletic commission is going to attempt to restrain trade in the cauliflower industry in Chicago, for the purpose, pardoxically as it may seem, of putting the boxing game on a more stable basis.

The reason is because there have been too many promoters, too many shows, and not enough customers to go around. The customers have refused to part with high prices for what they regard as mediocre attractions.

But One Show Paid.

In the first six months of legalized boxing only one show of major importance has made the promoter any money. That was the match between Shuffle Callahan, a rough, young ex-truck driver, with a deadly left hand wallop when it landed, and Mickey Walker, the former world's welterweight champion. This affair drew $47,000 and seemed to depend for its popularity upon Callahan's former ability of flattening his opponents in one or two rounds.

Since the enactment of the law legalizing 10 round glove fights to a decision, matches of all sorts have been staged. Various promoters have attempted to emulate the success of Tex Rickard, but to date most of them have wound up owing themselves money. The small neighborhood promoters, staging contests in the outlying sections of the city have been the ones who have prospered. This is chiefly because they have charged prices ranging from $1 to $3 and the boxers are neighborhood youths who have followings.

To Issue One Permit a Month.

Jim Mullen has been the leading promoter in staging contests of major importance, but the majority of his shows, with the exception of the Callahan-Walker affair, were financial flops. Mullen had an opportunity to recoup his losses with the Bud Taylor-Charley Phil Rosenberg bantamweight match, but the commission ordered the bout cancelled.

Chairman John Righeimer of the commission believes that by restricting each promoter to one permit a month, the boxing public will not be surfeited by the sport. He also intends to carefully consider all applicants for permits, and to issue them to promoters considered reliable. There are 43 promoters licensed to operate in Chicago, but most of them have lost all the money they care to lose as a result of their promotional ventures.

The state athletic commission insures the payment of all purses by insisting upon the posting of the money in advance of the contest, so that the promoters rather than the boxers are the losers when the house falls short.

Louis Gremillion Ruled Ineligible

New Orleans, December 10.—(AP) Louis Resney Gremillion, galloping back of the Loyola undefeated gridiron team, has been ruled ineligible to play after this season, under the three-year rule of the southern conference.

Grenmillion, rated by many on a par with Buck Moore, was ruled ineligible by President S. V. Sanford, of the southern conference, after the problem had been submitted to the eligibility committee of the conference by Loyola authorities. Gremillion has been mentioned as a likely candidate for the captaincy of the team.

Four other three-year men will be lost to Loyola under the ruling in Captain A. D. Smith, of this year's team, Johnny Holmes, Walter Maloney and Ray Stulb.

In the absence of a freshman team when the five came to Loyola, they played on the varsity and each of the players have had three years of varsity football. The freshman rule was adopted at Loyola last year.

GOOD SEASON IS PREDICTED FOR EPWORTH

The opening round of the Epworth league just finished last week went over with a bang in the opinion of the league officials. The playing and the spirit of the teams in the league was very pleasing to the ones backing the league.

Large crowds attended almost every game played in the opening round and everything points to one of the most successful seasons in the history of the league. The league has only one court at its disposal and a lot of the teams in the league have not had a chance to show their wares. Next week brings four new teams on the court. Everyone is anxious to see just what kind of outfits they have.

The games last week brought out material that was very promising and if they keep up their present pace there will be some mighty fine games on the Wesley court this season.

The boys are not the only ones who have a chance in this league. There are a number of mighty fine girl teams in one of the leagues and the ones that have already played brought the house to its feet on a number of occasions. There is no boy team in the league that can show as much fight as these girl teams.

The following schedule will be in effect December 20.

Monday, December 13.

6:30 p. m.: St. Marks against Wesley Memorial (girls).
6:45 p. m.: Capitol View against Park Street (boys).
7:30 p. m.: College Park against Wesley Memorial (boys).
7:50 p. m.: St. Paul against St. John (boys).

Thursday, December 16.

6:45 p. m.: Calvary against Grace (girls).
7:30 p. m.: Calvary against Kirkwood (boys).
7:50 p. m.: Oakland City against Center Street (boys).

CONFERENCE BOXING MEET AT VIRGINIA

University, Va., December 11.—The first boxing tournament of the southern conference will be held at the University of Virginia during the first week in March according to announcement made by D. E. Brown, graduate manager of athletics at Virginia, who is on the boxing committee of the conference.

The exact date of the meet will be fixed by the committee which includes Forrest Fletcher, of Washington and Lee; Colonel D. B. Poague, of Virginia Military institute, and R. F. Fetzer, of North Carolina, in addition to Mr. Brown.

From the South Atlantic states North Carolina, Washington and Lee, Virginia Military institute, Virginia Polytechnic institute, and the University of Virginia are certain to be represented. Florida has promised to send a team and Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia will attempt to arrange their schedules to include the meet. Other South Carolina teams are also expected to enter.

Virginia's boxing schedule has not been completed, but it will probably include most if not all of the conference members having teams in the South Atlantic states as well as two or three of the leading institutions of the north. The opening meet will probably be with Washington and Lee late in January.

Most of the members of the boxing squad have appeared in action in the public tryouts held last week when 600 people paid admission to see 12 exhibition matches. The sport is very popular at Virginia, the crowds at some encounters numbering 2,000 and more.

"Mike" Memminger, of Charleston, S. C., is captain of the boxers this year, and he heads a team that should continue the good ring reputation of the Virginians who have lost only two matches in the last four seasons. Johnny LaRowe is again coach of the mittmen.

Sports for All At Marquette U.

Milyaukee, Wis., December 11.—(Special.)—"Sports for all!"

That is the athletic program for Marquette university, since Kay Iverson, former winter sports director at the University of Wisconsin, stepped in to become intramural athletic head at Marquette.

Although Iverson has been at Marquette less than a year, his program of intramural sports, including as it does basketball, hockey, tennis, golf, baseball, handball, horseshoe pitching and other sports, already has reached 700 students. These early winter days find the gymnasium floor in use at all times.

Iverson also will coach the hockey team at Marquette this year and while the current prospects are now good, he has a fast freshman squad and is looking to the future. Marquette is a member of the Northern Interscholastic Hockey association which embraces 15 schools.

"Hockey is the fastest sport in existence," says Iverson. "It's the most thrilling, too. A man must be in perfect condition to play the game and must think fast. I consider a man good material for hockey only if he can skate at the rate of 30 miles an hour as long as he is in the game."

A rink for the Marquette varsity hockey squad is being completed on the practice field adjoining the gymnasium. Thirty men are out for both the varsity and freshman sextets, but Captain Rube Bergman is the only veteran from last year's aggregation.

Marquette opens its schedule against a state team the week of January 24, during the winter carnival at Wausau, Wisconsin.

Seven Conference Games Are Booked; Play Jackets Last

Athens, Ga., December 11.—(A.P.)—The University of Georgia Bulldogs of the football field next season will engage in 10 games. Seven games with members of the Southern conference, one inter-sectional game and two non-conference games form the 1927 schedule announced today. Yale will furnish the opposition in the inter-sectional clash.

The University of Georgia will play Tulane and Clemson next year, the Tulane game in New Orleans and the game with Clemson in Athens. The season will open with the University of Virginia on October 1 on the Georgians' home gridiron and will close December 3 with Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

October 1—University of Virginia, at Athens.
October 8—Yale, at New Haven.
October 15—Furman, at Athens.
October 22 — Auburn (Alabama Poly), at Columbus, Ga.
October 29—Tulane, at New Orleans.
November 5—University of Florida, at Jacksonville.
November 12—Clemson, at Athens.
November 19—Mercer University, at Athens.
November 24—University of Alabama, at Birmingham.
December 3—Georgia Tech, at Atlanta.

Indians Win

Led by Raymond Towery, stellar fullback, the Grant Park football wrecking crew defeated the Rinky Dinks for the Atlanta Sandlot gridiron championship of the 1926 season. The score was 14 to 0.

Towery played one of the best games seen in the Sandlot league this season. He was a threat at all times, both on defense and offense. He not only led his team in all round playing but scored one of the touchdowns and made a beautiful 45 off tackle dash to put the ball in position for another counter. Atkinson added the other counter to the score with a neat piece of running.

Ball booted the oval through the posts for the extra point after each of the scores.

V. M. I. BOOKS MANY RING, MAT MATCHES

Lexington, Va., December 11.—(Special.)—Five wrestling and four boxing meets have been scheduled for V. M. I. teams, according to Cadet J. H. Chapman, manager of both outfits. There is a possibility that one or two more meets in each sport will be added later.

Virginia, Penn State, North Carolina and V. P. I. will be met in order by the boxers, whose season opens on January 29. Six letter men are available for the Cadet ring squad, though Captain Duncan and Johnnie Sheffield, stars of last year's team, will be absent. Captain Bill Hardenburg is the outstanding candidate in the 115-pound class, and Doogher, Baker and Spilman are fighting it out for Duncan's place in the 125-pound division. Griffin and Giesen are the leading 135 and 145-pounders, respectively.

Men Well Matched.

Jamerson and Higgins are well matched in the middleweight division, as are Chambers and Griffith among the light heavies. Claude Moorman, undefeated heavyweight of last year's team, will represent V. M. I., in the unlimited class.

The team will be coached by Sergeant Michael Margulies, who has had fifteen years of experience in boxing in the regular army and national guard, as well as a fine record as boxing instructor at the Commonwealth club of Richmond.

The wrestling team, again coached by John Player, who turned out a southern conference championship team last year, will meet Franklin and Marshall, North Carolina, N. C. State, Virginia and V. P. I., in the order named. The first meet is slated for January 8, and the matmen are hard at work in preparation for a difficult schedule.

Mayfield and Woodward are candidates for the vacancy left by Captain White in the 115-pound class. Johnnie Wise was also lost by graduation, and Davis, Tarrall, and Myers are tussling for 125-pound honors. Wilson has the 135-pound class practically to himself, but Moss is giving Endicott a battle for the right to wrestle in the 145-pound division. Woodbury, Graber and Rugh all look good in the 158-pound class, and Fields is being pushed by Cartwright and Edmonds, light heavyweights. Captain Kulp and Jim Smith are easily the best of the heavyweights.

City Cage League Gets to 2nd Round

Although the Gulf Refining quintet has been added to the City basketball league, there remain only six clubs as the Federal Reserve has withdrawn. Federal Reserve decided that they were not strong enough for such a fast league.

At a vote taken by the representatives of the different teams Captain Fortier and "Shorty" Doyal were selected as referees and will work in the three games each night of the schedule.

Two rounds have been played but the games won from the Federal Reserve team will not count in the standing. This will leave the Georgia Railway and Power company, and the Knights of Columbus with perfect records of two wins each. The Southern Bell and Atlanta & Lowry National bank have lost one game each and the Terra Cotta five has suffered two defeats.

The Gulf Refining company will play its first game with the strong Southern Bell team Wednesday.

There will be another business meeting just prior to the first game.

The games will be played as follows:

Gulf Refining company vs. Southern Bell, at 7:30 o'clock.

Knights of Columbus vs. Atlanta & Lowry, at 7:50 o'clock.

Georgia Railway and Power company vs Terra Cotta, at 8:50 o'clock.

Wide Is Granted Invasion Permit

New York, December 11.—(AP)—Although the amateur athletic union recently announced its opposition to international track competition until after the 1928 Olympic meet, Edwin Wide, the famous Swede runner and conqueror of Paavo Nurmi, will be permitted to race here this winter.

An exception to the rule has been made in the case of Wide, Secretary F. W. Rubien announces, because the European star is not visiting America primarily to exhibit his athletic prowess. His purpose is to make an educational tour at the expense of his own country.

Wide, a schoolmaster, is due to arrive in New York next month.

BAT AVERAGES ARE UNHURT BY NEW RULE

Serious students of baseball were much concerned last spring lest the new sacrifice hit rule should play havoc with the batting records. They feared that by giving credit for a sacrifice when a fly ball merely advanced a runner without scoring him, batting percentages would be badly distorted and that men of no particular hitting ability might loom up as though they were real batsmen.

Actually no such thing happened, at least in the American league. Only 230 more sacrifice hits were scored in 1926 than in 1925, and if these 230 had not been allowed, the difference in the entire league's batting average would have been only .004. In other words, the American league batting average in 1926 was .284. Disallowing the additional 230 sacrifices, the average would have been .280. By which it will be seen that neither the rule makers nor their critics can always be sure in advance what will happen when changes are made in the playing code.

And instead of 1926 averages ranking higher than 1925 averages, the reverse is true. The American league's batting average in 1925 was .292, while the 1926 figure shows an eight-point drop.

At the end of 1925 no less than 30 100-game men showed averages of .300 or better. At the end of 1926 that number had been reduced to 23. At the end of 1925 Harry Heilmann led the league with an average of .393. This year, his teammate, Heinie Manush, leads with a percentage of .377—a drop of 16 points.

Every one of the leading ten batters of 1925 fell off in 1926. Note the figures:

Player—	1925	1926	Loss
Heilmann	.393	.367	26
Speaker	.389	.304	85
Simmons	.386	.343	43
Cobb	.378	.339	39
H. Roce	.359	.313	46
Lamar	.356	.284	72
E. C. Rice	.350	.337	13
E. Collins	.346	.344	2
Sisler	.345	.289	56
Hale	.345	.281	64

But not all the big hitters suffered the fate of declining batting averages. Note these increases:

Wallie Schang's transfer to St. Louis worked his rejuvenation. As against .240 in 1925 he hit .330 in 1926, a gain of 90 points.

Babe Ruth did a little comeback himself, increasing his average from .290 in 1925 to .375 in 1926, a gain of 82 points.

Heinie Manush hit only .303 in 1925. His 1926 figure of .377 represented a gain of 74 points.

Bib Falk gained 44 points; George Burns stepped up 22 points, and Goose Goslin added 19 points.

Johnny Mostil added 29 points: Lou Gehrig gained 18 and Bob Meusel advanced 22.

So that, while the league as a whole fell eight points, and while the leading ten batters of 1925 all declined in 1926, there were plenty of others who exhibited more batting prowess in 1926 than in 1925. And both classes all the men are admittedly real hitters. That is to [illegible] neither the declines nor the advance can be attributed to freak rules [illegible] mere happenstance. Some men were in better form than [illegible]

Two outstanding [illegible] record were the Yankees' home run and the Cleveland Indians' defense.

With 121 circuit drives to their credit, the Yankees were 49 such clouts ahead of the second best home run hitting aggregation, the St. Louis Browns.

Cleveland held opponents' runs to 612, which was exactly 101 less runs than opponents scored against the second best defense, New York's. But this in turn was offset a great deal by those New York homers, for the Yankees scored 109 more runs than Cleveland's 738. And after all it is runs scored (not opponents' runs held down), that wins pennants.

Aycock Is Winner Of Gold Putter

Lakeland, Fla., December 11.—(AP) T. J. Aycock, Jr., of the Timuquana Country club, of Jacksonville, won the solid gold putter in the three-day tournament which was finished this afternoon at the Cleveland Heights Golf club.

Aycock defeated H. K. B. Davis, of Dunedin, in the finals four up and three to play. He also won the medalist prize, a solid gold wrist watch.

The second flight was won by W. D. Duckwall, of Bradenton, a student in the University of Florida.

Other flight winners were: D. S. Menzies, of Lakeland, third flight; J. J. Stringfellow, Lakeland; fourth flight; R. D. Pope, Winter Haven, first flight consolation; H. A. Stahl, second flight, consolation; C. C. Price, Jr., Tarpon Springs, third flight consolation.

Many New Champions Approved

New York, December 11.—Many new faces appear in the ranks of athletic champions for 1926 officially designated by the Amateur Athletic union and released through The United News.

The A. A. U. rating applies only to sports over which that organization has jurisdiction, hence the qualifications of several real champions are overlooked.

Charley Borah, son of the famous republican senator from Idaho, has been named the champion sprinter of the year, while other new-comers to track and field prominence are George Sharkey, 200-yard champion; Kenneth Kennedy, 440-yard; Alva Martin, 880-yard, and Philip Osif, the Haskell Indian, who is named as the greatest in the country at six miles.

In the indoor list, a new name is that of Manny Lochnight of Buffalo, who is chosen by the A. A. U. as champion at 300 yards.

Incidentally, indoor events such as the pole vault and the septathlon, at which Charley Hoff of Norway demonstrated his superiority, are not included in the A. A. U. ratings.

A New Indian Runner In Limelight

Fast Indian Runners Again in Limelight

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Leoncio San Miguel, a Tarahuamara Indian, has made a new world's long distance running record. Leoncio won the 100 kilometer race from Pachuce, state of Hidalgo, to the City of Mexico. This is Mexico's marathon. It is more than a marathon, nearly three marathons in distance, being 62.1 miles. It is the greatest test of endurance in all the world's modern athletic contests.

Leoncio ran his 62.1 miles in 9 hours 37 minutes over trails and desert and paved roads, hills and plains.

During the race Leoncio's only nourishment was derived from chewing a gum called chicazopote, a species of chicle that comes from the roots of a pine that grows in the high Sierras of Chihuahua. The ancients used this same chicazopote during their long runs.

The Tarahuamara Indian, who knows no other language than his Indian dialect, is much like the ancient Indian inhabitants of Mexico, who have changed little since they were conquered by the Spaniards.

Those old Incas and Mayas were great fighters, athletes and runners. In South America there is an ancient Inca paved road across the Andes from the old Inca cities to the sea, a road 1,200 miles long. There is a tradition that the Inca emperors in the interior cities have fresh lobsters and salt water fish brought over that road by runners. There are still remains of stone post houses along the road, at intervals of about ten miles, where squads of runners waited to take up relays carrying the messages that bound the Inca empire together long before any white man set foot on the continent. According to tradition these runners covered tremendous distances each day, and probably they were the best trained and fastest runners the world has ever known. They had to be well trained, for their road crossed the mountains at great heights.

Leoncio's modern feat is hardly to be compared with marathon running in Greece and other countries, for the City of Mexico is at an elevation about equal to that of Denver in the United States. American athletes who have run in high altitudes can appreciate the difficulty of going through such a race.

Leoncio is almost a vegetarian, like most of the Indians in Mexico. His chief articles of food have been frijoles, or beans, and tortillas, cakes made of ground corn. He also eats dried venison, the meat of a large lizard that is considered a delicacy in some parts of Mexico, rabbits and chicken, all cooked with the Mexican red peppers.

With two or three other Mexican Indian runners Leoncio will be sent to run in some of the American marathon races next summer, and prepared in that way to compete in the next Olympic games. Athletic sports have become very popular in Mexico as well as in all the South American countries.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS.

one of the first-named four—a combination resulted which made the Soldiers look positively foolish and which would make almost any team show a masterful defense, or go down to defeat.

The usual procedure of the Bears seemed to be as follows: One line play, one end run and a touchdown play. We never quite discovered what the touchdown signal was but it seemed to work just the same.

The work of Wycoff, Jimmy Brewster, Ike Williams, Vaughn Connelly, John Murray and Cy Williams brought back memories of a Tech that is past, and these men are a credit to Tech even though they have forsaken the ranks of the amateurs and turned professional. The clean calibre of the game is to be remarked upon, particularly in view of the fact that many are prone to believe that pro football is rough and not always according to rule. We have seen some pro games in which there was much to criticize by way of roughness, but in the game Saturday both teams played the game cleanly. It has been said that Doug Wycoff and most of his teammates are playing the game for the love of it as well as for the money and the way the men performed Saturday would indicate that such is the case.

Wycoff was the old Doug when he pulverized the line for gains time after time and he performed one feat which brought the thousands to their feet in the final period. A long pass had placed the ball inside the Soldier 10-yard line and Doug was called to buck the line for the touchdown. He was caught by two men just as he passed the line of scrimmage, but they tackled high and he carried them both to within a yard of the goal before a third man caught him low and dropped him. It was a feat of strength such as only the great Wycoff could accomplish.

Art Newton, former star of Florida university, and Adrian Maurer, erstwhile Petrel, were the other great stars in the Bear backfield. Both Newton and Maurer made touchdown after touchdown around the ends behind the perfect interference furnished by Wycoff and the stalwart ends of the Newark outfit.

Ike Williams' toe and Jimmy Brewster's legs added their bits to the general slaughter, while Coach Hanson ripped the Tank line time and again for first downs.

The Bear passing combination was so perfect that a defense against it was almost impossible for the Soldiers. They completed nine heaves out of 12 tries—an enviable performance for any man's team.

The work of the Bears Saturday makes one wish that they could be seen in action against such a team as that of Red Grange or George Wilson. These two outfits meet here on Tuesday and we can not help but wonder if a game between the winner of the Tuesday game and the Wycoff team would not be a great spectacle.

Jacobs Takes Important Step

Oglethorpe university has taken a step which bids fair to mean much to the football fans of Atlanta and the south. The plan is for the Petrel schedule to open on October 15 and end on December 25. This was made possible by the change in date of the Tech-Oglethorpe game and will mean that the football fans will be able to watch college football in Atlanta every Saturday from early in October until Christmas.

Oglethorpe has had much trouble with the old system of schedules in getting home games without conflicting with the Tech schedule. Under the new plan the Petrels can play away from home for the early games and come back to Atlanta for three or four games after the Tech season is completed.

The decision of Oglethorpe will be watched with interest by the other members of the S. I. A. A. and may result in changing the whole system in that conference. We firmly believe that the move is a good one. Next season will tell the story. At any rate Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, who is responsible for the idea, deserves much credit for initiating such a radical move.

Spiller Takes Step To Build Up Team For Coming Season

Al Niehaus, Cracker first-sacker, has been sold to Little Rock, the cellar defenders of the Southern loop, according to announcement by Rell Jackson Spiller, the Cracker boss, Saturday.

Niehaus covered the initial bag for the Crackers during the 1926 season, beginning in the spring. He had been relegated back to the Crackers after a season with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Before then he had been with the Crackers for several years.

The transfer of Niehaus is another move of Spiller's to strengthen the Atlanta Crackers with the hopes of bringing home a Dixie gonfalon in 1927. But the problem lies in just who Spiller will get to replace the first sacker.

Niehaus' ball playing has been spotty throughout his connection with the Crackers. During the last season it wasn't so good.

In the years that preceded his trial in the big loops, Niehaus was a top rate first baseman. Then he slumped and came back to the Crackers. If he makes one of his characteristic returns, then Little Rock has annexed a good first baseman. The cash involved in the deal was not announced.

The incomplete exhibition game schedule for Atlanta in the pre-season time next year was announced by Spiller at the time he told of the passing of Niehaus.

It follows:

March 23: Crackers play Newark here.

March 25: Crackers play Rochester here.

March 26: Crackers play Rochester here.

April 1: Athletics play Crackers here.

April 2: Athletics play Crackers here.

April 4: Yankees play Cardinals here.

April 5: Washington plays Giants here.

April 6: Atlanta plays Brooklyn here.

April 7: Atlanta plays Brooklyn here.

April 9: Atlanta plays Albany here.

April 10: Atlanta plays Montgomery in Montgomery.

Howley Will Keep Sisler and O'Neil.

St. Louis, December 11.—Regardless of how Daniel Phillip Howley rearranges the Browns in his first term as a big league manager, he has already decided that George Sisler and Steve O'Neil will serve as the nucleus of his 1927 model.

"I'll consider any other deals for any of the players, but Sisler is going to be my first baseman and O'Neil will be the first string catcher," says the former Toronto pilot, who has signed a three-year contract to handle the destinies of the St. Louis American league club.

Howley, one-time coach for the Detroit Tigers, is the sixth manager to be hired by Magnate P. DeC. Ball since the 1915 season, when Ball transferred his interest from the Federal league to the American league. Fielder Jones, Jimmy Austin, Jimmy Burke, Lee Fohl and Sisler in turn directed the energies of the Browns.

Fans Want Sisler.

"I consider George Sisler one of the greatest of all ball players and certainly see no reason why he should be offered for trade simply because I am succeeding him as manager," says Howley.

"I want Sisler. The club wants Sisler, and the town wants Sisler. He is not on the block.

"Steve O'Neil will be used as a player and not as a coach. Let's get straight on that point. O'Neil caught 136 games with me at Toronto last summer. He was by far the best catcher in the league. Right now I am considering him the first string receiver for the Browns. I am willing to be shown, of course, but I know O'Neil. He is better today than he was with the Indians several years ago. Steve is the greatest of all comebacks in baseball.

O'Neil Refused.

"Those two—Sisler and O'Neil—are going to be the foundation of the team. Later I will separate the wheat from the chaff, but the status of Sisler and Steve might as well be established right now."

Sisler, harassed and handicapped by the burden of managerial duties, failed to hit .300 in 1925 for the first time in eight years. His fielding likewise fell off.

When he was relieved of his duties as pilot it was generally expected he would be traded.

But Howley says no. He wants Sisler. What's more, Sisler wants to remain in St. Louis.

O'Neil has turned down the bid of the Toronto owners, who offered him the manager's job to succeed Howley. He also refused an offer from Donie Bush to coach at Pittsburgh.

WRIGLEY SEA DERBY TO END ARGUMENTS

BY DAN CAMPBELL.

Los Angeles, December 11.—The sea-derby, which William Wrigley, Jr., will stage across the Catalina channel with a purse of $25,000 dangling at the end of a successful swim, will afford an opportunity to settle a number of international aquatic differences.

Some of the most famous swimmers of the world have already signified their intention to compete January 15 in the 23-mile swim across the placid blue waters that stretch from Catalina island to Los Angeles harbor and all that remains to give the swim a decidedly championship flavor is the entry of Gertrude Ederle.

While "Trudy" has not signified her intention of being among those present, word has been received that Ernest Vierkotter, the German who bettered Miss Ederle's time across the English channel by one hour and 47 minutes, intends to compete.

Vierkotter, according to dispatches, claims Miss Ederle had indicated a desire to challenge him, and officials managing the coming race express the belief that the conditions here will be ideal for such competition.

Swimmers from all parts of the country are arriving weekly and the problem of staging the event, with so many swimmers and their accompanying tugs has become a serious one, according to President J. H. Patrick, of the Catalina company.

Henry Sullivan, first American to swim the English channel and Charles Toth, also a conqueror of the same body of water, arrived here from Boston recently by separate routes and a newspaper reported found them attempting to train secretly.

They admitted that they had been going in the water for several hours daily undergoing preliminary work. Sullivan said the water in the Catalina channel is colder than on the Atlantic coast in summer, but about the same temperature as the English channel.

As for ground sharks in the Catalina channel, he said there are also plenty of the same variety in the English channel. Sullivan declared they might prove curious and come close to the swimmer, but that there was little chance of any of them attempting to bother a swimmer, especially where there is plenty of sea life for food.

Since Wrigley first made known his plan for a marathon, a score of swimmers have attempted to swim the channel, but all have failed. The closest any swimmer ever came to a successful try was in September, 1923 when Art Banfield came within three miles of his goal. The backwash from the Japanese earthquake prevented him from finishing.

Penn Prepares For Cage Card

Philadelphia, Pa., December 11.—Faced with the most extensive schedule in many years, Eddie McNichol, coach of the University of Pennsylvania basketball team, may be forced to use two teams in important games.

Fifteen players, a great number of whom have their letters, have been practicing for the past month. The coaching staff which includes Danny McNichol, famous star of five years ago, is at a loss to name the five best men.

At present three of the members of the first five were on the freshman quintet of last year which lost one game. Joseph Schaaf, of this city; Tom Magner, of Waterbury, Conn., and H. S. Mosher, of Palmyra, New York.

Captain Paul Davenport, serving his second successive season as leader of the team, at one forward and Menchy Goldblatt, star guard of the past two seasons, at his old post, are the only veterans on the first quintet.

The second team contains Connell, a veteran and Noble, a freshman last year, at forwards, Becker, a yearling at center, and Lukaswitz, letter man from the 1925-26 season, and Lorms, a freshman last year at guards.

Bermuda Mermaids.

Mermaids representing the Women's Swimming association, of New York, will splash in Bermuda waters for the next week or two. A group including Helen Meany, Agnes Geraghty and Martha Norelius, all holders of national championships, left yesterday to compete in the island's annual aquatic carnival.

TWO CITIES ASK WESTERN GOLF MEET

Chicago, December 11.—(AP)—Westward the seductive golf ball wends its way, so that demands for the staging of championship tournaments came to the annual meeting of the Western Golf association tonight from points far occidental to the center of population which is just south of Chicago. Not only was St. Paul anxious to entertain the western open title meet, but Seattle wanted the amateur meet, which was won last year at St. Paul by Frank Dolph, of Portland, Ore.

In pleading these invitations it was recalled that the United States Golf association virtually promised to take the national amateur title tourney to California, where the crown now rests on the head of George Von Elm of Los Angeles, a city that boasts fifty golf courses.

The association reelected most of its officers without opposition. The administration was again headed by Hobart P. Young, Chicago, as president. At the head of the nominating committee for 1927 is Melvin A. Traylor, of Chicago, president of the First National bank. He also is vice president of the United States Golf association. His confreres are Harlan Priton, of Spokane; C. H. Harmon, of Pasadena; I. O. Osbun, of Birmingham, and W. G. Graves, of St. Paul.

Tunney Cleared In Law Tangle

New York, December 11.—(AP)—Attorney General Albert Ottinger, in an opinion forwarded to the state athletic commission today, said that the appearance in a vaudeville boxing exhibition of Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, was not in violation of the state boxing law. The champion was arrested November 20 on a charge of appearing in an unlicensed exhibition during a vaudeville performance in a local theater and a hearing was set for December 22.

While Attorney General Ottinger cannot intervene in the case, his opinion as to the legality of the exhibition had been asked by the state athletic commission and by District Attorney Banton.

Crucial Test for Fistic Game Looms in Coming Year

Rickard and Fugazy Fight For Supremacy Among Heavyweights

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, December 11.—Professional boxing, although it enjoyed the most lucrative period of its history during 1926, enters the new year beset by dangers.

For boxing, as conducted today, is its own worst enemy. The public likes it, and has just paid an unprecedented sum to witness it during the past 12 months.

In the two largest cities of the United States, however, where boxing naturally would be expected to make the most money, those who depend upon the game for a livelihood are none too happy over the situation.

Tex Rickard isn't going to build a fight arena in Chicago, and Humbert J. Fugazy, his rival, isn't going to build one in New York.

The situation in Chicago is quite different from that in this city. The latest "Chicago decision," which transferred the middleweight championship to Mickey Walker and Jack Kearns, hasn't helped to stabilize boxing in Illinois. The game there is on a none too firm foundation—and that is precisely the kind of foundation Tex Rickard does not build upon.

Fugazy Ambitious.

In New York, it is the war between Rickard and "Jack" Fugazy which makes the boxing situation precarious and uncertain. Inspired by his success in staging the Berlenbach-Delaney fight, the Italian-American promoter had ambitions to beat "Tex" at the latter's own game.

But while Fugazy still was talking about building a fight club in this city, Rickard stepped out and obtained a "corner" on the heavyweight market by taking Jack Sharkey, of Boston away from his rival.

Now it has been announced that Humbert J. will turn to Jersey City as the scene of his next big fight, which will feature Jack Delaney and Bud Gorman in a Christmas fund boxing show.

The promoters still warring over the services of the most popular boxers, there may be more fighting done with injunctions than with padded fists during the next few months.

Rickard Ahead.

When the outdoor season rolls around, the battle of promoters will reach a climax, for Rickard has won the first round and cornered the cream of performers for the indoor shows.

Fugazy obtained a lease on the Polo grounds for next summer. Rickard promptly tried to buy the baseball park.

Tex's rival has been a boxer and a banker; he knows fights, and he also knows the value of a dollar.

Both promoters know that the one sure-fire attraction that will draw the dollars of the fight fans is a heavyweight scrap. Anyone who sat through the fiasco at Madison Square Garden while Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, was vainly pommeling Franz Diener, of Germany, must have marveled at the size of the crowd.

Marvelous Gate.

The "gate" for this second-rate exhibition was $50,000.

With all the emphasis upon heavyweights, it was useless for Fugazy to try to buck against Rickard during the indoor season.

Tex plans to start an elimination contest, he says, with the idea of selecting a suitable opponent for Gene Tunney. The promoter has Sharkey, Maloney, Diener, Harry Persson and Paolino, the Basque woodchopper to shuffle around. Naturally, the suggestion of an elimination contest will tend to attract bigger crowds when these mastodons strike up acquaintance with the canvas in Madison Square Garden.

No one knows better than Rickard, however, that the "big shot" next summer will be a return bout between Jack Dempsey and the new heavyweight champion, after both have knocked over a set-up or two.

It is just because boxing is becoming so much a big business that those who run it can afford to ignore the commands of the New York state athletic commisison that many friends of the game hope the promoters will tread warily during the coming year.

Leo Murphy Seeks To Stage Comeback

Leo Murphy, catcher, who deserted the Milwaukee club eight years ago, had a conference with Owner Brochert of the American association club recently with a view of returning to organized ball.

Altoona Has Biggest Swim Pool in World

The Ivyside park swimming pool, near Altoona, Pa., is the largest in the United States. This pool is 185 feet wide by 625 feet long. It accommodates 3,000 persons with full bathhouse facilities.

FEATURE GAME SLATED FOR Y CHURCH LOOP

The second round in the "Y" Church Athletic association will be played this week with the eight teams of the Dixie league meeting Tuesday, and the eight teams of the Sewanee loop playing their games on Thursday. All 11 games are to be played on the "Y" court. Holt and Collins will referee Tuesday's games and Kopf and Fat Elrod will officiate in Thursday's games.

The feature game of the week should be between the Prep class and the Anchor five. Both teams have unusually strong quintets. The game will be played at 7:50 o'clock and should attract a large crowd.

The teams in the two leagues are made up of many former cage stars. Some of the teams have some former grid stars in their lineup. The games for the first week were very good and showed that most of the players are in good condition and able to play a fast game from start to finish.

The teams will no doubt show improvement as time permits as there is plenty of good material. Judging from the first week playing there was no one outstanding team in the Sewanee league and the games in this circuit will always be closely contested.

The games for the week will be:

Dixie League.

College Park vs. Epworth Workers at 6:30.

Western Heights vs. Giddeons at 6:50.

Anchor Class vs. Pep Class at 7:50.

Patillo Memorial vs. Wesley Memorial at 8:10.

Sewanee League.

Anchor Feds vs. Confederate Avenue at 6:30.

First Methodist vs. Boethians at 6:50.

West End Presbyterians vs. F. E. F. Class at 7:50.

Third Baptist vs. All Saints at 8:10.

Court Battles May Replace Ring Activities

New York, December 11.—Boxing may soon be lifted from the realm of sport to become an important branch of American jurisprudence, fortified with a whole array of precedents and judicial rulings.

Briefs may soon take the place of padded gloves and attorneys function where the old-time trainers and handlers were wont to attend the principals.

Jack Dempsey, defendant, is as well known as Jack Dempsey, former champion, and the last news of Gene Tunney, the polysyllabic champion, issued from a courtroom.

Must Attend Court.

Fight patrons, looking forward to the important bouts of the coming year, must first witness a series of legal actions and injunction proceedings before they see physical encounters if the threats of Tex Rickard and Humbert J. Fugazy are carried out.

In the current skirmish in the war between the fight mogul and contender for promotion supremacy the bone of contention is not the champion, but a possible challenger for the heavyweight crown in the person of Jack Sharkey, who recently laid the Harry Wills ghost.

Rickard is planning upon the services of Sharkey in his contemplated elimination series to pick a challenger for Gene Tunney's title. Tex maintains that Sharkey will be free of contract obligations to Fugazy after February 1, and has intimated his intention to go to court to prove it.

Fugazy declares that Rickard is quite mistaken concerning the terms of the contract between himself and Sharkey, explaining that the February 1 clause merely refers to the date before which he must offer Sharkey a bout, not the time before which the actual fighting shall take place. He also is willing to submit his claims to a court of justice for a ruling.

Sees Sharkey's End.

GEORGIA FIVE BEATS 'PHONE BOYS, 52 TO 21

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., December 11.—Piling up an early lead and showing flashes of real form, Georgia's Bulldog cage team was offered little opposition here tonight in the opening game of the season with the Southern Bell quintet, of Atlanta. The final score was 52 to 21.

From the opening whistle the outcome was never in doubt as the Red and Blackers shoved into an early lead and were never in danger. Coach Stegeman used practically every member of the squad in the opener, with the score steadily mounting.

The passing and general work of the Bulldogs was of a high brand and as the first half ended, the Bulldogs enjoyed the long end of a 28 to 8 count.

Keen Leads Attack.

George Keen, of Atlanta, was the big gun of the Bulldog attack, contributing 18 points to lead in the scoring department, although he played slightly more than one-half of the game. His floor game was excellent also. Hoyt Turner and "Babe" Florence were next in the Bulldog limelight, scoring 11 and 8 points, respectively.

Captain Walter Forbes was not injected into the game until the closing few minutes of the initial half, due to reporting late as the result of the past grid season activities.

Jimmie Harris was the only new face in the starting lineup tonight and he showed up to advantage. Dudley Cook and Hollis Morris, both of Atlanta, looked well in the opening game. Cook annexed a trio of neat goals.

Horace Smith, former member of the Bulldog squad, was best for the visitors, caring for a guard position in good style. Slater, forward, also stood out in the visitors' performance, and these two along with Cain, shared scoring honors with six points apiece.

George's next game is with Fort McPherson here next Saturday.

Spanish Stars Puts It Over on Net Fans

The Spanish tennis star, Senorita Alverez, "put one over" on tennis fans during the hard court games at Cromer, England. It was announced that "Senor Alonso," from Spain, would play in a men's foursome, and the game duly came off. It was only at the end of the game that onlookers found that the Senor Alonso, in white trousers, sweater and big cap, they had been watching was the Spanish woman star.

CONFERENCE TRACK CHAMPIONS

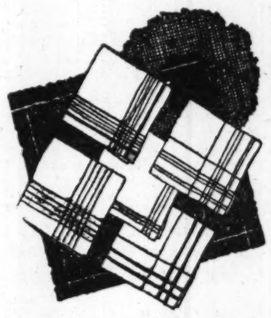

The University of North Carolina cross-country team, which ended the season by winning the state championship, recently won the Southern conference championship meet held at the University of Georgia. This means that the Tar Heels have won two southern championships in track in the brief period of a half year, for they took the title in the conference meet in all events held at Chapel Hill last spring. Reading from left to right, members of the team are: Coach Dale Ranson, R. R. Tilley, Bahama; H. E. Cox, Erwin, Tenn.; B. H. Goodwin, Elizabeth City; H. N. Brown, Chapel Hill; H. B. Pritchett, Greensboro; Captain A. F. Daniels, Charlotte, and Galen Elliott, Washington, N. C. Elliott holds the conference record of 4 minutes 21.2 seconds for the mile, and was the individual winner of the five-mile race in the cross-country meet in the time of 26 minutes, 45.6 seconds.

COAST TO COAST RECORD FOR CADILLAC

The recent record-breaking cross-country run from San Diego, Calif., to Savannah, Ga., by Colonel Ed. Fletcher, a San Diego business man, marks the second time within the last 15 months that a Cadillac car has established a coast-to-coast speed record.

Another "business men's tour" which also established a speed record was that of Thomas P. Henry, president, and Ernest N. Smith, general manager, of the American Automobile association, undertaken last year for the purpose of demonstrating that with modern highways and today's reliable motor cars, trans-continental tours may be carried through on definite, prearranged schedules. At that time, the "Three A" car left zero mile stone, Washington, D. C., Sunday, August 30, 1925, at 11 a. m., arriving in Oakland, Calif., at dawn the following Friday, making the 3,127-mile run in 96 hours, 15 minutes of actual driving, at an average speed of 32.48 miles per hour. The car was specially equipped with sleeping arrangements in the tonneau so that the officials might drive continually night and day.

Colonel Fletcher has just finished his cross-continent run in a car of the same type, the family's year-old seven-passenger Cadillac sedan. Leaving San Diego at 4 o'clock in the morning, October 20, he reached Savannah at 3:15 Saturday morning, October 23, having covered 2,535 miles in 71 hours and 15 minutes, at an average speed of 35.53 miles per hour. This trip also wins for the southland the laurels for the shortest and quickest coast-to-coast motor car run on record and calls attention to the rapid development of highways there.

Upon his arrival in Savannah, Colonel Fletcher paid high tribute to the modern automobile and to the principles of automotive construction which make such trips possible. An astonishing lesson, according to the colonel, is that the modern car can stand such service and still be ready for the return journey as though this had been only a day's pleasure trip.

Colonel Fletcher, who is president of the Borderland highway and a good roads enthusiast, made the trip, not as a racing stunt, but for the purpose of drawing attention to the high state of development of southern highways at a time when the southland is calling to northern tourists. Another reason was to arrive in the east for a return inspection and conference trip over the Old Spanish trail.

Because of the rapid development of the whole south, the time has come, according to Colonel Fletcher, for all sections of the south to come together, complete this southern trunkline from San Diego through to St. Augustine, Fla., and make it the best known and best improved highway in the United States. At the present time he is making the return trip in easy stages, conducting a campaign for the early completion of the highway, which he declares is the only one open and free from ice and snow for the entire year; the only all-day, all-night, all-year trunkline artery possible, important both commercially and as a recognized military asset. A total of $62,000,000 is being placed for this gigantic improvement, of which amount present building operations represent $15,000,000.

F. B. STEARNS CO. PLANS ANNOUNCED

The announcement is made by H. J. Leonard, president of the F. B. Stearns Company of Cleveland, Ohio, that sales and production plans for this organization for 1927 will be the greatest in the history of the company.

This is the first definite announcement of 1927 policies to be made by any of the major manufacturers in the luxury group of motor cars. It comes close on the heels of the biggest year in the history of the company and calls for a doubling of any past production figures.

This is the first year of operations of the F. B. Stearns company under the direction of the new and powerful financial interests which associated themselves in the conduct of the company early this year.

During the past 12 months the organization has balanced its inventory, cleaned up its stock of cars, eliminated its field stock and developed and presented an entirely new line of automobiles.

It is in excellent financial condition with its quick assets six times greater than its liabilities.

Snce the introduction of the new models in September, sales have increased in a highly satisfactory manner. October showed an increase of 50 per cent over September, and November exceeded October by 33 per cent at a time when the usual expectation is that sales will start to drop off.

With such activities in the field, production figures for 1927 have been set at a new high level. The dealer and distributor organization has been materially strengthened during the past few months. At the present time, the company is well represented at all major distribution points and its field organization of dealers is larger than ever before.

In the luxury car group, the production attained by the F. B. Stearns company establishes it as one of the leaders, a position which, according to Mr. Leonard, is well supported by public interest in the Knight sleeve-valve motor.

"Recent developments in this power plant," says Mr. Leonard, "have brought the general recognition of its advantages to a high point.

"Foreign developments are the same as those in this country in this regard. The most conspicuous quality cars at the Paris Salon and the Olympic show, in London were those equipped with Knight sleeve-valve motors.

"Our dealers are finding the greatest sales volume among owners who have used many makes of other types of cars and an interesting fact in this connection is that we rarely ever lose a customer who has once driven a Knight motored car."

Whippet Goes From Lowest to Highest Points on Earth

WHIPPET MAKES UNUSUAL RUN

Ther are no Sahara deserts in the United States and most of the desert country is covered by roads that are easily traversed by the average automobile.

But here and there are still stretches which are equivalent in the tax they put upon a car to the world-famous route covered by M. Citreon, of France, when he put one of his caterpillar type motor cars across the vast expanse of shifting sand in northern Africa.

R. D. McKay, of Wichita, Kan., found such a stretch a short time ago in the dry bed of the Arkansas river between Wichita and Hutchinson Kansas.

Slipping sands, occasional "muck" holes, and not infrequent beds of quicksand make this uncharted route one of considerable hazard. Interest is added by the fact that, eight inches below the surface water may be found.

Choosing a Whippet for the trip, and carrying a load of four men averaging 150 pounds each, he "shoved off" from Wichita into the sunbaked river bottom. The start was made at 9:25 o'clock in the morning, and four hours later, 40 miles down the way, a stop was made for food. The chief event of the first 40 miles was the routing of great flocks of blue herons which had gathered around the occasional water holes. At times during the first 40 miles the Whippet was driven at a speed of better than 25 miles an hour, and once during this initial portion of the trip, it was necessary to dig the wheels out of quicksand into which they had dropped well over the hubs.

The picturesqueness of the trip was added to by the occasional sig ting of great, black groups of turtles around small, stagnant pools, and by the scattering evidences of buzzard feasts indicated by the bleached bones of fish.

Following the stop for food, the trip was continued over a long, muddy stretch with the water sometimes covering the wheels half way up to the hubs. Here only the expert handling by the driver and continuous driving at high speed kept the wheels on solid footing.

The sand acted like a huge suction machine pulling the wheels down into thesoft footing.

Fifty-three miles from the start the depth of the water forced the abandonment of the drive, but these 53 miles put the Whippet to a desert test which, it is entirely unlikely, can be exceeded anywhere in the country.

PREVIOUS WEEKLY RECORD BROKEN BY DODGE DEALERS

Retail deliveries of 4419 new motor cars and trucks by Dodge Brothers' dealers in United States and Canada during the week ended November 27 have exceeded all previous weekly records established during the last quarter of any year. Compared with the previous week this year the gain is 37.9 per cent and compared with the corresponding week of 1925 when 2,595 cars were sold the gain is 70.3 per cent.

Deliveries during the four weeks of November totaled 14,676 units, a substatial increase over the preceding four weeks of October and a gain of 3,854 units over the corresponding four weeks of November, 1925, or 35.6 per cent.

The official figures just released by the United States department of commerce showing production of motor cars and trucks in the United States and Canada during the first 10 months of this year lend interest to the excellent 1926 records established by Dodge Brothers, Inc.

Total production of motor cars and trucks in the United States and Canada during the first ten months of 1926, was 4,026,879, compared with 3,638,159 during the corresponding month of 1925, a gain of over 10 per cent. From January 1 to November 1 this year Dodge Brothers, Inc., in its plants in United States and Canada has produced and sold 308,641 motor vehicles against 226,848 during the same period last year, a gain of 36.1 per cent. Comparing progress over a longer period Dodge Brothers' gain over the first ten months of 1925 is 109.9 per cent; that of the industry, 16 per cent.

"These official records," says F. E. Moffeet, of the F. E. Moffett, Inc., local dealer, "show that Dodge Brothers' gain to date this year is more than three times as great as that of the entire industry and that Dodge Brothers' production during three years has grown over 6 1-2 times as much as the total of all American motor car manufacturers. I can conceive of no more convincing evidence of the increasing popularity of the present type of car which Dodge Brothers have built over 1,800,000 in 12 years."

COMPARE PISTON WITH HUMAN HEART

Contrary to the general idea, the human heart is not the hardest working piece of machinery which remains in reliable service, according to engineering executives of the Hudson Motor Car company. In fact, compared with the action of a piston in an automobile, the heart is considerable of a sluggard, they say.

These figures are pointed out: The pulsations of a heart are normally about 70 to the minute, whereas a motor traveling 30 miles an hour will be turning over more than 2,000 times a minute. In this period there will be twice that number of pulsations for each piston, or more than 4,000. Thus the piston action in a motor is at the rate of around 60 times that of the heart. Or, put another way, a piston pulsates as much in a minute as the heart in an hour.

"This fact is most important to the motor buyer," said C. H. Becker, of the Goldsmith-Becker company, Hudson-Essex distributor, "because it illustrates to him the importance of light but strong piston construction. If such a terrific rate of activity is multiplied by heavy pistons or other reciprocating parts in the motor, we can easily understand its destructive force. If the pistons are light, this burden on the motor is greatly lessened.

"Up to a few years ago, it was almost universal practice in the motor car industry to use heavy cast-iron pistons. But for the past few seasons many quality cars including Hudson and Essex have adopted the aluminum-alloy piston, which weighs from 33 to 40 per cent less than a cast-iron piston of similar construction. These pistons are more expensive, and are another example of how progressive automobile firms have adopted lighter and stronger materials in important units of construction. The result is a much smoother and a longer-lived motor. These pistons are all the more satisfactory since it has been possible to fit them more closely in the cylinder—an every-day problem with them.

"Hudson and Essex cars have these pistons as a basic item of their design. In both these cars, too, the super-six principle minimizes all motor pulsations, actually preventing vibration before it happens."

More Value than the Price Suggests

In the year just drawing to a close the price of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars was materially lowered.

Yet during this period more important improvements were incorporated than in any year in Dodge Brothers history. Advances were made in engineering and body designs. The cars possess a greater degree of smoothness, silence and ease. They are more comfortable, more beautiful.

Current prices—made possible, of course, by constantly mounting sales—are therefore not an obvious measure of value. Prices, in fact, have never told the full story of Dodge Brothers dependability and basic worth.

But now, more than ever before, there is far more value than the price suggests.

HARVESTER COMPANY ANNOUNCES SHOWING SIX-CYLINDER TRUCK

The International Harvester Company of America has on display at its local branch a new line of International Speed trucks. This line consists of 1 1-4 and 1 1-2-ton units, each of which may be had with four or six-cylinder engines. The four-cylinder models are powered by an L-head engine of 3 3-4-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. The six-cylinder jobs are equipped with a highly-developed engine of similar type, with 3 1-4-inch bore and 4 1-2-inch stroke. Bodies for every speed hauling requirement are also readily available.

Notable improvements are incorporated at many points in the chassis. The frame of models S-24 and S-26, the 1 1-4-ton jobs, is six inches in depth, and there are nine cross members in frame of models SL-24 and SL-36, 1 1-2-ton capacity, insuring ample strength and rigidity. By shackling the rear springs in the SL jobs at top of brackets, instead of below, as in conventional practice, the springs are seated on top of the axle, yet the frame is held to 18 1-8 inches above ground.

The engine in all models is mounted in frame by three-point suspension, the rear mounting being of the banjo type. This relieves the engine of all the twisting strains, lengthening its life and facilitating service, when it is necessary, by permitting removal of either engine or transmission without disturbing the other.

The wheelbase of the model S units is 130 inches; of model SL, 160 inches. All-metal wheels are regular equipment. They add much to the appearance and are sturdy and durable. Many other details, such as adjustable accelerator foot rest and seat backs, easy steering and cowl ventilator add much to the driver's comfort.

PRIDE IN NAME SOLD FIRST PONTIAC

Regardless of where we roam, there is no place like home—and the farther we get away from home the greater boosters we become for the home town.

In the spring of this year, P. C. Weller, a traveling salesman, happened to be in Reno, Nev. Strolling down the main street, he saw a car that he had never seen before, being driven toward him. When the care came to a stop, he examined the car and was startled to see "Pontiac" on the nameplate, with an Indian head as radiator cap emblem.

"Is that car made in Pontiac, Mich.?" he asked the driver.

"This is a new car, the Pontiac six, made in Pontiac, Mich., by the Oakland Motor Car company," replied the driver. "It's the first of these cars to be delivered to any dealer in the state of Nevada."

"Say, I'm from Pontiac, Mich.," stated Mr. Weller, a warmth of local pride surging up, "and if that car is made in Pontiac, it's a good car. Sell it to me now and I will take it."

"A check was signed and turned over to the dealer (who was driving the car) and Mr. Weller drove off. Last week he returned to Pontiac, Mich., to enter the real estate business and incidentally visited the Oakland factories with his Pontiac car—the speedometer showing a roaming of 18,000 miles.

Mr. Weller related that he had to travel throughout the entire western section of the country as a salesman from his headquarters in Portland, Ore. The extent of his travels and the types of roads he traversed may be gleaned from the fact that twice he was in Mexico, twice in British Columbia, Canada, up and down the entire length of the Pacific highway, across the Sierra Nevada mountains eight times, numerous trips over the Cascade mountains and across the Rocky mountains once.

The highest elevation the car reached was at Steamboat Springs, near Denver, a height of 11,648 feet above sea level, yet this and other high elevations had no effect whatsoever on the operation of the engine, Mr. Weller stated. During the entire trip the pan was never taken off the motor nor any repairs made, save the replacing of two original tires at Denver on the trip to Pontiac, Mich.

"I'll tell the world anything made in Pontiac is good and if my trip didn't prove it, I don't know what could," finished Mr. Weller, still the native son with native pride—regardless of where he roamed.

POOR COLLECTIONS CLOSE KITE BANK

Wrightsville, Ga., December 11.—(AP)—For the second time this year the Citizens Bank of Kite, at Kite, Ga., failed to open Friday morning. J. E. Clark, president, said the low price of cotton was responsible, in that collections have been poor.

We'll Say It's a Load

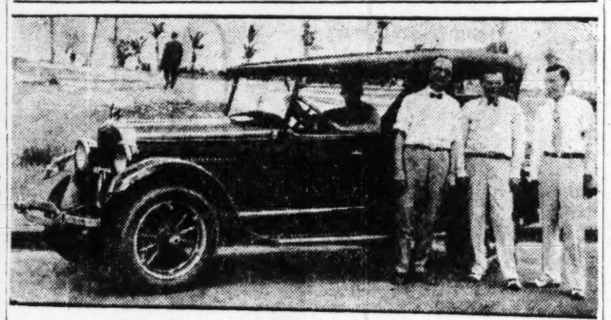

The adage that "nobody loves a fat man" is refuted by three large gentlemen of Burbank, Calif., where they are engaged by the studios of the First National Pictures. This trio of movie stars firmly believes that the designer of The President, Studebaker's new Bix Six custom sedan, had a warm spot in his heart for all obese gentlemen.

The fat men are Fatty Alexander, who weighs 425 pounds; Kewpie Ross, who tips the scales at 315 pounds, and Fat Karr, who is exactly 300 pounds heavy.

"The doors of The President are 26 inches wide," said Fatty Alexander. "I can get in and out of this car with comfort. You'll admit that it is pretty hard to find a sedan door that will accommodate a man who weighs 425 pounds, but this Studebaker will do it. I have never been wedged in the doors. And after I get in the car I find plenty of room, too. My friends here, Kewpie and Fat, both agree with me. The man who designed that car certainly had sympathy for his larger brethren. No longer is it necessary for us to use a shoe horn to get into a closed car."

The incident of the three fat men recalls the story of one Studebaker dealer who has a standing offer to pay $25 to any fat man in his locality who suffers discomfort or humiliation trying to get in or out of the Studebaker President. The offer has been standing for sometime now and the Studebaker dealer has not yet been required to pay his $25.

Oldsmobile Donated to Florida Relief Work

As soon as the appeal was issued by the Red Cross for help to alleviate the distress of the recent hurricane which struck Florida, A. R. Glancy, president and general manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, Pontiac, Mich., wired the Oakland-Pontiac dealers at Miami to donate an Oakland Six touring car on behalf of the factory.

This car was delivered by Claude Nolan, president of the Oakland Miami company to the Red Cross for relief work in Miami. It was received by Henry M. Baker, national director of the Red Cross and immediately put into a much-needed service.

ITALY WINS GREAT AVIATION HONORS

That Italy is in the forefront of military aviation in Europe was clearly demonstrated at Newport News, Va., recently, when Major Mario de Bernardi established a new world record of 258.873 miles an hour driving a Macchi-Fiat monoseaplane. Flying with the wind, he actually attained the terrific speed of 272.13 miles an hour.

The Fiat engine which drove the plane was equipped with Champion spark plugs, showing that one American product is available to take advantage of latest aviation developments.

Nearly two years ago, after a series of exhaustive tests of all makes of spark plugs, the Italian government chose Champions for use in its military planes. The Italian flyer's success was largely due to the support which his government, particularly since the ascendency of Mussolini, has given to aviation development.

Major Bernardi's record feat was a most impressive illustration of the remarkable progress aviation has made in Italy, particularly, and throughout Europe in general.

Association Notes

The Atlanta Automobile Sales Managers' association, whose membership is made up of retail sales managers of automobile dealers, members of the Atlanta Automobile association, held a most interesting meeting Wednesday, 12:30 luncheon, at Capital City club, which was addressed by Wayne Hearne, a speaker of national prominence, who is visiting the big automobile dealer associations throughout the country, to acquaint them with developments in the automobile industry, particularly during the past year. Mr. Hearne is a practical salesman and sales manager himself, and he touched on a great many questions affecting the selling end of the automobile business, that proved intensely interesting to everyone present. The meeting was largely attended by both sales managers and their assistants, and on the completion of Mr. Hearne's address, resolutions were adopted thanking him for the splendid suggestions made, and extending to him an invitation to repeat his visit to Atlanta at the earliest practicable moment.

The officers of the Sales Managers' association are: Clarence Knowles, president; Elie McCord, vice president; I. P. Hicks, secretary-treasurer, and the active business management is handled from the executive offices of the Atlanta Automobile association, 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building.

At an interesting meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile Service Managers' association this week, a series of inspections were outlined, to begin right after the first of the year. The association is made up of service managers of retail automobile dealers, members of the Atlanta Automobile association. Once a month, the service managers will meet at a given place at noon, and proceed from there to one of the big automobile dealer's service stations on a tour of inspection, from 12 to 3 o'clock. Everything connected with the service station visited will be thoroughly studied, not only from the standpoint of service rendered, but also from the standpoint of system and forms used, in order to bring the efficiency of that particular service station up to the highest possible point. It is expected that through this practical method, a great deal of practical information will be placed at the disposal of every service manager in the association.

The officers of the Service Managers' association are: J. W. Riser, president; J. M. Bohler, vice president; M. B. Wilkes, secretary-treasurer, and the active business management is handled from the executive offices of the Atlanta Automobile association, 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building.

An enthusiastic meeting of the leading battery service dealers of Atlanta was held during the past week at the office of the Atlanta Automobile association, for the purpose of perfecting an organization of the battery dealers. Temporary organization was perfected, and the following dealers were nominated and appointed as a committee to arrange plans for a permanent organization:

J. B. Moore, Ansley Garage; F. L. Brandes, E. J. Williamson, Battery Sales company; W. W. Fritz, Jr., Paul Graves, Electric Storage Battery company; George F. Orgain, Exide Service company; H. G. Vaughn, Georgia Battery company; R. F. Smith, Perfection Battery and Light company; L. M. Byrd, South Side Battery company; E. C. Andrews, Southern Motor Equipment company.

Arrangements are being made for another meeting of the battery dealers to complete permanent organization, at 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building, next Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and notices are being sent out to the leading battery service stations of the city for this purpose. The newly organized Battery Service association promises to be one of the most useful factors in the life of the automotive industry of this section.

WHITE ANNOUNCES SIX-CYLINDER BUS

The big event at the A. E. R. A. convention in Cleveland, October 4 to 8, was the announcement by the White company of the introduction of a new 6-cylinder motor bus. Interest of the convention delegates, including electric railway and public utility operators from all over the country, centered on the White Six which was shown for the first time.

Walter C. White, president of the White company, in making the announcement of the new bus, gave this summary of outstanding mechanical features:

"One hundred horsepower engine; overhead valves; seven bearing crankshaft; four-wheel metal-to-metal air brakes; 9-inch balloon tires; double drop frame; two stage springs."

Explaining the introduction of the new bus model, President White made the following statement:

"The six-cylinder White anticipates as well as meets public demand. There is a new era in bus transportation; better highways are causing traffic to speed up; there is a need for more performance, for more power and speed under safe control—a public demand for a bus with thoroughbred lines and compactness, a bus that has the inseparable attributes of performance, economy and comfort.

"In the distinct field which the White six-cylinder bus fills, the demand is for speed through the country and flexibility in the city. Although the White has the greatest power, it is easiest to handle—and it has all the flexibility of the touring car. It runs smoothly and without vibration, giving easy riding qualities even at the highest speed.

"A long period of experiments and tests has ended with the introduction of a White six-cylinder bus. Careful engineering study and accurate analysis of business needs has always been the White policy, and we are now entering the six-cylinder field after thoroughly satifying ourselves on every point of superior design, performance, economy and comfort of our new bus. We are pleased to have been able to complete this work in time to show the White Six at the A. E. R. A. exhibition.

"As an example of the power of the new model, the engine develops over 100-h. p. in the chassis. The bus not only has increased power, but it has a convincing appearance of power. It also has passenger comfort, not only in riding but in entering and leaving, for the chassis is low.

"New standards of design, the product of the White company's long experience in the bus industry, are a distinguishing feature of the new bus The Model 50A and the small bus Model 53, were designed to meet the demands in their fields and now the six-cylinder bus, known as Model 54, does the same thing in an advanced field.

"As in the case of the other White bus models, the White Six is being built only as a single-deck bus. It has a wheelbase of 227 inches and carries from 18 to 23 passengers in a de luxe model with a baggage compartment for interurban service, and from 25 to 29 passengers in a payenter model without baggage compartment for city service.

"We are not leavingk the four-cylinder field, in which we established and have maintained leadership in coordinating bus service with electric railway car service. We are adding another model to the White equipment and from now on will manufacture both four-cylinder and six-cylinder busses to meet the varied demands of this business.

"The White company introduces the six-cylinder Model 54 with the conviction, born of long and rigorous test, that this bus will maintain the White reputation in every respect. It is designed and built for superior performance and economical operation in an important field of bus transportation."

A more generous gift it is impossible to imagine

—a beautiful Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan..Will this princely gift be "theirs" on Christmas morning?

A complete catalog of all Sedans of all makes in the luxury group would reveal, in this Great Six Sedan, more features of convenience and control and a greater serving of comfort for women-drivers than could be found in practically any oth-

A TRULY fine motor-car—what woman wouldn't thrill at the thought of having it?

What mother, wife, or daughter wouldn't everlastingly be grateful for such magnificent evidence of your Christmas generosity?

The Willys-Knight Great Six is a real Christmas Car, regally luxurious, extraordinarily comfortable, beautiful almost beyond expression.

A very powerful car, very fast, exceedingly active. Modernly engineered, modernly designed. The Willys-Knight Great Six was the first to present the most advanced engineering practices of Europe combined with wholly new and greatly improved American performance standards.

To the American owner, this distinguished automobile brings the same type of power-plant used in the most costly cars made abroad—the French Panhard and Voisin, the Belgian Minerva, the British Daimler-Knight...

This great feature—the Knight sleeve-valve engine is patented, protected, exclusive. It is a feature other manufacturers would pay millions to get. Because it is an engine you'll never wear out. You never have to lay it up for carbon cleaning. It has no valves to grind. It is the only automobile engine in the world that actually improves with use. The only engine that grows quieter, smoother and more powerful with every mile.

Why not decide today to make this the most memorable Christmas those nearest and dearest have ever experienced? The way is clear. On the morning of the 25th, let there be awaiting them at the door a gloriously beautiful Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan.

Willys-Knight Great Six prices from $1750 to $2295. Prices f. o. b. factory and specifications subject to change without notice.

All Willys-Knight Great Sixes now are equipped with silent Belflex shackles—a tremendous engineering advance over the noisy metal shackles of other cars. Belflex stops all chassis rattles and squeaks, deadens road-vibration, completely eliminates the need for chassis lubrication. A noiseless, flexible fabric—shock-absorbing, wear-resisting, rubberized—Belflex now gives permanent chassis silence, diminishing wear at every point of the car.

VICTOR COMPANY SPONSORS SERIES

Opening Program on New Year's Night Inaugurates "Blue" Chain of Stations."

New York, December 11.—The Victor Talking Machine company will sponsor another series of broadcast programs to be given by world famous artists, the opening concert to be broadcast on New Year's night, January 1, 1927, it was announced today by the National Broadcasting company, who will provide facilities for the broadcasting. The opening program will be of two hours duration, from 9 to 11 p. m., New York time, and broadcast simultaneously through more than a score of stations, including WEAF and WJZ in New York city. Announcement of the artists to participate will be made within the coming week, it was said.

The opening Victor program also inaugurates a new chain system to be operated by the National Broadcasting company with WJZ as the "key" station. The chain will be known as the "Blue Network," and will allow simultaneous broadcasting from WJZ through WBZ, Springfield and Boston, KDKA, Pittsburgh and KYW, Chicago. For the broadcasting of the first Victor program the "Blue Network" will be joined with the "Red Network," as the WEAF chain is known, as well as other stations throughout the country.

Following the New Year's night presentation, Victor concerts will be broadcast bi-monthly on Friday nights from 9 to 11 o'clock, New York time, through the "Blue Network," officials of the National Broadcasting company stated.

FROHMAN WILL TALK OVER RADIO MONDAY

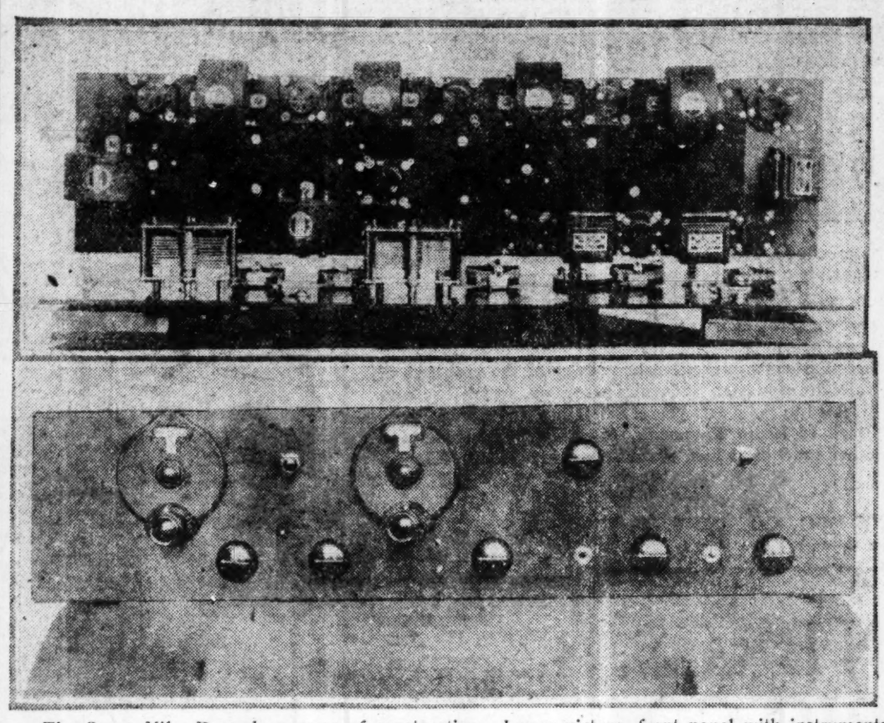

Old-time theatergoers will undoubtedly be particularly interested in the talk which is to be broadcast by WEAF, WLIT and WSAI at 7:30 o'clock, central time, on Monday, December 13, when Daniel Frohman, noted theatrical manager, will speak on the topic, "What has become of the stars of yesterday?" Probably the average theatergoer gives scant attention to the disappearance from the boards of some famous personality almost in the same way as the average baseball fan soon forgets the fame of a player when he begins to slow up and disappears from the big leagues.

Mr. Frohman has been responsible for the development of many of the stars of yesterday and today and is deeply interested in their welfare. His talk should be one of the most interesting ever sent out on WEAF'S wave.

SET BUILDING MADE EASY

The Super Hilco-Dyne

Panel and Sub-Panel Mountings

The Super Hilco-Dyne in process of construction. Lower picture, front panel with instruments in place. Top, set as viewed from above, showing installation of all instruments on panel and sub-panel. Set now complete with exception of fixed condensers and wiring.

BY J. J. FOOTE.

In laying out the panel and sub-panel of the superhilco-dyne we want to keep in mind the fact that the lay-out is flexible, that is there is no fixed rule for exact positions of the different parts. These can be mounted in many different positions, without causing trouble. Therefore in this article we will choose the most popular type of mounting and if you will carefully follow, you may build this set as we have constructed it.

The Panel.

The panel should be 7x28 of hard rubber, bakelite, glass or good insulating material. The instruments to be mounted will have to be given consideration in the space they take up and the panel laid out to take care of them, therefore we must consider figures as only tentative and actually lay out the panel to fit the parts used.

Lay the panel face up on flat surface and beginning at the left hand measure off five inches from left to right and then two and a half inches from top down, mark this on panel with an X, this is center hole for antenna condenser. Keeping on same level from top, that is two and a half inches, mark another X eleven inches from the left end, which is center hole for oscilator condenser. Then at 15 inches from left end mark another X, center hole for potentiohmeter and continuing on same level for two and a half inches mark another X at 25 1-2 inches from left end to mount the filment switch. Now go back to left end an dat one and three-quarter inches from top of panel and eight inches from left end mark an X for hole to mount the oscilator switch.

The Sub-Panel.

The sub-panel should be 7x27 inches and of same kind of material as the panel. The Hilco coils for the Super Hilco-Dyne should be mounted, not less than three and a half inches apart and keeping this in mind, we will lay out the sub-panel to fit the Hilco coils and then put in the other parts.

Beginning at the left end of sub-panel one inch from the back we will draw a line across the sub-panel. Mark off on this line an X at six, twelve, eighteen and twenty-four inches. These four Xs are for center mounting of the Filther coupler and three intermediate coils. At each end and half way between the four coils, mount a tube socket. The coils and sockets should be mounted as shown in the photograph. Now go back to the left end again and at the center of the sub-panel mount the antenna coupler, as close to the end as possible.

Again measuring from the left end on the front edge, which goes next to the panel, measure off seven and a half inches and mount the oscilator coupler near the edge of the sub-panel so it will fit in between the two variable condensers mounted on the panel. At twelve inches from the left end and in center of the sub-panel mount the socket for oscilator tube. As we are building nine tube sets, three stages of audio are to much and we will use the Rauland trio or the National Impedaformer.

Beginning again at the left end, measure fifteen inches along the front edge, which goes next to the panel, mount the tube socket for last amplifier stage, at eighteen inches mount the last audio unit, at twenty-one inches the second audio tube socket, at twenty-four inches the second audio stage, on the right end the first audio tube socket and at middle of right end of sub-panel mount the first audio stage. The top of our sub-panel is now complete and we will turn it over and mount the loop jack under the back left end, with opening in jack toward the rear of the set. At eighteen inches from left end along back edge mount the battery cable connection and we are ready for the brackets, which should be mounted at each end and center. Now connect the brackets to panel and we have completed mounting.

The set is now complete, with exception of wiring and fixed condensers, which will be given in detail in next Sunday's Constitution. Keep this sheet with the list of parts given in last Sunday's Constitution and with the following article next Sunday you will have complete instructions for building the Super Hilco-Dyne, given in simplified language and in a way that the average set builder can readily assemble this wonderful working Super Hilco-Dyne.

GUESSING GOES OUT OF FASHION IN RADIO

Discussing the immediate future of radio in light of the many eliminations among the producers of its apparatus as evidenced in this year's radio shows, W. E. Baker, vice president and general manager of the Day-Fan Electric company, of Dayton, Ohio, said:

"There are three legs on which every manufacturing structure must stand. These are respectively the knowing how to manufacture; that is the physical process itself; the knowing how to finance and the knowing how to sell. Each is equally important. Each must yield adequately on what it costs. If any of the three is extravagant, the cost will show up in the price of the product, making that price higher than it fairly should be. The manufacturers in radio who have disappeared were wobbly on one or several of these three legs. Those who were well grounded are looking forward to better and more prosperous radio.

"Every successful radio manufacturer, particularly those who have had electrical experience before radio came on the scene, realizes the vital need of continuous research. The successes of the future—for there is no doubt the weeding out process will go on—will be those who most quickly and efficiently adapt themselves to needed change. There will always be change; there is nothing final in such an elusive proposition as manufacturing a radio receiver. This is true in all electrical manufacture. Those, whose interest in electrics is limited to radio, probably do not know that Day-Fan is a large producer of motors. I mention this simply to illustrate the rewards in research. Within a comparatively recent period we have found it possible to increase the efficiency range of motors from 50 per cent to 75 per cent, an enormous increase when translated into the savings effected in the use of electric current."

SOCKET POWER NOW GREATLY SIMPLIFIED

When socket-power apparatus first came on the market its only objection lay in the multiplicity of controls which it produced. With the coming of the power-switching relay this disadvantage has been overcome. However, unless a receiver is especially designed for the use of socket-power operation, the owner is obliged to operate three separate switches in order to use his receiver, one for the "A" unit, one for the "B" unit, and the filament switch on the receiver panel.

It is generally accepted that the bridge or shunt type of relay is much more satisfactory than the series type, in as much as it is not dependent upon the number of tubes in the receiver for its operating action. A series type relay exerts a varying pull on its mechanism according to the number of tubes used in the receiver. However, superior as the bridge type is, the owner who has built his own receiver or who has purchased a receiver not incorporating facilities for the connection of the bridge type of relay is likely to be confused regarding how such a relay should be connected.

The bridge type of relay may be connected into the filament switch of any receiver. First, find the A-plus and A-minus binding posts on the terminal board. Then trace the A-minus lead as it goes to the filament switch on the receiver panel. Connect one terminal of the bridge relay to this negative lead beyond the filament switch. If it is connected in front of the filament switch, the relay will remain on at all times, whereas when it is connected beyond this switch it operates only when the switch is turned on. The other terminal of the relay attaches to the A-plus lead of the battery at any point where it is convenient. Thus the relay is shunted across the "A" battery leads behind the filament switch.

Thus the filament switch when it is turned on throws the relay into operation, which in turn automatically connects "A" and "B" power and an external amplifier, if desired, to the receiver. Likewise, when the switch is turned off the relay automatically disconnects these three units from the receiver.

FAMOUS SOPRANO TO SING TONIGHT ON WEAF CHAIN

Frances Alda To Feature Atwater Kent Program; To Be Assisted by Popular Orchestra.

New York, December 11.—(Special.)—Madame Frances Alda, the famous soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will appear before WEAF'S microphone on Sunday evening, December 12, in one of the series of Atwater Kent Radio Hours through WEAF, WEEI, WGR, WRC, WWJ, WSAI, WCCO, WJAR, KSD, WTAG, WCAE, WTAM, WOC, WFI and WGN at 8:15 o'cock central time.

Madame Alda, whose radio concert last winter in the Atwater Kent Radio Hour, marked the completion of arrangements made by Mr. Kent with the Metropolitan Opera to broadcast the opera stars of the famous New York organization, believes the influence of radio is meaning much in musical appreciation. "The American people are very appreciative of music," says Madame Alda, "and what is more to the point they have been educated by radio to be satisfied only with the best. I have travelled many hundreds of miles over this big country and I speak from personal experience when I say that I have found real appreciation everywhere even in the small communities reached by radio."

Frances Alda is a native of Christchurch, New Zealand, and following her education in private schools at Melbourne, Australia, studied singing under Madame Marchesi in Paris. She made her operatic debut at the Opera Comique in Paris in 1904. Her initial appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York city, was in 1908 and she has sung 30 or 40 of the leading roles at the Metropolitan in addition to as many as 80 concerts in a season throughout the United States. Her career in opera is a record of unqualified successes and her popularity has been steadily growing.

Under the direction of A. Winfield Hoeny, another presentation based upon a Biblical incident will be offered the audience of WEAF on Sunday evening, December 12, at 10:15 o'clock. The presentation to be broadcast on this evening will be based upon the familiar incident, the seizing of Naboth's vineyard by Ahab, the king of Samaria, which will give a dramatic example of the violation of the Tenth Commandment, which begins with the familiar words, "Thou shalt not covet." The principal parts during this presentation will be assumed as follows:

Elijah ..... A. Winfield Hoeny

HOUSE RADIO BILL IS LIKELY WINNER AT WASHINGTON

Coolidge in Favor Of White Measure And So Is Hoover

Radio Coordinating Committee, Representing Trade and Public, Urges Commission Under Direction of Commerce Department.

Washington, December 11.—The general line up with regard to the radio legislation in congress may be said to be somewhat as follows: Senators Watson, republican, of Indiana; Dill, democrat, of Washington, and Gooding, republican, of Idaho, are the conferees for the senate. Representatives Scott, republican, of Michigan; White, republican, of Maine; Lehlbach, republican, of New Jersey, Ewin L. Davis, democrat, of Tennessee, and Lazaro, democrat, of Louisiana, are the house conferees.

Two senators and three representatives must concur before an agreement can be reached. Senators Dill and Watson are known to strongly favor radio control by an independent commission, as provided in the bill passed by the senate as against Messrs. Scott, White and Lehlbach, who favor departmental or Hoover control, with an advisory commission, as set forth in the bill passed by the house. Messrs. Davis and Lazaro are strong commission proponents.

Coolidge Opposes Separate Commission.

President Coolidge indorsing the Louse bill, has gone on record as strongly against the creation of any more independent commissions. Whether he would go so far as to veto an independent commission bill is not known.

Likewise Secretary Hoover, although repeatedly disclaiming any desire to again have radio control lodged in his department, has also opposed an independent commission. General James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, has characterized commissions as "an agency which so efficiently lends itself to evasion and sidestepping of responsibility."

Congressman John Q. Tilson, republican, of Connecticut, house floor leader, has indorsed the White bill. Nicholas Longworth, republican, speaker of the house of representatives, has not indorsed either bill but has taken notice of the confusion, which he said he found in the air and expressed the hope that the differences of the conferees would be immediately adjusted and a good law passed.

Finally the National Radio Coordinating company, which claims to represent the broadcasters, manufacturers, amateurs and as much as anything probably, the listening public, in effect has indorsed the house bill by recommending that there be a commission, whose rulings should be administered by the department of commerce.

It has been repeatedly said by individual members of the conference committee that if they are able to reconcile the one big difference as to whether radio shall be controlled by an independent commission or through an established government department, that there is no question but that other matters could be ironed out and a radio law forthcoming in short order.

Industry Suggests Compromise.

That the congressional conferees, who are apparently deadlocked on the question of whether or not an independent commission or the department of commerce shall control radio, agree to a federal radio commission, whose rulings shall be administered by the department of commerce is the suggestion of a compromise offered by the national radio coordinating committee.

The members of this committee are Walter A. Strong, chicago, chairman, representing the radio committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' association; Paul B. Klugh, New York, executive chairman, the National Association of Broadcasters; Arthur T. Haugh, Buffalo, president, the Radio Manufacturers' association; Louis B. F. Raycroft, Philadelphia, chairman radio section, National Electrical Manufacturers' association; Charles H. Stewart, Washington, D. C., vice president, American Radio Relay league, and Harold J. Wrape, St. Louis, president Federated Radio Trades association.

In the meantime the coordinating committee believes there is immediate need for the enactment of an emergency control measure which will prevent the future complication of an already complicated situation by prohibiting the issuance of any more licenses for the operation of radio broadcasting stations.

Who Should Have Licenses?

The committee believes the question of who should be allowed to broadcast should be determined on a basis of these factors, and that this should be written into the law: The length of time during which stations, existing at the time this act becomes law, have operated; the character of service rendered by them, and the requirements of their zones and communities for radio service.

A doctrine which the committee developed is that a broadcaster has no vested rights as against the government; but he has certain clearly defined rights as against other broadcasters.

"It is only fair and just," the committee goes on, "that recognition be given to those broadcasters who have invested substantial sums of money in broadcasting plant and equipment, and who have served the public properly. It would be unfair, in our opinion, to consider a latecomer in the business of broadcasting—especially those who might be licensed subsequent to the time of the passage of this proposed legislation—to have equal rights or to be placed upon the same basis as a broadcaster who has served the public well and has a substantial investment.

The committee believes the term of license should be for five years. It is their opinion that a broadcaster should not be deprived of his right to refuse the advertising or to refuse to render a service at his discretion or reestablish rates commensurate with the time and character of a program in exactly the same manner as a newspaper, for reasons of dishonesty or false statements, may refuse to accept advertising copy for publication, or in this case for any other good reason arising out of the peculiar situation surrounding radio broadcasting.

Market Value for Sale.

The committee opposing the provision in the senate bill that no station should be sold for a greater consideration than the original cost of the apparatus expresses the opinion that sales should be permitted at "a fair market value" and no arbitrary limitations be put on them.

In the matter of whether a broadcaster shall be permitted to operate a station during the period between the revocation of his license and the determination of his status by the appellate court, the committee believes there should be no question about the right of the broadcaster to operate his station until the court of highest jurisdiction has determined his case.

The committee does not favor the provision in the senate bill which would allow government radio stations to accept commercial messages. Likewise, it believes unauthorized rebroadcasting of any material should not be permitted.

Giant Dirigible Mistakes Tower For Mooring Mast

WOK's new antenna towers located in Homewood, Ill., majestically tower over the surrounding landscape and stand out against the sky, making it possible to see them for many miles in every direction.

Just as darkness was settling down over the country side, the staff of WOK heard the soft hum of motors up in the sky, gradually getting louder and louder. At first they did not pay any attention to the drone of the motors, figuring that it might be the air mail slightly off its course, or perhaps some airplanes from the government aviation field located at Rantoul, Ill.

However, as the motor noise kept on increasing until it sounded directly over head, several of the staff stepped outside of the broadcasting station to see if they could locate the airplanes. To their surprise they saw a giant Blimp hovering above the west antenna tower. As they watched a flood of lights from the search lights of the dirigible bathed the surrounding landscape in a bright glare, causing the tower to stand out as though it were day light.

Gently descending until it was on a level with the top of the towers, it slowly forged ahead until the tip of the Giant Blimp rested against the top of the tower.

The staff of WOK were afraid that they would damage the dirigible if it drifted into the antenna. They all concentrated their vocal power and in unison shouted to the crew of the blimp that they had mistaken WOK's antenna tower for a mooring mast.

One of the crew called something in reply, but the listeners were unable to hear what he said. A few minutes later the motors of the airship started with a roar and the giant cigar slipped away in the dark.

All efforts to see the name or number on the dirigible were futile as the glare from the search light was so great that it was impossible to see anything but the shape of the airship.

All efforts to obtain information as to what dirigible it was, where it came from and where it was going, has been unsuccessful.

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY WILL H. SMITH.

Saturday evening proved to be one of the most enjoyable radio nights that we have experienced in considerable time so we took in a portion of the Atwater Kent program furnished Atlanta by W. D. V. Hopkins, of the Hopkins Equipment company, distributors of Atwater Kent radio receivers; a bit of the Balkite hour broadcast from WEAF, at New York, and a number of other programs well worth listening to.

The Westinghouse band, at KDKA, Pittsburgh, of course, came to us as usual on Saturday evening. The Dial Twister feels his evening would not be complete without a portion of the Westinghouse employees' band program and since he has been using the Stromberg-Carlson radio receiver in romping round the dials, the programs from KDKA have been doubly appreciated.

Such a program as this unit broadcasts requires something more than just a receiving set to bring out the full tones of band instruments. This Stromberg-Carlson makes radio reception a musical event in the home of the Dial Twister for it seems capable of reproducing the fullest range of tone with clarity and volume unequalled in consistency by the average set one hears in so many homes these days when price has so much to do in the selection of the set to be used.

Weekly Barn Dance.

Another event we seldom miss on Saturday evening is the regular weekly barn dance program at WLS, the Sears-Roebuck station at Chicago. Since this program begins early and holds fourth until well past the midnight hour it is possible to drop in on it from time to time and pick up features we might otherwise tire of were we to park on its wave length throughout the evening.

One of the first things we got at WLS was a trip to the poultry show now being held by the Coliseum at Chicago. When the microphone was switched we heard all the prize roosters and hens crowing and cackling at the top of their lungs.

We also heard a bunch of boys and girls, members of the Mozart Playground association, at Chicago, entertain with all manner of instruments and all manner of singing, including some of the good old time barber shop chording.

Heard Damrosch.

Walter Damrosch, world-renowned American musician and leader of the New York Symphony orchestra, in his Balkite hour, under the auspices of the Fansteel Products company, manufacturers of Balkite power units, interpreted, in a piano recital, the second and third acts of Wagner's opera "Seigfried."

It took this Stromberg-Carlson to brag out some of the deep tones of the piano music we heard last night. However, we were able to bring in WSAI, Cincinnati, without interference, which probably accounts for much of the additional pleasure we derived from the concert.

According to our friend, C. W. Jordan, in charge of radio at Duffee-Freeman company, who have recently added the Stromberg-Carlson line to their line, much of the ability of the stromberg-Carlson receiver is due to shielding of the set and other features not incorporated in other sets on the market.

Need of Selectivity.

"Higher power of broadcast stations and the crowding of stations in some sections of the wave band," he says, "make selectivity more necessary in a radio receiver today than ever before.

"The five-tube neutrodyne receiver has always been the standard for selectivity, its only fault lying in its complexity of control. Three controls are too many for convenience and simplicity of operation. However, the simplicity of control must not be attained by loss in efficiency, as is often the case.

"During the past year great advances have been made in the art of shielding. First used for the production of sufficent stability to allow the use of three or more stages of radio frequency amplification, it has recently been found advantageous in the attainment of extreme efficiency in the two-stage neutrodyne receiver.

"The shielding, of course, does not need to be so elaborate in the two-stage receiver as in the more complicated ones.

"However, engineers of the Stromberg-Carlson company, working on the problem for over a year, have discovered that by the complete shielding of the coils of a two-stage receiver, a degree of stability, sensitivity, and selectivity was attained which was impossible without the shields."

PHANTOM VIOLIN AT WGN STILL MYSTERY

Mystery still surrounds the identity of the Phantom Violin, the marvelous violin virtuoso heard over WGN every Friday evening at 9:30 o'clock. Mysterious announcements precede and follow his coming; and the tone of the announcements between selections helps him to maintain the ghostly air of mystery that has surrounded this feature ever since it first started.

Many listeners upon hearing the Phantom have likened him to Fritz Kreisler, Jacques Gordon, and other violin masters, but without having their suspicions confirmed one way or the other. The sweet, singing tone of the Phantom's violin reminded so many people of Kreisler's famous Stradivarius that they could not help but make the guess they did.

The Phantom Violin will be heard in another WGN program on Friday evening, December 17, between 9:30 and 10 o'clock.

Grand Opera to Uncle Tom.

Next Friday evening at 8 o'clock the Teaberry entertainers will start high up on the music scale and by steady stages come down to Uncle Tom's Cabin. In between the two extremes are numbers that are sure to tickle the musical tastes of everybody. Opera music and opera singers are in for a little good natured "kidding" from "Teaberry Jim" Hughes who will also inject some humor in his comments on other numbers, particularly the old time melodrama.

All in all, it is a program that should contain several numbers that will please even the most critical.

DAMROSCH TO GIVE WAGNERIAN OPERA

Noted Leader of New York Symphony To Continue With "Gotterdammerung" Saturday Night.

The Balkite hour of Saturday evening, December 18, will bring the audience of WEAF, WEEI, WGR, WWJ, WTAM, WFI, WSAI, WOC, WCCO, WDAF, WCAE, WGN and KSD at 8 o'clock, central time, another of the exceptionally popular dramatic piano recitals by Walter Damrosch, of Wagnerian operas.

Mr. Damrosch, who is the noted leader of the New York Symphony orchestra heard during the Balkite hour on alternate weeks, has selected the first two acts of "Gotterdammerung" as his presentation of the evening. This work of Wagner is the final opera of a series of which "Rheingold" and "Siegfried" are a part, both of which have already been presented by Mr. Damrosch.

The meaning of the word "Gotterdammerung" is "Twilight of the Gods." The prologue opens with the three fates (Norns) spinning the thread of destiny on Brunhild's mountain top. The thread breaks, indicative of the passing of the old order, and the fates disappear. Siegfried and Brunhild appear and the ring is bestowed upon the latter. Then away goes Siegfried down the valley of the Rhine in search of future adventure.

The first act opens on the court of King Gunther in the valley of the Rhine. The king's sister, Gutruna and Gunther's half brother, Hagen, the villain, appear at his side. Hagen is plotting to use the fool king as a cat's paw to marry Brunhild and secure the ring to the family, principally for Hagen. At the opportune moment Siegfried arrives at the court and is given a love philtre which causes him to fall in love with Gutruna, the sister, and completely forget his love for Brunhild. So, off go Gunther and Siegfried with the aid of the magic helmet to fool Brunhild into marrying Gunther. The ring is torn from Brunhild's finger and Gunther claims her as his wife.

In the second act the villian, Hagen, appears with his dwarf father, Alberic. The son swears to get back the ring for his father. Gunther arrives at court with the captive bride and she then, seeing the ring on Siegfried's finger, realizes she has been tricked and badly used. Then Brunhild, Gunther and Hagen plot vengeance on Seigfried as he walks away with his new bride, Gutruna, on his arm. Brunhild had previously enchanted Siegfried so no weapon can hurt him but neglected to protect his back. So the three plan a hunting party where Sieg ied may be speared in the back and the cause of the wound laid to the tusk of the wild boar. This brings the second act to a close.

The weekly Balkite hour programs are recognized by radio fans as one of the outstanding achievements of radio broadcasting. One of the many very interesting letters which has come to Mr. Damorsch, dean of American conductors, through the medium of his weekly broadcasting programs was from a superintendent of public school music in a midwestern city. He reports that the upper grades of the public schools have taken a great interest in Mr. Damrosch's work and each week before the Balkite hour programs are broadcast abbreviated explanations of the Wagnerian opera to be offered by Mr. Damrosch are given as part of the school work and are doing much to stimulate the interest of the pupils to "listen in" on Saturday evening.

WGN WILL PRESENT CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA

As the next offering in its "Great Moments From Grand Opera," the WGN vocal group will present in tabloid form Mascagni's famous "Cavalleria Rusticana." All o the many important arias and duets that make this one of the gre test of our operas will be heard presented in the splendid way the vocal group has been doing many of the great musical classics.

Nearly all listeners are familiar by this time with the method pursued by the vocal group in reproducing these operas on the radio. The announcer tells the story at sufficient length to do away with the unnecessary musical portions so that greater time is left for the really musical portions.

Balkite "B"— tried, proved and still unequalled

U. S. Patent, Oct. 12, 1926

for sets of 8 tubes or less

Most radio sets today require light socket "B" power for its economy alone. Yet you needn't buy an untried device. Balkite "B" has been tried and proved. Of 75,000 Balkite "B"s now rendering satisfactory service, in many cases for nearly 4 years, to our knowledge, not one has ever worn out. This record has yet to be equalled by any other "B" device. Balkite "B" is a permanent piece of equipment; it has no tubes.

Three models: Balkite "B"-W for sets of 5 tubes or less requiring 67 to 90 volts—$27.50. Balkite "B"-X for sets of 8 tubes or less including power tubes, capacity 30 milliamperes at 135 volts—$42. Methodist Protestant Church Planned Here

Plans for the erection and organization of a Methodist Protestant church in Atlanta are under way, it was announced last week, following a meeting of eight prominent Methodist ministers and thirteen lay leaders in the Methodist church.

The church will be modern in every respect and will be built in commemoration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the Methodist Protestant conference in Georgia. It will probably be known as the Methodist Protestant Centenary church, it was stated.

Exact location and definite plans for the building have not been completed as yet, but a committee, composed of W. R. Simpson, as chairman of the finance committee, and V. H. McKee, as chairman of a survey committee, has been named.

Among prominent leaders who took part in the meeting were Rev. J. M. Sheridan, secretary of the home mission board, of Baltimore, Md.; Rev. James H. Straughn, conference group leader, of Washington, D. C., and Rev. W. M. Hunton, president of the Georgia Methodist Protestant conference, of Atlanta, as well as leading laymen in the city.

IMPROVEMENT BODY AIDS MANY PROJECTS

The Atlanta Improvement association, composed of leading business men in the central business area, Saturday released its annual report showing 11 major projects which the association has sponsored during the past year.

Frank H. Neely, vice president, and A. O. Randall, secretary, both submitted reports in booklet form to every member. The most successful year in the history of the association was chronicled in attractive fashion.

The organization stood solidly behind the $8,000,000 bond issue in Atlanta and helped prosecute it to a successful conclusion. It also claims credit for having $1,000,000 for a new city hall included in the issue, as well as backing in every way possible proposed construction of the viaducts, which will span Pryor street and Central avenue. Mr. Neely incidentally is president of the bond commission charged with administration of the $8,000,000 bond fund.

Among other projects which the organization has sponsored are a new postoffice building for Atlanta, extension of Broad street to Whitehall, encouragement and support of a building program in the older business section, especially construction of a large commercial hotel, extension of East Mitchell street into East Fair thereby opening up a new Stone Mountain boulevard, promotion of work in connection with hotels, garages, etc., widening of Washington street, cooperation with street and sanitary departments of the city in rapid completion of street work and keeping streets clean and cooperation in traffic and legislative matters.

The bond issue, the city hall and viaducts already have been authorized and the Washington street project has been completed. Other work also has been eminently successful. Several of the projects, however, will be included in the list of endeavors for next year, as they have not yet been carried through to completion, it is said.

CHARLES M. FORT IS LAID TO FINAL REST ON SATURDAY

Funeral services for Charles M. Fort, 74, prominent Atlanta insurance man, who died Friday afternoon at his home on Juniper street, were held at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon from the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. Dr. Richard Orme Flinn officiated and interment was in West View cemetery.

Mr. Fort was a native of Rome, moving to Atlanta more than 30 years ago. He organized the Volunteer State Life Insurance company, of Chattanooga, Tenn. He has been active in insurance business in Atlanta for many years and has a wide circle of friends here and throughout the state.

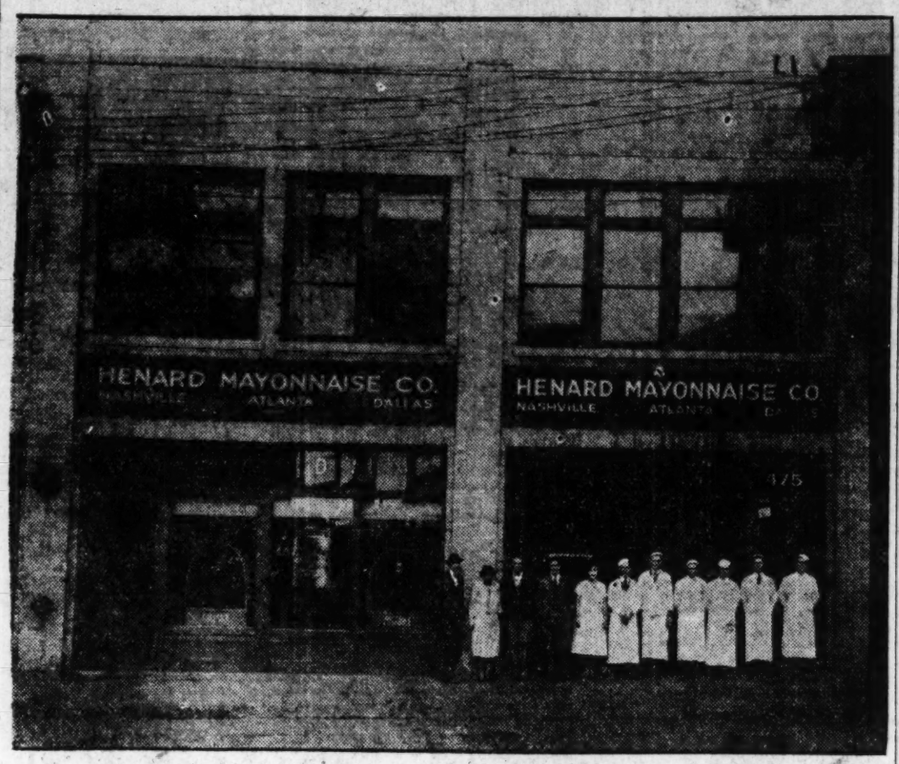

NEW YORK-PARIS AND RETURN TRIP BY AIR IS PLANNED

New York, December 11.—(AP)—Plans for a continuous New York-Paris-and-return flight were announced tonight by All-American Engineers, Inc., an organization composed of expert mechanical engineers and their financial backers.

An all-metal airplane, designed by Major Idmund Burke Cairns, is being prepared for the flight, the statement said, the motive plant selected being a new type engine developed by K. V. Stevens. It is claimed this will weigh only 500 pounds while delivering 2,000 horsepower.

Mrs. Stevens has been invited to make the flight, scheduled "early next spring."

Company Now Occupies Entire Building

The photo shows the remarkable expansion of the Henard Mayonnaise company, which since its opening in Atlanta two years ago, has increased the size of its local plant from the store shown on the left to the entire building shown in the picture. The portion on the right and the two upper floors were annexed by the Henard company to take care of their remarkable growth.

The Henard Mayonnaise company is celebrating this week its expansion both in factory space and in employees. Since the opening of the factory branch a scant two years ago, this company has grown so rapidly that it was almost impossible to take care of the increasing volume of business. The company announces the expansion into larger quarters adjoining their original factory at 475 Whitehall street. They have annexed the next two doors and the two entire floors overhead, it is announced by P. F. (Pat) O'Brien, vice president of the company, who has been actively in charge of the Atlanta branch since its opening. Much of the success of the enterprise is due to the efforts of Mr. O'Brien.

Mr. Henard, the founder of the company, came to Atlanta from Nashville to the opening of the Atlanta branch and he was so attracted to Atlanta that he made his home here until his death.

SOUTHERN GAS, POWER INVOLVED IN MERGER

Lexington, Ky., December 11.—(AP) Announcement was made today at the offices of the Lexington Water company, Inc., of the consolidation of Southern Gas and Power corporation with Central Public Service company, thus practically doubling the size of the public utility organization.

The transaction which brought together the Southern Gas and Power and Central Public Service interests took place this week in the headquarters of the former at Philadelphia, Pa. Colonel A. E. Pierce, of Chicago, is president of the new organization, succeeding Walter Whetstone, of Philadelphia.

Gas, electric and water companies operating in 17 different states and the Canadian province of New Brunswick, are now grouped under one management. The Southern Gas and Power operating companies all supplying gas service except the water company in Lexington, are situated in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, New Hampshire and New York. Central Public Service companies also operate in New York as well as in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Maine, and are engaged principally in furnishing electric light and power, gas and water service.

Bruce's Address On Prohibition Hit by Upshaw

Washington, December 11.—(AP)—Senator Bruce, democrat, Maryland, did not speak for his party when he contended in the senate this week that only an outstanding wet has a chance of becoming the presidential nominee of the democratic party, Representative Upshaw, a democratic dry from Georgia, declared today.

"In the name of the prohibitionized democracy that drove saloons out of the south," he said, "I denounce this blind blundering statement.

"I have spoken widely over the nation and have come in personal contact with 10 times more dry, sober Americans than this provincial wet senator ever saw."

Upshaw suggested that if a few wets in both parties are insistent the liquor question shall be an issue in the next election, they make up a party of their own, thus ceasing to "embarrass the vast majority in both the republican and democratic parties."

"Finally," the dry leader concluded, "Senator Bruce's panegyric about religious bigotry concerning Governor Smith is cheap stuff; and it is as blind as it is cheap."

DATE FOR HEARING OF DEANS PROBATE PROTEST IS SET

December 26 has been set as the date, in Fulton superior court when Frank Deans, honor graduate of the University of Michigan, will contest probate of the will of the late Robert E. Deans, wealthy Atlanta broker.

Deans recently established in Fulton court that he was the son and the only legal heir of the late broker and therefore was entitled to the residue of the estate.

Mr. Deans died January 9, 1925 and soon after his death a will was offered for probate in which certain properties on Peachtree road were bequeathed to Miss Rheba Lawrence, beauty contest winner, and the remainder of the property left to his legal heirs. Frank Deans was omitted from the list of heirs petitioning for probate and upon first presentations of his claims, W. O. and G. C. Deans, named as executors denied any knowledge of his existence or his right to inherit.

SAFE OF CASHIER IN JACKSONVILLE ROBBED OF $400

Jacksonville, Fla., December 11.—(AP)—Four bandits late tonight robbed the cashier's office of the Jacksonville Traction company and escaped with about $400 after shooting and seriously wounding one of the employees.

News From Congress Of Interest to Georgia

BY SAM W. SMALL.
Special Staff Correspondent.

Washington, December 11.—The closing of many more banks in the west and south gives added argument for the bill of Congressman Brand of Georgia, to set up a "depositor's guarantee fund" in the federal treasury for insuring depositors in member banks of the federal reserve system against loss. Congressman Edgar Howard, the great Bryanite from Nebraska, also has a bill drawn upon the model of the Nebraska act to guarantee bank deposits, but it does not offer the adequacies that are provided in the Brand bill. That some national guaranty act should be enacted is becoming a general demand from many parts of the country where bank deposits are the only seeming security for the savings of the people.

It is argued that all banks of deposit should favor such legislation in order to hold the confidence and patronage of those who should be their customers. The present sense of the insecurity of deposits is thought to have influenced Postmaster General New to urge that the limit for deposits in the postal banks be raised from $2,500 to $5,000 for each individual depositor. That limit might transfer millions of savings from the commercial to the postal banks for guaranteed security.

The postoffice department releases a summary of "postal receipts at 50 industrial cities" for the month of November. Atlanta does not appear in the list and therefore belongs with the "commercial" rather than "industrial" class of cities. Birmingham, Chattanooga, Charlotte and Savannah are included with the "industrial" group. The increase of receipts in Savannah this last month over the same month of 1925 was $587.70. The increased receipts of the Atlanta office have been reported in a former dispatch and indicate the continuing growth of the postal business of the city.

The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company and the Murray Telephone company in Kentucky have applied to the interstate commerce commission for a certificate that the proposed sale of the latter company to the former will be in the public interest, and permission to the Southern Bell to buy the Murray system will be granted.

North Winship, of Georgia, who is a foreign service officer of class three and consul at Cairo in Egypt, has been nominated to be also a secretary in the diplomatic service of the United States.

Howard Bucknell, Jr., a Georgian who is consul at Shanghai, has been advanced a grade.

William T. Turner, also a Georgian, now vice consul at Yokohama, is to be promoted to vice consul of career, which is an improvement of official status.

The consolidation of the two federal reserve bank agencies in Havana, Cuba, has riled the business men of Boston, because the work of the agency in the Cuban capital of the Boston Reserve bank is to be taken over and managed as a part of the agency of the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta.

Mr. Eddy, secretary of the federal reserve board, says the two agencies were established simultaneously on September 1, 1923, after the matter had been discussed in the reserve board several months. Both the Boston and Atlanta banks advanced strong claims for the privilege. The Atlanta bank had about $40,000,000 in currency in circulation in Cuba and contended that by not having an agency in Havana it obtained no benefits from its circulation. The Boston bank urged that Cuban commercial interests long had turned to New England for manufactured supplies and New England interests would suffer if Cuba had to deal through the Atlanta bank. But Atlanta has won out, as usual.

The secretary of war has had many inquiries as to whether the war department specifies bags made of burlap, an imported material, in asking for bids on supplies that must be contained in bags. It has been urged also that the packing of army supplies in cotton bags would assist the cotton industry of the nation. Secretary Davis says the department favors the use of cotton and calls attention to the following instructions issued by the quartermaster general in 1923, and which are being enforced by Major General B. Frank Cheatham, of Nashville, Tenn., the present quartermaster general:

"(a) The attention of the war department has been invited to the desirability of promoting the consumption of cotton, a domestic product, in bags and sacks used for subsistence supplies in preference to those made of jute and burlap, which are largely of foreign production. It is desired that such preference be given following the plan as stated in War Department Specification No. 42, 'Conditions governing the purchase of subsistence supplies for the United States Army' IC, which states:

"Domestic preference — Preference will be given the articles of domestic production or manufacture over those of foreign origin, costs, including duties on the latter, and quality being equal."

Two bills of importance to postmasters have been submitted to the house of representatives by Chairman Lehlback of the committee on civil service.

One bill proposes that postmasters of the third class shall be appointed without term, according to provisions of the civil servict act, so they would hold their offices on good behavior and be immune from political changes of administrations.

The other bill proposes that any person promoted or transferred from the classified service to be a postmaster shall hold the office without term, subject to the civil service act.

Congressman Kelly has introduced a bill designed to require that postal employees shall not have their pay rated in proportion to postal revenues. His bill would enact "that the postoffice establishment of the United States is hereby declared to be an agency of the American people for their service and not for profit" and "that compensation of postal employees shall be adequate and just and, together with working conditions, shall be based upon American standards, without regard to postal revenues."

The appointment of Senator George as one of the investigators of the qualifications of Senator Gould, of Maine, to be a senator of the United States, is a recognition of the Georgia senator's legal and judicial abilities. Those accomplishments were so well indicated when the Nye case was before the senate that his service on the subcommittee in this Gould case comes by logical selection. The committee will hold its first session next Monday, 13th, and determine the line of inquiry to develop whether the accused senator did bribe a Canadian official some 14 years ago and is therefore tainted so as to be intolerable as a senator.

Atlanta Bishop Praises British Publication Ban

Passage of the bill by the British house of commons, of England, to forbid publication of details of divorce cases was highly commended here Saturday by Bishop H. J. Mikell, of the Atlanta diocese of the Episcopal church.

"It is a serious thing," Bishop Mikell said, "to curtail the liberty of the press, which is the cornerstone of democracy, but if the newspapers will not of their own accord, suppress the publication of things which degrade, then laws should be passed to compel them to do so.

"One would wish that our law makers in America would follow this example. The tone of morals in the United States is lowered by the publication of testimony in divorce and murder cases. Just lately we have been surfeited with accounts of the murder in New Jersey and supposed scandal in Los Angeles. This does not help the cause of justice and hurts public morals."

Creditable newspapers, Bishop Mikell declared, should play up to the best of their readers and not down to the worst, adding that it was no excuse to plead that the papers print

FATHER DOONAN COMMENTS ON BRITISH DIVORCE BAN.

Tampa, Fla., December 11.—(AP)—Father John B. Doonan, pastor of the Sacred Heart College church here, commenting on the proposed action of the British parliament on divorces, said today:

"The Catholic church is opposed to divorce but believes in the freedom of the press. It is doubtful if any one can lessen the evil of divorce by suppressing details in the public prints because people know about it anyway from their neighbors."

Dr. J. C. Tims, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, said: "Private divorce is a bad thing. Details of particular cases may be disgusting but it is better to have publicity on them than not."

McKeown Offers New Farm Relief Measure in House

Washington, December 11.—(AP)—The house touched upon farm relief for a few minutes today, but gave up when it became involved with the new plan offered in a bill by Representative McKeown, democrat, Oklahoma.

Explaining his relief measure, Mr. McKeown said it proposed to create a commission which would determine in advance the needs of the consuming public, and then would allot to the country's farmers their quotas of the various crops to be produced. A "standardization certificate," he said, would be issued to each farmer, directing him to grow a fixed quantity.

The farmer then would market his crop, selling the surplus, if any, outside the current market and paying an excise tax on it. Members questioned the constitutionality of the tax and alsao doubted that a farmer could be forced to agree to raise only the quantity set for him by the commission.

Police Say Stolen Autos Were Sold By Advertisements

With the arrest of George Lewis, alias George Davidson, in Knoxville, Tenn., and John Emerson, who is being held at police station here local police believe one of the boldest bands of auto thieves ever to operate here has been broken.

According to police, the thieves disposed of their wares through advertisements in local newspapers, after having filed off motor numbers and printing new ones on motor blocks. They would then obtain license numbers at the state capitol under the forged number and advertise the car for sale, it was stated. Prospective purchasers checking up on the ownership of the car, would find a clear title on the record at the state capitol.

Detectives A. Lamar Poole and S. A. Smith stated that two of the alleged stolen cars were recovered in Knoxville, another in Nashville, and a third in Chattanooga.

URBANOWICZ FREED FROM U.S. PRISON BY JUDGE SIBLEY

Release of J. A. Urbanowicz from the Atlanta federal penitentiary back into the parole of the Fort Leavenworth penitentiary was authorized Saturday by Judge Samuel H. Sibley in United States district court in habeas corpus proceedings brought by Urbanowicz.

Urbanowicz was held in the Atlanta prison on a charge of parole violation, and sought his liberty on the ground that he had not violated his parole, which contention Judge Sibley upheld. The original sentence given Urbanowicz was 20 years, in 1920, but this was communted to 12 years, and in 1925 he was released from Leavenworth on parole. His rearrest on the charge of parole violation was followed by his being sent to Atlanta.

The goitre was so far down in General Ludendorff's neck that it interfered with his breathing.

Negro Is Convicted Of "Short-Changing" On Gasoline Order

Will Swinney, negro, was found guilty Saturday in Judge Jesse M. Wood's criminal court of Atlanta on a charge of simple larceny and was sentenced to serve 12 months on the chaingang.

It was alleged that Swinney "short changed" Mrs. Ellis Barrett, wife of Councilman Barrett, who is a member of the police committee of city council, out of $1.22 in a deal in which Mrs. Barrett ordered seven gallons of gasoline and received only four gallons. Swinney, it was testified, was an employee of a filling station at the corner of Ponce de Leon avenue and Ponce de Leon place. He was represented by Swift Tyler, Atlanta attorney.

New Y. W. C. A. Building, Modern and Fully Equipped, Will Be Formally Opened To Public On December 17

GIRLS AND WOMEN OF CITY TO HAVE BEAUTIFUL HOME

Old Athletic Club Building Thoroughly Overhauled and Renovated for Local Association.

LEADERS PRAISED FOR LONG STRUGGLE

Acquisition of Other Space Will Permit Erection of Additional Units If Needed.

Thoroughly in keeping with Atlanta's recent program of building and business expansion is the new Y. M. C. A. building on Auburn avenue, which will be formally thrown open to the public on Friday, December 17. For many years Atlanta has been one of the few large cities of the country that failed to provide suitable quarters for local associations, and it is a subject for congratulation now, not only to the Y. W. C. A. but to the whole city, that the Atlanta association is at last to have a building of its own, suitably equipped to carry out its extensive program of service to the girls and women of the city.

The structure on Auburn avenue is not a new one. It is the old site occupied for many years by the Atlanta club. It is, however, admirably suited to the needs of the Y. W. C. A., and it has been so renovated, so done over from basement floor to skylight, that it is hardly recognizable as the old A. A. C. The building is now almost entirely equipped. There are a few rooms, reserved for special activities, which must wait on additional funds, but in its present stage it is decidedly better than anything ever owned by the association in Atlanta and it is sufficiently complete to meet the present demands. There is, moreover, additional unoccupied space on the lot purchased by the Y. W. C. A. which will permit the erection of further units when necessary.

The acquisition of this property and completion of the building comes as the culmination of a struggle for a Y. W. C. A. building that has occupied a quarter of a century.

Plans Laid Aside.

A number of times plans for building campaigns have been practically completed and then generously laid aside on account of conflicting campaigns. That the undertaking has been at last successfully brought to a close is due to the loyal efforts of a small group of prominent Atlanta women and men. Last winter an executive committee from the Atlanta Community Chest agreed to help in the raising of sufficient funds to buy the old Athletic club building and to convert it into a Y. W. C. A. headquarters for Atlanta. This committee, including Mell Wilkinson, Eugene Black, Tom Daniel, Marvin Underwood, Hugh Willett and Armand May, was largely responsible for holding the campaign just at that time and the assistance of its individual members was invaluable.

Mrs. W. R. Prescott, president of the Y. W. C. A., went into office the first of the year with the express purpose of giving the association a well-equipped building of its own, and that this has been accomplished during her administration speaks much for her influence and for her constant efforts. She has been ably supported and seconded during her entire administration by the board of trustees, the board of directors and many others. To Lee Ashcraft, who personally bought the option on the building until the Y. W. C. A. could raise the money to take it up; to Mr. Wilkinson, chairman of the trustees and general chairman of the campaign; to Milton W. Bell, executive chairman of the campaign, and to Mrs. R. K. Rambo, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, who headed the women's division of the campaign, belongs much of the credit for the success of the undertaking.

In addition to Mrs. Prescott and Mr. Wilkinson, trustees include F. Q. Stone, Linton C. Hopkins and Mrs. Ernest Kontz, all of whom were generously active in the campaign.

Miss Elizabeth Gregg, member of the board of directors for many years, gave up her directorship over a year ago to become a temporary business secretary for the association. For the past several months she has spent all of her time in remodeling the new building, and the success of this work of remodeling and equipping is due largely to her efforts—together with those of Mrs. Prescott, Mrs. S. F. Boykin, vice president; Mrs. Guy Woolford, chairman of the house administration committee, and to the generous and interested services of Ivey & Crook, architects, in charge of the work.

Exterior Not Changed.

The exterior of the building has been little changed by the coming of its new occupants. The well-known old Atlanta Athletic club sign has given place to one bearing the letters Y. W. C. A., but with this exception, the front of the building affords much the same appearance. Once inside the front door, however, the change is very apparent. The building has been transformed from a man's club into a dwelling that is preeminently womanly—essentially feminine in every detail. It has not been the intent of its planners that it should be pretentious, but its fittings are in excellent taste throughout, and express everywhere the keynote of comfort and simplicity.

Every inch of space has been carefully computed and utilized and the furnishings for every room, including the minor fittings, have been selected with the utmost care. Dozens of extra windows, fitted with wire-glass, have been cut into its walls to admit the maximum of light and air, and ventilation and sanitation have been items of great importance in the layout of every floor.

The first floor, centering about a spacious lobby papered in the caen stone effect, will be the scene of much of the social and business activity. Just inside the front door are a small hallway, a lounge and a reading and writing room, all done in the same caen stone paper. On the floors of the lounge and the reading room are soft taupe velvet rugs, and both rooms are fitted with rich, dark red portieres, with overdrapes of brilliantly colored mohair over the simple scrim curtains that cover the windows throughout the building. In the well-lighted reading room there are three writing desks equipped with desk lamps, a large library table, a davenport and a number of comfortable chairs. The hallway and the lounge are fitted entirely with furniture discarded by the A. A. C. when moving into its new building. This furniture has been completely done over, has been stained a soft gray and upholstered in gray and deep blue denim. In the lounge are several floor lamps, shaded in soft colors, and an inviting array of davenports, tables and chairs.

Convenience Planned.

Immediately behind the lounge, and to the right of the lobby, is an information booth for information and for registration in various departments of the association. Just across the lobby is a public check room with a spacious cloak closet, on which a maid will be attendant. Off the lobby, also, are the general business office, well-fitted with ample, built-in shelf space for all office supplies; the office of the general secretary, and a small intimate office for the room registry secretary who also does the individual case work for the association.

A special feature of the first floor is the splendidly fitted public lavatory and rest room, equipped with large mirrors, and the best to be obtained in the way of paper towels, powdered soap and such accessories. The rest room is furnished with comfortable day beds, upholstered in blue leather and sanitary in every respect. Soft blankets are supplied for each bed.

The main body of the building, including all hallways and offices, is finished in cafe au lait stippled paper. Most of the floors are stained, waxed and polished, but the entire third floor, the large hall on the second floor and the offices on the first floor are covered with heavy felt-lined linoleum.

On the second floor is a room reserved for and furnished by the national board of the Y. W. C. A. for the convenience of national board secretaries who often make Atlanta their headquarters in visiting the southern associations. A large portion of the floor, including a very large front room, is as yet unfurnished. As soon as sufficient funds are at hand this room will be made into an ideal lunchroom to operate in conjunction with the health education department. Adjoining the lunchroom is a large light room to be used as a kitchen, supplemented by a service pantry, a storage pantry and a combined fire escape and service stair. These pantries and the kitchen, as well as all lavatories and locker rooms are done in the Hockaday enamel finish, the walls being covered with washable cream oil paint. Completing this floor is a roomy private dining room just off the lunchroom.

Comfort for Girls.

The third floor has been arranged entirely for the use of the groups of girls that gather at the association headquarters. There are four clubrooms of different sizes for use by the various groups. These clubrooms, which are designed expressly for pleasure and comfort, contain pianos and brightly upholstered wicker furniture, and will be used as rest rooms and informal gathering places as well as for formal clubrooms. All four rooms are papered in gayly figured wallpaper. One especially attractive room is finished in a genuine old English chintz pattern. Built into the wall of one of the clubrooms is the men's old cigar cabinet cut down and repainted. In another is the old A. A. C. trophy case, which will be used to hold the girls' handiwork materials. In one room on this floor will be placed the desks of all the secretaries in charge of the various clubs sponsored by the Y. W. C. A.

The entire rear part of the building—all three floors—is occupied by the gymnasium, the scene of many athletic triumphs in the old days of the A. A. C. In addition to a running track, handball courts, rings, racks and other movable equipment, the A. A. C. always claimed to have the best basketball court in the south. All of this equipment has been retained and improved. The skylight over the gymnasium has been cleaned, flooding the hall with light; windows and doors have been added; the fine maple floor has been scraped and scrubbed, and everything has been put in readiness for the physical education program that plays so great a part in the work of the entire association. The gallery overlooking the gym will be used to accommodate visitors who are always welcome to come and watch the gymnasium work, but who will never be allowed on the playing floor. Adjoining the gymnasium are the offices of the physical director and of the examining physician.

The "tote box" system of gymnasium lockers in use now in practically all of the more modern gymnasiums, has been installed. Each girl's gym clothes packed in a wire basket, labelled with her name and number, are stored on shelves in the "tote box" room, and may be obtained from the maid there, together with a key to a locker in which she may put her street clothes while she is in the gymnasium.

Every Modern Convenience.

A large dressing room, just off the "tote box" room in the basement, is equipped with six units of private dressing rooms with room for others to be added later. Each unit includes four small rooms grouped around a marble shower bath. A new cement floor has been laid in this room, varying in thickness from three inches at the walls to two inches in the center. In the main dressing room, also, there is an electric hair-dryer and an exhaust fan to keep the air as pure as possible.

A very special feature of the new Y. W. C. A. is the swimming pool. This is the first indoor swimming pool ever maintained in Atlanta to which girls and women have ready access, and, as such, will be one of the most popular and interesting phases of the association's activities. The pool, which had been very inch renovated, has a depth ran from three feet six inches to eigh nes, and an area of 18 l is lined with white ceramic tile, with green depth and distance markers, and with a non-skid tread around the entire pool. It is fitted with brass ladders and a diving board and with an improved scum-gutter. The water and the room are both heated and every drop of water in the pool is filtered and sterilized every 10 hours. The pool may also be vacuum-cleaned.

In order to assure the highest possible degree of purity for the water of this pool, all bathing suits used there are furnished by the Y. W. C. A. They are sterilized after each wearing, and every bather is required to make use of the showers before donning her suit. An added precaution is the stipulation that every bather must also make use of the foot-bath laid at the base of the pool before entering the water.

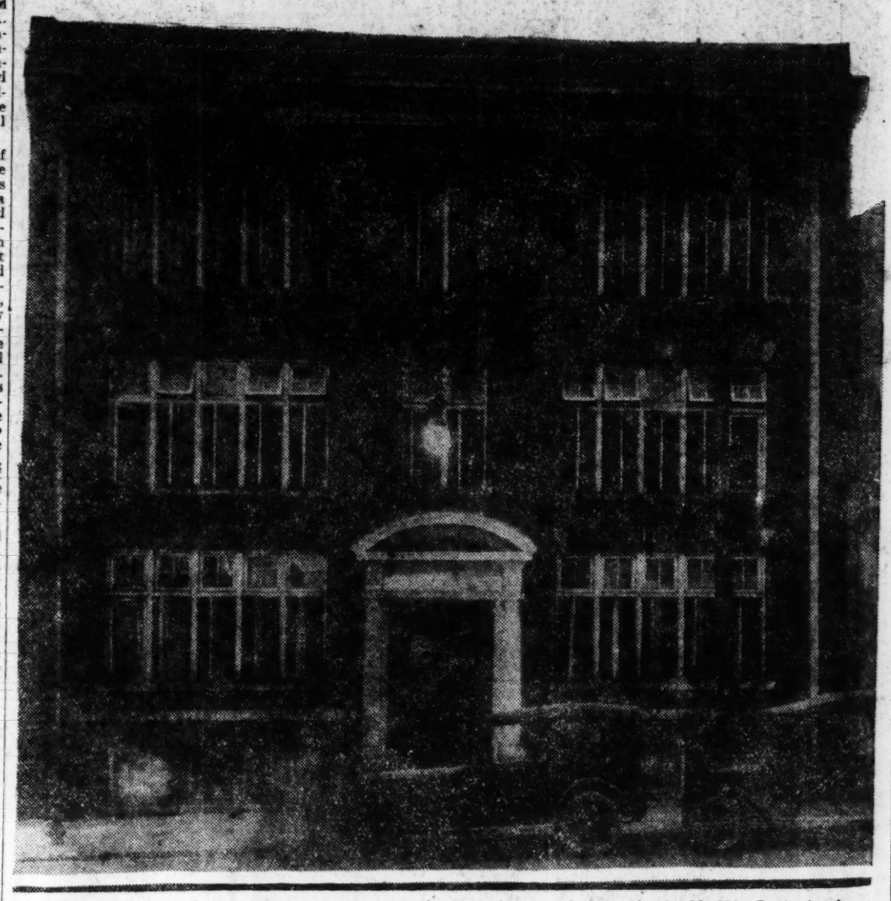

Pools for Swimming.

The walls of the swimming pool room are done in the Hockaday enamel finish in a soft green that harmonizes with the water, and are fitted with oscillating wall fans to keep the air circulating. There is a separate entrance for spectators, leading to bleachers at one end of the pool. At the side of the pool, under a sloping skylight, are banked green, growing plants. The swimming instructor has a smaller room adjoining the pool room.

Just outside the spectators' entrance to the pool has been placed the men's old bar, brought down from the original bar room on the third floor. Here will be sold candies, soft drinks, chewing gum and bathing caps. In the basement, also, is a men's lavatory, dressing room for both men and maid servants, and a large storage room with special lockers. The men's old shower room, now vacant, will be made later into a model laundry room. The heating plant is a vapor system, considered the latest thing in the heating line. In conjunction with it operates the most modern type of filtration plant.

This new Atlanta Y. W. C. A. is a well-planned building throughout, planned by women for women, and designed to fill a long-felt need of Atlanta's girlhood. Altogether, it is a distinct credit to all those who have assisted in its conception.

Modern New Home of Atlanta Y. W. C. A.

Completely renovated and rearranged, the new home of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A. is shown above. Formerly the Atlanta Athletic club, the building was purchased and converted into a permanent home for the local association.

The Estes Surgical Supply company has the largest supply house of this nature in the southern states. The concern keeps four traveling men on the road who cover five states. The company is in a position to furnish everything needed by surgeons from the most intricate surgical apparatus to the smallest surgical instrument. It is particularly well equipped to furnish complete outfits for hospitals.

RAMBO COMPANY STARTS PRICE CUTS

R. K. Rambo, president of R. K. Rambo company, is one of the pioneer merchants of Atlanta, and one of the first in his line of business here. He was one of the first in this line to establish new prices for 1927 on blankets, linens and draperies. This firm is the only one of its kind in the south which serves hotels, hospitals and other institutions and its business in this field is steadily increasing.

Magnificent Swimming Pool At Y. W. C. A. Filled Daily With Pure, Filtered Water

Newest and Most Hygienic Features Adopted in Remodeled Pool at Local Y. W. C. A.

"Some people drink filtered water, we bathe in it." And again, "We swim in water meeting American Public Health association requirements for drinking water."

The above may give an idea of the standard of purity of the water in the new Y. W. C. A. swimming pool, which is expected to be maintained at all times. This is the first and most important feature insisted upon from the first inception, and which has been adequately met, though there are many others worthy of special mention, the pool having been entirely redesigned and brought up to the highest and most exacting requirements for the most modern installations by the architects, Messrs. Ivey and Crook, and the business manager, Miss Elizabeth Gregg.

On entering the pool room, it presents a pleasing and handsome appearance. The interior surface of the pool has been entirely covered with new white tiling, with markers for distance and depth in contrasting color, as are the run-ways of non-slip tile, and the side-walls, all having perfectly smooth surfaces and corners without cracks, crevices, sharp corners or pockets to shelter disease germs and dirt. The building is well ventilated and lighted, and the surrounding floors and walls are free from obstructions. In a large and commodious room immediately adjoining the pool are located the shower baths and dressing rooms. Six marble showers, each with its complement of four dressing rooms, providing a total of 24 individual rooms, insure ample accommodations for privacy and convenience, as the arrangement is such that the bather steps directly from the showers into her own room, obviating the necessity of darting through corridors or halls or any exposure.

Strictly Modern.

The equipment for operation is in strict accordance with the most modern methods and requirements of the National Y. W. C. A. board, American Association for Promoting Hygiene and Public Baths, American Public Health association, and state boards of health. The original filling of the pool is from a connection to the city water supply main. Thereafter, only the small amount of make-up water necessary, due to dripping from suits, splashing, and evaporation, is required from this source. When the pool has been filled, a centrifugal pump and motor, with the pump suction connected with the deep end of the pool, and on which is placed a strainer and hair catcher with clean-out arrangement, pumps the water out of the pool through a battery of three rapid sand mechanical pressure filters, where the water is completely filtered of all sediment, dirt, lint, and rendered bright, clear, and free from color or matter in suspension. The filtered water then goes to the heater, where the temperature is raised to the proper degree. On leaving the heater, it is chlorinated and sterilized by a Paradon chlorinator. The water is not only sterilized but a small amount over that required for immediate sterilization is introduced to keep the pool sterile at all times in all parts of the pool even while the bathers are using same to its fullest capacity. After being chlorinated, the water enters the pool at the shallow end through two ornamental distributors or aerators, at a point above the water level and just under the walkway, where it is aerated, eventually reaching the pool as filtered, sterilized, and aerated water, of the proper temperature. This completes one cycle of operation, which is continued without interruption, and which completely fills and empties the contents of the pool once in every operating period of 10 hours.

Many Novel Features.

There are scum gutters and overflows located under the walk-ways, at about the level of the water in the pool, for the purpose of carrying away anything of a floating nature and the drainage from the walk-ways; and a novel and distinctive feature is the fact that no gas or flooding from the sewer can possibly occur. Should it be necessary to drain the pool or filters, the pump is used to pump the water directly to the sewer. At all other times the connection is tightly closed with gate valves.

The equipment for the operation of the pool was furnished and supervised by S. P. Rees, contracting engineer, Candler building, Atlanta, who makes a specialty of equipping and constructing swimming pools.

BANNER YEAR SEEN FOR ATLANTA BUSINESS

For more than a quarter of a century Friddell Brothers have operated a decorating and painting business in Atlanta, the company having been founded in 1900. H. L. Friddell is senior member of the firm with S. J. Friddell, junior member.

Business prospects for next year are unusually bright with this firm and the company has just rounded out one of the most successful years of its business, the volume being much heavier in 1926 than in the previous year.

In the long period this company has operated in Atlanta it has carried out a policy of high class work which has become one of the biggest assets of the enterprise.

Photoplay News

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

'MY OFFICIAL WIFE,' METROPOLITAN FILM

"My Official Wife," the melodramati picture, which comes to the Metropolitan theater Monday for a run of six days, is the first American production to be made by Paul Stein.

The story he has handled deals with Petrograd and Vienna before the war. Helene, Countess Orloff, is affianced to Ivan, a Russian nobleman, and they have an engagement to go to a masquerade ball together. Ivan, however, has mixed his dates, and he finds it more important to his happiness to keep an engagement for that evening with a notorious demi-moudaine. As a result, Helene, who is wearing a peasant costume, decides to go to the ball alone.

Her peasant disguise and her distinguished beauty take the eye of six roystering young nobles, who force her to accompany them to a wayside inn. There, in a riotous orgy, they cast lots for her, and she is won by a grand duke's son, named Alexander.

She escapes at dawn and at home confesses her humiliation to her father and Ivan. They are furious and Ivan breaks his engagement. Helene swears revenge upon her betrayer and the sensational story that develops is full of incident that ranges from the road to Siberia, to the gay cafes of Vienna, and back through the turmoil of post-war Russia.

Irene Rich has a vividly picturesque role as Helene, and she acts it up to the hilt. Conway Tearle adds another excellent portrait to his long gallery of screen heroes, as the gay and festive Alexander.

Enricho Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra will present a special musical program. The overture will be Rhapsodie Russe, by Joseph Nussbaum. The score for the feature photo play comprises mostly Russian music and Strauss waltzes. The principal theme is "Maiden's Dream," written by a member of Mr. Leide's orchestra, Herman Effell. Another bright spot on this week's program will be the appearances of Robert Earle, famous Chicago radio baritone, who will be heard in a program of new and popular ballads. The extra screen attractions will include our own Bobby Jones, in a special Pathe reel showing the plays that won him the golf championship. The latest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views will also be shown.

'THE CLINGING VINE' ON GEORGIA SCREEN

Appearing in one of the most delightful film comedies produced this season, Leatrice Joy will be seen all week at Keith's Georgia in "The Clinging Vine," written by Zelda Sears. The story gives Miss Joy an opportunity to display her talents in a widely different type of role from any she has portrayed in the past.

In the story of "The Clinging Vine" the heroine is a successful business girl, a private secretary in a manufacturing business. Wrapped up in her work she forgets about looks, or clothes or men. When she gets away from business she is like a fish out of water, until one day she wakes up!

Tom Moore plays opposite Leatrice Joy in "The Clinging Vine," and portrays the role of a young dreamer with no sense of business. Appearing with Tom Moore and Robert Edeson in support of Miss Joy are Snitz Edwards, Toby Claude and Dell Henderson. This film feature is adapted from the musical comedy which ran for many months in New York and was later shown in the principal cities of the country.

'STRANDED IN PARIS' ON HOWARD SCREEN

Have you ever been to Paris—city of the midnight fun? Bebe Daniels has. In fact, she's been stranded there! Her current starring comedy, "Stranded in Paris," arriving at the Howard eater tomorrow, takes Bebe from a small western town to the land of her dreams. On the way over she mets handsome young James Hall and gives him her Paris address.

Finding the street on which the house is located, she discovers nothing but a heap of ashes. Not knowing what to do, her worries are increased when a thief snatches her purse. Bebe gives chase but loses him in an amazing maze of streets. Incidentally she loses herself.

Well, after losing her way, she wins a positoin with "Hortense," a modiste. They ask Bebe to deliver some gowns at Deauville, but through a switch in the railroad tickets she is transported to the other resort and welcomed as Countess Pasada.

Laugh? You can't count 'em! Smiles? Miles and miles of 'em! Thrills? nough to chill and chill! Beauty? Enough to make any pirate's booty! What else could you ask in a Bebe Daniels comedy?

"Under Venetian Skies," Paul Oscard's latest presentation which is the leading stage attraction this week, might appropriately be styled "The League of Nations." For the cast of this high-class singing and dancing revue entails a personnel that is literally drawn from all quarters of the globe. Its members hail from such scattered points as New York and Moscow; from Pittsburgh and the borders of the Black sea, with the result that this latest Publix offering has a versatile display of talent seldom seen behind the footlights.

"Toyland," a screen novelty showing the manufacture of toys, will prove a real treat for adults and a delight for the kiddies. Emma Noe, concert soprano, will appear as an added stage feature. The Howard Symphony orchestra, under Joseph Littau's direction, will offer "Echoes From the Metropolitan Opera House" as the overture. Melvin P. Ogden's specialty at the golden-voiced Wurlitzer will be "Let's Play Golf." Other subjects on the entertaining program will include a Pathe News reel and selected comedy.

the Screen

Heavens! What's this? We reckon you'll have to go to the Howard this week to find out the trouble facing Bebe Daniels in "Stranded in Paris," a scene from which appears on the upper left. The next scene is from "California Straight Ahead," featuring Reginald Denny, at the Tenth Street theater. Conway Tearle is next shown in a scene from "My Official Wife" at the Metropolitan all week. Upper right are shown Billie Dove and Bert Lytell, who are seen at the West End in "The Lone Wolf Returns." On the left of the middle row, Harrison Ford is seen declaring his love to somebody. Must be Marie Prevost, who co-stars with him in "Almost a Lady" at the Rialto this week. Next is stately Alice Terry, who is seen at the Grand in "The Magician." Tom Moore and Leatrice Joy are featured at Keith's Georgia in "The Clinging Vine." Right, middle row, is shown Norman Kerry, starring at the Cameo in "Under Western Skies." Bottom row, left, is scene from "Up in Mabel's Room" with Marie Prevost. Robert McKim is featured at the Tudor in "The Wolf Hunter." Tom Mix is seen at the Alamo No. 2 in "Tony Runs Wild."

Fairfax Theater.

(East Point.)

One of the most interesting and original stories of the American Indian ever filmed is slated for showings of Monday and Tuesday at the new Fairfax theater in East Point, in "Braveheart," starring Rod LaRoque "Braveheart" is the story of a young Indian, the son of a chieftain, who in order to avoid the land of his fathers being attached by the whitman, goes to college and studies law. While at the university he meets a young white girl and they fall in love with each other. Matters are complicated when the girl turns out to be the daughter of the man who is trying to deprive the Indians of their land. The story ultimately works out to a novel and thoroughly interesting ending.

On Wednesday, Richard Dix is scheduled to show in his comedy success, "Say It Again," at the Fairfax theater. This is one of the best comedies made by the popular light comedy star and record crowds have greeted it on every showing so far.

"The Texas Streak" will dash across the screen of the Fairfax theater on Thursday and Friday.

West End Theater.

("The Lone Wolf.")

The history of popular fiction records few characters who lived so vividly in the minds and the memories of readers as has "The Lone Wolf," the leading figure of five of Louis Joseph Vance's widely read novels, who is brought to life on the screen in "The Lone Wolf Returns," starring Bert Lytell and Billie Dove, which comes to the West End theater Monday and Tuesday of this week.

On Wednesday only, the feature is "Sinners in Heaven," a thrilling photoplay of a young society girl who is shipwrecked on an island and of her consequent meeting with a handsome young man who has likewise been shipwrecked. And add to this delightful and potent situation the fact that Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix are seen in the feature roles and you have a picture that is the ultimate in fine entertainment.

Norma Talmadge, delightful comedienne of the screen, who annexed those honors in "Kiki," is playing at the West End theater Thursday and Friday in that picture.

Those who have seen lovely Natalie Kingston, First National player, on the screen, may not perhaps be aware that she is an accomplished dancer as well as actress. She is an outdoor girl—fond of all sports and always brimming with energy and youthful bouyancy. Nevertheless, she is able to portray her dramatic roles with suitable repression and depth of feeling.

Tenth Street Theater.

(Souls and Sables.)

A picture of unusual merit is scheduled for the Tenth Street theater on Monday and Tuesday, when the production "Souls for Sables," suggested by "Garlan and company," by David Graham Phillips makes its premiere at the popular Tenth street playhouse. Featured in this picture of modern life is the beautiful Claire Windsor and Eugene O'Brien. The former never looked better than she does in this, her latest, screen appearance and the gorgeous array of clothes worn by her must have cost a fortune. "Souls for Sables" tells of a girl who, used to the luxuries of life, marries a young business man. Unable to furnish her with beautiful things, she sets about getting them by other means.

Complete even to the elevated railway tracks, a street scene more than a block long, representing a section of New York east side, was built by Universal City for "His People," which is the attraction at the Tenth Street on Wednesday only. Pushcart peddlers, ragged children, bearded old gentlemen and scurrying housewives filled the scene while the picture was being made and Rudloph Schildkraut, featured player in the picture, declared that the scene was as real as a thousand he had seen in the actual locality.

On Saturday the feature is "Silence," the P. D. C. dramatic masterpiece of the current season. H. B. Warner and Vera Reynolds head an all-star cast.

'ALMOST A LADY' IS RIALTO FEATURE

Marie Prevost, the lovely little graduate of stardom from Mack Sennett's school of comedy bathing beauties, is the featured player in "Almost a Lady," the Rialto's headliner for this week.

She is supported by Harirson Ford, George K. Arthur, Trixie Frignaza, and Barney Gilmore, in a cast that is well nigh perfect.

"Wandering Willies" is the Sennett comedy on the program. Pathe News is shown and Frank Turner directs a musical score embodying the latest jazz numbers.

In "Almost a Lady," Marcia Blake, a model, is employed in the gown shop of Monsieur Henri. Marcia displays several gorgeous gowns to Mrs. Reilly, a fat social climber, and her husband, who is rather gay and furtively flirts with Marcia. Mrs. Reilly catches him.

At the side entrance to the shop appears Bob Blake, Marcia's brother, in a flivver. He informs her that he bought it with their bank account of $35 and has started a delivery service which will prove their fortune. He drives to their modest apartment and they quarrel as brothers and sisters are apt to do. Henri tells Marcia that he has come to remind her that he had promised Mrs. Reilly that she would attend a reception at the Reilly home that evening. Marcia goes to the reception and sees William Duge, who is supposed to be the Duke of Lankershim. He is a social lion whom all court, and he is anxious to be introduced to Vonna Vola, a famous writer. A message is received by Mrs. Reilly that Vonna Vola cannot attend the reception and Mrs. Reilly is in despair until she sees Marcia. It occurs to her that Marcia can take Vonna Vola's place. Billy is smitten with the "young writer." They go to an arbor and he tells Marcia that he loves her. She evades him and flees. Billy searches in vain for her and is keenly disappointed at losing her. Brother Bob is fearful that Marcia is going bad when she returns home dishevelled and vows vengeance upon Mosieur Henri. The next day Mrs. Reilly prevails upon Marcia at the shop to remain Vonna Vola for one day longer, as she had promised the Duke that the young authoress would be at the Beach club that afternoon. She against meets Billy and when he makes love to her she tells him she is an imposter, but the confession makes him even more desirous of marrying her.

Cameo Theater.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Cameo brings back Corinne Griffith's greatest picture, "Lilies of the Field," a story of gold diggers, those who toil not, spin not, yet dress more gorgeously than did Solomon in all his glory. There is also in the picture a drama of rare power and charm.

Friday and Saturday brings to the Cameo Norman Kerry in a splendid story of the westland, "Under Western Skies," combining the hectic life of Broadway, a struggle for supremacy in the west and a young man's fight against his father for what he believed was right.

Being brought back on Monday and Tuesday by the Cameo is one of the most enjoyable of all screen romances, "To Have and to Hold."

REX INGRAM FILM AT LOEW'S GRAND

Produced with a cast of the most notable young stars of the screen in leading roles, "The Magician," Rex Ingram's masterly picture, will be the feature offering at Loew's Grand theater this week. In the array of stars are Alice Terry, Paul Wegener, Ivan Petrovich, Firmin Gemier and Gladys Hamer. The picture is based on a remarkable story of W. Somerset Maugham.

Ivan Petrovich, the young Serbian actor who has the leading male role in Rex Ingram's production of "The Magician," was born at Novi Sad, in Serbia. He was educated at Bucarest, Belgrade and Prague. Petrovich studied to become an architectural engineer. Having a good voice and a natural talent for music, he also studied violin and voice at the Conservatoire of Prague in his spare time.

At the start of the war he enlisted and served as an officer in the Royal Serbian cavalry. He was with the king of Serbia when he was obliged to evacuate the country.

His first appearance before the camera was in a French film in 1924. Since that time he has established himself as one of the most popular of European leading men and is recognized as one of the most handsome and talented. He is six feet tall and weighs 160 pounds.

He is of royal descent and would have the title of prince—but for the war and the Serbian difficulties which followed. He was decorated with the Serbian crois de guerre and the Sventa Anna, which is the most distinguished decoration the Serbian government can confer.

'Square Crooks' Will Hold Boards at Forsyth Theatre

Only recently released for stock, "Square Crooks," sensational New York success, opens for a week's engagement Monday night at the Forsyth theater with the Forsyth Players presenting the offering. The offering is extremely popular because of its cleanliness and the fact that it involves a plot rarely touched upon in present day theater circles.

Leaving a long, successful engagement in New York, the play comes direct to this city and immediately after it became possible to secure it for stock.

Few plays in recent years has created more interest than "Square Crooks," not alone because of its cheerfulness as a background for a plot that involves anything else but such a spirit, but for its wholesomeness and cleanliness of both theme and lines.

It combines a rare vein of comedy and a richer vein of excitement, is a good, downright clever laugh producer throughout and a show that will provide one of the best vehicles of the year for James Coots and Jeanne Devereaux, leading players of the Forsyth theater group. Gus Forbes, Rhea Diveley, Alan Devitt, Lawrence Keating, Jay Mulrey, Theodosia Shaler and others of the star cast will have some of the best opportunities of the season.

The plot of the play hinges around the age-old theory among sleuths that "once a crook always a crook," and the two big figures are about two chaps who are friends, on the straight road now after a tempestous career as crooks. One is married and the other in love with a friend of the wife of his pal. A hounding detective is continually poking his nose, so to speak, into the lives of the two—with laughter here and laughter there and more laughter everywhere.

The past week has been one of the busiest with Forsyth Players, Director Henry McRae Webster spending most of the mornings and evenings with his players in rehearsal, leaving "Grounds for Divorce" to take care f itself—and it did pretty well all week.

Special studies of each character have been made by players and at no time during the past several weeks have officials felt more encouraged and more optimistic over the success of "Square Crooks."

Alamo No. 2.
(Tom Mix.)

"Tony Runs Wild," the Tom Mix picture which will be shown at the Alamo No. 2, Monday and Tuesday, is his greatest contribution to the screen.

This picture gives both Mix and his wonder horse "Tony" an opportunity to appear in new feats of strength and skill and to add thrills that are new even for Mix and "Tony."

The setting for "Tony Runs Wild" is along the Apache trail, in some of America's most striking scenery, including exteriors and interiors of the ancient cliff dwellings, homes of a race long vanished. Well-known mining properties are shown on the screen and the roads selected for the picture are the most striking of all along America's highway of wonders.

The celebrated Box canyon is the setting for the final act of the play and "Tony," playing the role of leader of a band of wild horses, displays even more of his unusual intelligence.

Jacqueline Logan appears as Tom's leading lady. On the same program will be shown Charlie Chaplin in his very funniest comedy "A Dog's Life." Be sure to bring the kids to see this great double bill. To be shown Monday and Tuesday only.

HARRY CARROLL REVUE TOPS KEITH GEORGIA

Stan Stanley Another Big Feature for This Week.

Much has been said about the vaudeville shows seen at Atlanta's newest theater but none of the bills thus far shown have received the advance notices accorded that which opens at the Georgia tomorrow.

Harry Carroll and his company of 12 dancers, singers and comedians, was originally billed to head the opening week's show at the Georgia but because of changes in bookings was prevented from arriving in time to share honors with the other excellent acts seen that week. Carroll's revue is billed as "The Dancing Derby" and includes in the cast such names as Helen and Milton Charleston, Vera Marsh, George Leete, Marguerite O'Rourke and Phyllis Soule, the last named young lady being a former Mack Sennett beauty. In this company Marjorie Whitney divides top line honors with Harry Carroll in what is said to be an extremely tuneful and attractive presentation.

Stan Stanley and his company of comics will furnish a large share of the laughs during the week and as part of their work takes place in the audience you may expect some surprises. Clarence Rock and Edythe Blossom have a clever singing, dancing and humorous skit which was conceived by Nan Halperin and staged by Hazel Archibald.

Louis London, noted baritone and former member of several opera companies, notably the Savage Opera company and the famous Bostonians in America, and the Moody-Manners Opera company of England, is making his initial appearance in vaudeville, presenting a program of character songs. Last but hardly least is the act of Vera and Tom Patts who will furnish the thrills and possibly some spills in their aerial exhibition.

EDNA WALLACE HOPPER TO APPEAR AT GRAND

Loew's Grand theater announces the personal appearance of Edna Wallace Hopper, noted comic opera star, as the headline attraction on the special bill of vaudeville scheduled for the week of December 20. Miss Hopper, 62 years old with the appearance of a girl of 19, will present a sketch written for her by Raymond Hitchcock, famous musical comedy comedian.

For many years Miss Hopper ranked as one of the foremost musical comedy stars of the country. She appeared in the original production of "Floradora" and also as prima donna in numerous other comic opera and musical comedy successes.

Because of the marvelous capacity Miss Hopper possesses of preserving her youthful appearance she has been hailed as "the most remarkable woman of the twentieth century." Miss Hopper has won world wide fame through her discovery of various beauty secrets and during her engagement here will give a special matinee for women only at which she will explain the methods she uses in preserving her youth.

Tudor Theater.

A story of the greatest body of man hunters on earth, "The Royal Mounted Police of Canada, will be unfolded on the screen at the Tudor on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. This picture, "The Wolf Hunters," is the story of a man, known throughout the country for never failing to get his man, who flirts with a woman to save his younger brother, falls in love with her, and then discovers she is the murderer for whom he has been searching.

How he chose between love and duty, faced the greatest fight of his life, and then won out, makes some of the fastest, most thrilling action of any northwestern picture ever made.

Starting Thursday, the Tudor offers Bob Custer in his latest thrill show, "The Fighting Boob," the story of "The Tiger," a man feared by all, who impersonates another and plays a coward and boob until the time comes to unmask himself and show them what a real fighter was.

Faster than all his other pictures, "The Fighting Boob" is unquestionably a success.

Palace Theater.

A screaming farce comedy that in many moments of excitement approaches hysterical heights appears at the Palace theater in Inman Park Monday and Tuesday when "Up in Mabel's Room" gallops across the silver sheet. The attractive and talented Harrison Ford provides the majority of the fun in this super comedy

On Wednesday, for the one day only, "Silent Pal" provides drama and a world of heart interest in one of the best dramatic productions of its kind.

On Thursday and Friday "The Unknown Soldier" gives to Palace patrons one of the super attractions of the year and a war story that has been heralded from coast to coast as a masterpiece of photoplay production.

A treat for Atlantans appears Saturday at the Palace when the popular playhouse closes its week with "Fascinating Youth."

Social Leader.

Dolores del Rio, leader of Mexico City society, when she came to Hollywood to enter the films recently, had to devote an entire month to close her affairs in the Mexican capital.

Miss del Rio, however, retained her Durango ranch and will return there every year for a three or four months' rest between seasons. She has just completed the leading role in First National's "Pals First," playing opposite Lloyd Hughes.

Erlanger To Open 27th With Carroll's 'Vanities'

Bert Swor, Lou Powers and Louise Brooks Head Big Broadway Show at New Theater.

The magnificent new Erlanger theater, at Peachtree and North avenue, said to be the very last word in theater distinction, artistic elegance and comfort, will be opened to the public on Monday, December 27, and will have as its initial attraction, one of New York's biggest sensational successes, the Earl Carroll "Vanities," which will be shown throughout the week, with matinees Wednesdty and Saturday. The enormous success of the "Vanities," from the very time of its first presentation, exceeded the expectation of its producer. It is unique in character, the book being devoted largely to travesties on the topics of the day, and introducing a quaint humor, entirely different from the usual stereotyped comedy of the average revue or musical comedy. Everywhere it has caught the audience by its absurdities and humorous hits at subjects of popular interest.

The entire New York production, with a company of 100 people, headed by Bert Swor, Lou Powers, Dave Chasen and the perfect Venus—Louise Brooks, is carried on the road. It has been the policy of this organization never to reduce the company when traveling, either in the number of its members or in the standard of the performers. The cast to be seen here includes many favorites, among them Alice Bradford, Mary Dowling, Lew Miller, John Coyle, Kenneth Lackey, and a bewilderingly beautiful chorus of singing and dancing girls.

The revue is of spectacular magnificence, and introduces many charming and original numbers, notably, "The Rotisserie," "The Gate of Roses," "Neath Miami Skies," "The Kinky Kids on Parade," and the grand finale, "Hi Ho," assembling the entire strength of the company. The witty book is by William A. Grew, the music by Clarence Gaskill and the dancing and ensembles arranged by David Bennett. The large and capable chorus of pretty girls are a pleasure and a delight, every one voilating rule 43 of the union by refusing to divulge a wrinkle.

Ray Kavanaugh and the Earl Carroll Theater orchestra are a distinct feature of the performance. Mail orders, which must be accompanied by remittance, may be sent in now for all performances of the opening week and these will be filled strictly in the order of their receipt. As the capacity of the new Erlanger will undoubtedly be tested at every performance, an early reservation of seats is strongly advised.

VENTRILOQUIST TOPS LOEW'S GRAND BILL

Filled with a wide variety of entertainment the bill of vaudeville scheduled for this week at Loew's Grand theater gives promise of being a real top notcher in every respect, the headliner being Marshall Montgomery, "Vaudeville's Foremost Ventriloquist." Another act of the headline class on the bill is the Gilbert and Avery revue. Marshall Montgomery has won international fame as a ventriloquist, not oly for the fine finish of his work but also on its rare entertainment value.

The Gilbert and Avery revue is a lively dancing act with songs and comedy featured. There are seven people in the cast including Lillian Kenny, Jack Waller, Jerry Fragile, Paul Rodney and Joe Gold. It is produced under the direction of Lew Cantor and William Brandell and is equipped with a beautiful scenic background.

Songs, old and new, will be featured by the Temple Four, an excellent singing organization. They also will present some comedy and some novelty dances. The act is entitled "Three Jacks and an Ace."

Denis Chabot and Nonette Tortinl will appear in a recent importation from European music halls. This act is of a decided foreign flavor and is full of racy humor. Maximo, the noted Cuban wirewalker, will open the bill with his new act.

The feature picture attraction for the week will be "The Magician," Rex Ingram's latest production with Alice Terry and Paul Wegener in leading roles.

Mary Astor Getting Ready.

Beautiful Mary Astor is preparing to start her role as leading woman for Milton Sills in the latter's forthcoming stellar picture, "The Runaway Enchantress." Miss Astor is accumulating a novel wardrobe and making a close study of the character she is to depict in this story with a fishing village background.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Great Future Is Predicted For Georgia Realty Activity

Great faith in the future development of Georgia lands from an agricultural standpoint is held by Robert L. Cooper, of Savannah, who was re-elected president of the Georgia Real Estate association at the convention Thursday in Albany.

ROBERT L. COOPER.

The son of George Washington Cooper, of Screven county, who invented the Cooper plow and a number of other useful farming implements, Mr. Cooper inherited a love for agriculture which has been expressed in his real estate career by his interest in problems of the Georgia farmer. Mr. Cooper is now conducting a practical demonstration of the benefits of diversified farming by establishing and operating a model hog, cow and chicken ranch with a varied planting program on the Ogeechee road near Savannah.

In his efforts to draw attention to the value of Georgia soils, Mr. Cooper succeeded in attracting the interest of Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, with the result that Mr. Ford invested in 30,000 acres of rich timber and farm land in Bryan county, on the Ogeechee river. Other prominent persons from out of the state have been interested in Georgia lands by Mr. Cooper, resulting in the sale of a number of large farms in the Georgia coast section and their rehabilitation and development on a successful scale.

Following his marriage to Miss Lily Green, of Dalton, Mr. Cooper was in the employ of the Seaboard Air Line railway for several years until opportunities of the real estate field were impressed upon him. He then resigned from the railroad's services, and became connected with Charlesworth J. Hunter, of Savannah, in the real estate field. Serving in Mr. Hunter's office for a long period, he eventually opened his own company several years ago, resolving to devote his efforts chiefly to the development of country property, farm and timber lands.

First Woman Realtor.

So enthused did Mr. Cooper become with the opportunities in Georgia coast real estate that his wife absorbed some of his ideas and became associated with him in the business as the first woman realtor of Savannah. Mrs. Cooper now handles the bulk of the city property transactions of the company, leaving Mr. Cooper free for his hobby, farm and timberland developments. John Y. Dyer, a prominent figure in Savannah's civic life, was next attached to handle city sales.

Through his work in the Savannah Board of Trade and the Savannah Real Estate Board, Mr. Cooper was drafted into service as a director of the real estate board and then as vice president and later as president, which position he now holds.

At the convention of the state association of real estate boards held in Atlanta in 1925, Mr. Cooper was made state vice president, succeeding to the presidency with the resignation of Albert S. Adams of this city.

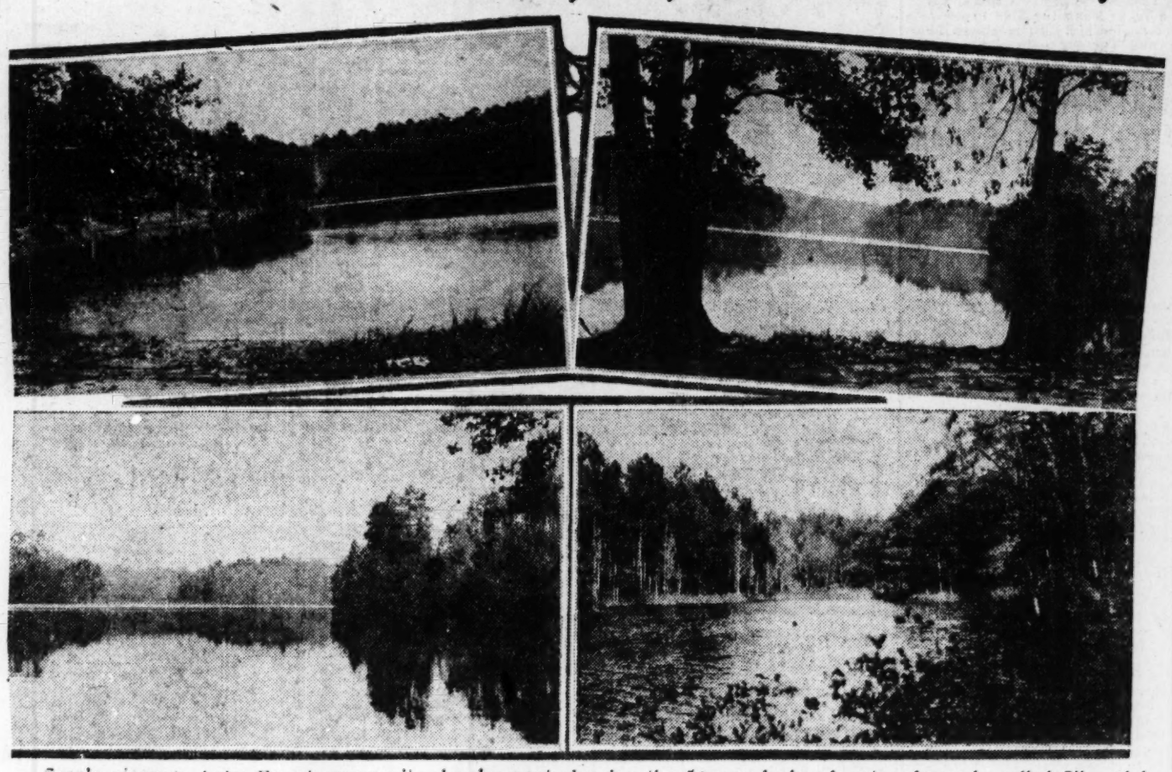

Wealth Untold.

"There is wealth untold in this rich Georgia soil," Mr. Cooper told The Constitution Saturday. "One look at the rank vegetation which springs uncultivated from the soil of south Georgia must make a person wonder what Georgia earth would do if properly cultivated. Proof of what it will do is to be found on farms in Chatham county.

"Satsuma oranges and other semi-tropical fruits have been found to flourish in south Georgia. Even bunch grape vines from California have been transplanted with marked success, and only a few miles from Savannah there is a government demonstration farm on which Japanese bamboo has been grown for years."

Other officers elected at the Albany convention include M. J. Ellis, of Macon, vice president; Arthur S. Harris, reelected secretary, is also secretary of the Savannah Real Estate Board, and George W. Hunt, executive of the Chatham Loan and Savings company of Savannah, treasurer.

Carload of Machinery Is Awaited Here For Work on $5,000,000 Lake Forest Project

Scenic views in Lake Forest community development showing the 50-acre body of water, formerly called Silver lake, on the edge of which homes fashioned after those of Lake Como, in northern Italy, will be built. The virgin timber that covers the properties is in evidence.

Who's Who in Real Estate

BY MIKE BREEN

La-dies and gent-lemen! It is a privilege and pleasure to introduce to you this morning George J. Morris, of the firm of F. P. and George J. Morris.

Mr. Morris is no stranger. Not by any ways or means committee. In fact, he's as well known in Atlanta as the Grady monument, and is as active in real estate circles as the old monument is inactive in Marietta street traffic. George, as we will call him here, for that certainly is his name, and that's what everybody else calls him—George has spent the greater part of his life in Atlanta.

Three years ago he opened a real estate office with his brother, and since that day they have enjoyed an active business. George is in complete charge of the sales force of the concern, and supervises all its advertising.

The Morris concern, under the personal direction of George and F. P. Morris, have built several homes within the past few months, all of which have found eager purchasers. Extensive plans for the erection of more homes, are under way now, according to George, who is enthusiastic over this particular phase of their business.

Commenting on business conditions, George had this, among other interesting things, to say:

"This has been our best year since we started in business three years ago, and we have every reason to believe that next year will see even greater increases in sales and production. People have faith in Atlanta and its real estate and are buying homes for living as well as investment purposes."

With preliminary grading on the new Lake Forest community development begun last week, the recent purchasers of Silver Lake park property are awaiting the arrival of a car load of tractors, trucks and other development equipment to start the work. Walter C. Hardesty, owner and developer of Rio Vista on the Halifax, Florida, said Saturday.

Charles Peak, who has been sales manager for Mr. Hardesty in the $10,000,000 Rio Vista community development, arrived in Atlanta late last week to take up duties of sales manager for the Lake Forest project. R. E. Meredith, fromerly with Mr. Hardesty in Florida, and who interested him in investing in Atlanta property, will be director of sales here. Mr. Hardesty is president, and Albert F. Young, his brother-in-law, secretary and treasurer of the Lake Forest corporation that plans to spend $5,000,000 in making the former Silver Lake region one of the beauty spots of this section.

Open Sales Office.

"Our Atlanta sales office will be completed and opened during the week," Mr. Hardesty stated. "Plans for the development have been going on for the past few weeks prior to the purchase of the land last Tuesday and we expect to carry these into effect with as little delay as possible.

"Martin L. Hampton, of Miami, whose work in Rio Vista, Miami and elsewhere has placed him among the leaders in his profession, is in charge of the building construction work for Lake Forest. He is expected to arrive in Atlanta the latter part of the week and expressed the opinion that he will open an office here. In a recent telegram he stated, in referring to the Lake Forest development, 'Have five men working on Atlanta plans. Will be the most beautiful and logical scheme we have ever designed.'"

Italian Architecture.

Mr. Hampton, who was in Atlanta recently studying the type of architecture that would be most suitable to the environments of Lake Forest, is said to have selected the north Italian architecture developed to its greatest beauty in the Lake Como district, which is one of the most talked-of European resorts. The landscaping developments, with which all buildings will be made to harmonize through a highly restrictive city planning commission, will be in charge of the Albert A. Taylor organization, nationally-known landscape architects and city planners, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Between $500,000 and $1,000,000 will be expended on land improvements during 1927, Mr. Hardesty declared. "These will include the formation of another large lake in addition to the present 50-acre lake, a series of basins connecting the two lakes with a 35-foot drop over an ornament cascade effect, all necessary street and residential improvements, lake terraces and walls, bridle paths, canoe trail, artistic driveways and entrances and other details required in the class of community development. Among the first buildings to be erected will be a series of model homes, a club hotel and riding academy along the line of architecture that will be encouraged among all future homesite purchasers."

All the officials semed highly enthusiastic over the new enterprise. "One of the things that has been most pleasing to us," Mr. Meredith stated, "is the large number of inquiries we have been getting prior to our opening and without any business announcement."

REALTORS TO ELECT OFFICERS THURSDAY

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate board will hold their annual meeting at the Atlanta Athletic club on Thursday, December 16, it was announced Saturday by Dana Belser, president.

The annual meeting will be in the form of a dinner. Important committee reports will be made covering the work for the year, and announcement will be made of the newly-elected directors. Election of officers also will be held.

Two changes in the constitution and by-laws will be submitted and voted on at that time—one to eliminate that clause in the membership section, making it obligatory that the salesmen of all firm members join the board as associate members, and the other to make it possible that not more than two active members of any firm member can be directors of the board at the same time.

Officers to be elected are, president, vice president, second vice president, secretary and treasurer. This is done by the majority vote of the members present after hearing recommendations of the nomination committee.

President Belser, in discussing the work of the board for this year, stated that the year has been more than successful and that every department of the board's activities has grown.

REALTY FIRM DOUBLES RESIDENTIAL SALES

Revived activity in the residential branch of the Atlanta real estate market was indicated by W. R. Sheppard's announcement Saturday that the brokerage department of W. R. Sheppard & Co., more than doubled during the past three weeks the average sales of any similar preceding period.

"More than $65,000 in sales of this type were handled through our brokerage department within the past three weeks," Mr. Sheppard stated. "During the same period our house contract department, in charge of W. L. Sellers, closed ten contracts aggregating $135,000. These contracts, which provide for the erection of six stores, two duplexes and a number of residences, will be put into effect within the next 45 days."

Included in the sales of the brokerage department was a duplex on Highland avenue, near Virginia avenue, for $17,500, and the following residences: In Grant park, $3,000; on Hardendorf avenue, Inman Park section, $9,000; on McLendon avenue, $11,000; on Woodlawn avenue in Peachtree Hills, $7,000, and three in Sylvan Hills for $18,000 in all.

O. L. Taylor, who is handling Joyland park, the colored subdivision on South Pryor street, supervised the sale of eight home sites in that tract and completed arrangements for the construction of five homes of from $2,000 to $2,500 each, through the building department.

SPRING STREET LOT SOLD TO MIAMIAN FOR $25,250 CASH

Sale of a lot on the southeast corner of Spring and Pine streets to W. N. Holliday, Jr., for Mrs. Ivy T. Davis, of Miami, Fla., at a cash consideration of $25,250, was announced Saturday by the Adair Realty & Trust company.

The lot has a frontage of 52 feet on Spring street and runs back along Pine street 125 feet to an alley. It is considered one of the choicest unimproved lots on Spring street. Brooks Mell, a salesman of the Adair agency, handled the transaction. This is the second deal in which Mr. Mell has figured since joining the Adair forces. He recently sold a corner on Forrest avenue for $20,000, and has other negotiations under way involving the transfer of important business property, it was stated.

HAYNES MANOR SALES CONTINUE BRISK

There has been no let-up in either building activity or sales at Haynes Manor in recent weeks, according to Eugene V. Haynes, the owner and developer, who yesterday announced some recent purchases of home sites in the new north side subdivision.

It was pointed out by Mr. Haynes that all improvements have now been installed at Haynes Manor and some of the specially built homes are now open for inspection by appointment.

Recent sales include:

Two 100-foot lots on Peachtree-Battle avenue to Thomas K. Windham, $12,000.

One 60-foot lot on Dellwood drive to Thomas K. Windham, $3,000.

Mr. Windham is now building a $100,000 home on these Peachtree-Battle avenue lots.

Two 60-foot lots on Dellwood drive to The Better Homes company, $6,000.

The Better Homes company has just completed a new house on one of these lots.

A 100-foot lot on Manor Ridge drive to O. L. Freeman, $5,000.

Mr. Freeman is now erecting a home on same.

A 100-foot lot on Manor Ridge drive to Allan Gottschaldt, $5,000.

An 80-foot lot on Manor Ridge drive to Earle Greene, $4,000.

Mr. Greene is now erecting a home on his lot.

A 100-foot lot on Peachtree-Battle avenue to Frank Munn, $6,000.

Eugene V. Haynes has just completed a new home on Peachtree-Battle avenue costing $50,000, which he intends to occupy in the early spring.

65-ACRE TRACT ON PERIAN ROAD SOLD FOR $19,000

Sale of a 65-acre tract of land in the Mount Perian road section at a consideration of $19,000, and an adjoining tract of 32 acres at a consideration of $14,000 to Judge Percy H. Adams, was announced Saturday by A. S. Adam-Cates company, which handled the transactions.

The 65-acre parcel, known as the Morris place, is located on Harris trail, about 500 feet north of Mount Perian road. It has 2,600 feet of road frontage and is well-wooded, containing a number of streams and springs. The smaller tract, known as the Cobb property, is located at the corner of Garman and Mount Perian roads.

Judge Adams, in purchasing the property, said he believes "the north Fulton county property, especially in the Mount Perian, North side drive section, offers one of the safest investments, and that land there will double in value within a short time, as that is the future residential section of Atlanta."

Realty Firm Adopts New Method To Find Market's Best Values

The sales department of Adair Realty & Trust company has induced a novel method of ascertaining the best values on the market at any particular time. Periodically examination sheets are given each salesman—these sheets containing the following questions:

1. What are the ten best two-story houses now on the market?
2. What are the ten best values in brick bungalows now on the market?
3. Name the ten best values in fine homes.

In reply to each questionnaire each salesman puts down what he considers the best values in the various classes of property. Replies are obtained from ten salesmen handling residences, and in this way a diversity of opinion is obtained.

Frequently certain outstanding values in houses will obtain a unanimous vote in the popularity contest, and the judgment of individual salesmen is vindicated.

Adair salesmen also use this method for sounding out the best investments on the market. All lists obtained from salesmen are combined and a final sheet with all the various properties is turned over to each salesman, thus giving him a consolidated list containing the very best values on the market.

15 ATLANTA REALTORS ATTEND STATE MEET

The 1926 Georgia Real Estate association convention held in Albany Wednesday and Thursday, December 8 and 9, was the sixth annual assembly and was attended by more than 65 realtors representing different boards in the state association. The meetings were held at the city auditorium, and the convention headquarters were at the New Albany hotel.

The addresses of speakers on the program were reported by those attending to be the most enlightening discussions of real estate subjects that have been offered in some time. Mr. Peters, of Louisville, Ky., discussed the matter of selling homes, and his talk was the most helpful that has ever been delivered on this important subject.

The state association officers elected for 1927 were: R. L. Cooper, of Savannah, president; M. J. Ellis, of Macon, vice president; A. S. Harris, of Savannah, secretary, and George W. Hunt, of Savannah, treasurer. The two newly elected directors were H. R. Powell, of Augusta, and W. T. Rey, of Athens.

Atlanta was represented by 15 of its members, including Dana Belser, Ward Wight, E. M. Chapman, G. W. Withers, M. S. Rankin, George M. Brown, S. P. Cronheim and others.

The Albany real estate board was host for the convention and a program of entertainment was arranged and carried out which met every requirement and assured the visiting real estate boards of a very profitable and enjoyable trip, it was reported.

Local Architects Get $250,000 Contract In South Carolina

Contract for the group of municipal buildings to be erected in Orangeburg, S. C., was let during the past week in the offices of G. Lloyd Preacher & Co., local architects, to the Joe W. Stout company, of Sanford, N. C. The total cost of the three buildings, including the city hall and auditorium, the police station and barracks and the fire department headquarters, will exceed a quarter of a million. The Stout company also is contractor for the new community hotel in Orangeburg, the Eutaw hotel, for which G. Lloyd Preacher & Co. are the architects.

Diversification.

The wise merchant in a one-crop country can put his time to no better advantage than to get the farmers to diversify their crops. There is nothing he can do to better insure his own business future, says Good Hardware, than promote the stability and prosperity of agriculture.

GARDEN HILLS GROWTH KEEPS PACE WITH CITY

Thoroughly in keeping with the growth of Atlanta is development and growth of Garden Hills, one of Atlanta's newest residential estates, on Peachtree road, north of Andrews drive and in the heart of the country club section.

A trip through Garden Hills gives evidence of the transformation that has been wrought there in the past two years. East Wesley avenue is now a paved boulevard connecting Peachtree road with Piedmont road, which affords a convenient way for traffic going from one section to the other, rather than having to drive through the roundabout road on the north or on the south. Motorists also can drive through Garden Hills, through the country club section and then through Brentwood forrest into the Piedmont road section.

Brentwood Forrest is the latest development to Garden Hills and work in this new unit is going forward rapidly. The wooded hills are being dotted with attractive residences, the beauty of which is enhanced by the landscape and by the touches of landscape art being added by the developers.

Two years ago this section was red, wooded hills, scarred by deep gullies and disfigured by undergrowth. Today it is a wonderful picture.

ON GLEN IRIS DRIVE

BETWEEN Angier avenue and Wabash avenue, we are erecting three six-room brick bungalows, and we propose to show some of you North Side people a type of bungalow that has never been erected on the North Side before. We will also prove to you that some of you have paid from $8,500 to $10,000 for bungalows that are no better and in most cases not as good. We want YOU to be the judge. Our prices are $7,250 to $7,500. These are CALIFORNIA COLONIAL BUNGALOWS, something entirely different, thoroughly modern, hardwood floors, tile bath, beautiful electric fixtures, furnace heat, cast fronts, all improvements down and paid for. Make us a reasonable cash payment and the balance like rent. Will be completed by January 1st. By all means let us show you before you buy. P. B. Hopkins & Son, Builders of Bungalows, Palmer Bld. WAl. 4186.

DELIGHTFUL VIEWS at every turn—

Moreland, Jr., of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Moreland is a niece of Mrs. Grace Sanders Macy and a cousin of Mrs. W. Roy Roberts and John H. Macy, well-known Atlantans.

Mr. and Mrs. Moreland will spend the winter in Florida and will stop off in this city to visit their relatives.

The ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. Ernest M. Stires, bishop of Long Island, assisted by the rector, the Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, S. T. D.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a gown of white chiffon velvet embroidered in seed pearls and embellished with old point lace which had been worn at the marriage of her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Charles A. Gould, of Port Chester. Her voluminous veil of tulle was edged with narrow bands of satin and fastened to the coiffure with a bandeau of orange blossoms. The bride carried a sheaf of Easter lilies and an ivory-bound prayerbook.

The ceremony was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents.

University Women Organize Round Table Study Groups

The American Association of the University Women through its Atlanta branch is having an exceptionally busy year. In accordance with the national policy, a series of round table study groups has been organized.

The first is a study of international relations conducted by Miss Cleo Hearon, of Agnes Scott college. Miss Hearon was one of the 52 college professors who were guests of the Carnegie Foundation in Europe the past summer for an intensive study of international relations. At the December meeting Dr. Hearon told of her summer's experiences at the meeting of the world court at The Hague, and later of the conference of the League of Nations at which Germany was accepted.

The meetings of this study group are being held on the first Friday of each month at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Arthur Adams, 601 Clifton road. The topics for study during the rest of the year are: January, "The Fascisti Regime in Italy;" February, "Recent Developments in the British Empire;" March, "Franco-German Relations Today;" April, "International Tariff;" May, "Progress Toward Security and Disarmament."

A very interesting program in modern poetry is being conducted by Ernest Hartsock, of Georgia Tech, who is also vice president for the state of Georgia of the American poetry circle, and author of a volume of verse entitled "Romance and Star Dust." In his December lecture Mr. Hartsock gave a survey of poetry from the Victorian age to the present, stressing the influence of Walt Whitman. In his future discourses he will deal with such well-known poets as Robert Frost, Amy Lowell, Edgar Lee Masters, John Gould Fletcher, E. A. Robinson and others. One lecture will be devoted to the contemporary poets in England, while the final one of the series will be on the American poetry magazines with interesting exhibits. All meeting for this round table are being held at North Avenue Presbyterian school on the second Friday of each month at 3:30 o'clock. Other study groups are being conducted on the pre-school age, and a study of the juvenile court conditions.

The next regular meeting of the Atlanta branch will be held Wednesday, December 15, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. D. W. Copeland, 989 Rosedale road, N. E., and will take the form of a Christmas party.

Graduates of standard colleges and universities are eligible for membership in the American Association of University Women. Anyone interested in joining the Atlanta branch may communicate with the membership chairman, Miss Frances Hatcher, 140 Myrtle streeet, phone Ivy 2159, or with the president, Mrs. Roger T. Lively, 1177 Lucile avenue, S. W., phone West 1318-W.

Mrs. Norman Pool Will Honor Club 'As You Like It'

Mrs. Norman Pool will be hostess to the "As You Like It" club on Tuesday, December 14, at 10:30 o'clock. The annual Christmas party will be held at this meeting, also plans will be made for the usual Christmas charity of the club. A full attendance is urged.

The following ladies compose the membership of the club, Mrs. T. D. Body, Mrs. T. B. Branch, Mrs. A. E. Arnold, Mrs. J. H. Drewery, Mrs. W. F. Hadley, Mrs. J. M. Manry, Mrs. W. D. Marshall, Mrs. T. H. Pitts, Mrs. N. T. Pool, Mrs. Charles A. Forrest, Mrs. A. P. Stewart, Mrs. Fred Stewart, Mrs. J. H. Zachry and Mrs. J. S. Boardman.

O. E. S. Chapter Elects Officers.

Mrs. Picketts was elected to succeed Miss Frances Frye, who served as worthy matron last year. Mrs. Mary Gifford, worthy matron of Rose Croix, was present and helped in the work. Third Audience Rehearsal

: : THE CONDUCTOR AND HIS AUDIENCE : :

For Big Symphony Concerts

BY H. KNOX SPAIN.

Leide on the third concert of the 1926-27 series of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra presents the overture, "Fingal's Cave," Mendelssohn; Concerto in E Flat," for piano and orchestra, Liszt; "The New World Symphony," Dvorak; "Blue Danube," StraussSchulz-Evler, played by Rosita Renard, and "Marche Slave," Tschaikowsky.

Rosita Renard, the soloist, one of the most brilliant and promising of the young pianists now before the American public, has been hailed as the true successor of Teresa Carreno. Miss Renard was born in Santiago, Chile, and from earliest childhood her musical gifts were manifest. After a course of lessons at home the young girl was sent to a local conservatory, where she surpassed all the other pupils. Her progress was so remarkable that, upon entering her teens, her family consented to her training for a musical career. She was taken to Europe and for five years studied with Martin Krause in Berlin. Just when she was ready to make her debut the great world war began. Nevertheless, she gave three successful recitals in Berlin before returning to her home in Chile. After a triumphal tour of South America Miss Renard came to the United States in 1917 and rapidly won a high place in the esteem of American concert-goers. She has appeared as soloist with the New York Philharmonic, the Boston Symphony and the Chicago Symphony. This is her second appearance with the Atlanta Symphony.

Piano Featured.

The "rehearsal," today concerns the featured instrument—the piano or pianoforte. Diverging from the usual custom, we will not consider the polished and unpolished woods, steel, iron, ivory, wires, felts, screws, pegs, buckles and glue making the construction, but will take up some of the more obscure characteristics or possessions of the instrument.

When Miss Henard places her finger on one of the 88 keys, do you know there are under her touch some 52 parts—and in all 4,576, generally classed as 5,000 parts? In the key alone, that little piece of white or black on which the fingers play, there are 10 parts; the section from the key up to the hammer there are 30 parts—this is known as the support or wueppen; the hammer, that section that touches the strings, there are 12 parts. When the hammer touches or strikes the strings regulated vibrations occur producing tone or pitch. Just this year has the United States government declared a standard for pitch—which is placed at "A 4 divided by 40," meaning a regulated number of vibrations per second. This ambassador of lawful pitch is a two-foot turning fork and may be found in the government department of weights and measures.

There are 23 strings in a piano. To each of the 68 notes or keys in the treble there are three wires vibrating in unison; in the bass, 10 keys of two wires each and 10 keys of a single wire each. There are three pedals which possess more character and activity than the constant "soft and loud" in common use. In brief, for certain quality of effects, phrasing and interpretation, the feet on the pedals and fingers on the keyboard collaborate. The piano is one of the greatest engineering problems of all time. One entire "rehearsal" could well be used on this. For a little "home work" consider this fact—each string has an average pulling of 160 pounds, making something like 20 tons for the total power of the instrument. On this fact and not on the "off pitch" alone is the tuning considered.

The Program.

Taking up the text of the program we find, first, overture, "Fingal's Cave," Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (1809-1847) (pronounced Men-del-sohn, emphasis on the first syllable). This overture is called in Mendelssohn's letters, alternately, "The Hebrides" and "The Solitary Island" and the name "Fingal's Cave" is prefixed to the published score. The overture reflects the impressions made on Mendelssohn by a journey to the Western Highlands. Its sentiment is somber, even melancholy. This highly colored tone-picture opens with a theme depicting, with echo-effect throughout, each choir of the orchestra, the solitude of the cave and sea, followed by the vivid and poetical description of the cries of the sea-birds, the wails of the wind and the gradual lashing of the ocean into fury.

Second—Concerto in E-flat, for piano and orchestra. Franz Liszt (1811-1886), pronounced List. Four movements, allegro maestoso, maestoso, quasi, adagio, allegretto vivac and allegro marziale animato. The entire concerto is based on practically one theme of a chromatic nature. It is first presented by full orchestra and then incorporated in the piano cadenzas. The adagio is introduced by the cellos and basses alone and developed by the piano and full orchestra. The allegretto, in a mazurka tempo, gives the piano a string and woodwind background. The last movement is a development of the adagio in martial vein, the climax being the boisterous enlargement of the original presentation theme.

Third—The New World Symphony (fifth symphony), Antonin Dvorak (1841-1904), pronounced Dvor-shak, emphasis on the first syllable. Four movements, adagio — allegro — molto, largo, Scherzo, and allegro con fuoco. In this work, which he called "From the New World,' Dvorak used many musical idioms which had impressed him during his visit to America. The first movement is preceded by an introductory "Adagio" for strings and woodwinds. It is built on two negro spirituals, the leading one being "Swing Low Sweet Chariot." The second movement, in the song form, has a tone picture of the homesick immigrant, who has come to the "new world" in search of fortune. The theme is "sung" by the English horn, accompanied by the muted strings. The second theme is repeated. The principal melody is the familiar "Massa Dear." The third movement is the regulation scherzo after the Beethoven mode, the first part in minor and the second part in major. The fourth movement is a recapitulation of all the themes in the opus, including a brass chorale of the largo movement.

Fourth—Beautiful Blue Danube, Strauss-Schulz-Evler, played by Miss Renard. The Schulz-Evler Arabesque from Johann Strauss' "Beautiful Blue Danube" waltz is one of the most brilliant and popular pianoforte transcriptions, just as the waltz itself is beyond doubt the most beautiful that the "waltz king" ever composed. "There is no other word but "dazzling" for this coruscating virtuoso piece."

Fifth—Marche Slave, Peter Tschaikowsky (1840-1893) (pronounced Tchigh-koff-skee, with long "i" sound on first syllable and emphasis on second syllable). Tschaikowsky wrote the great "Marche Slave" the year of the war between Turkey and Servia, for the concert arranged by Nicholas Rubinstein for the benefit of the wounded soldiers. The composition opens with a dirge-like chant, given by the bassoons, to the accompaniment of the basses; there is a gay folk song played by the oboe, which is taken up by the woodwinds, until the full orchestra carries it to a resounding climax. In the trio of the Marche, the Russian national anthem is employed triumphantly sounded by the brasses in the coda ending.

Mayson Class Gives Blue-Bird Party In Church Hall

A pretty party of the past week was that given by the James L. Mayson class of the Grace Methodist church, in the recreation hall of the church on Ponce de Leon avenue. Group No. 3, with Miss Josephine King chairman, sponsored the evening's entertainment. This party was the culmination of the search for the "Blue Bird." About a month past each member of the class drew a slip bearing the name of another member of the class, who then became the "Blue-Bird" of the person drawing the name. The "Blue-Birds" were kept a secret until this party and during the interim, the member who drew the name, did something each week for his "Blue-Bird," such as sending a friendship card, box of candy, telegram, flowers, or whatever he chose to do.

The entertainment of the evening was in the nature of a "Big Street Fair" with sideshows and amusements galore, such as the "Chamber of Horrors," "Animal Show" and booths of various descriptions, winding up at the "Filling Station" where weiners, hot coffee, peanuts and pop corn were served by a bevy of pretty girls who assisted Miss King. Toy balloons and confetti served as favors for the guests.

An informal program in the various wings of the recreation hall included a reading by Miss Helen Lathem, a vocal solo by Miss Ruth Ramsey, piano numbers by Mrs. Ruth Q. Abernathy, vocal numbers by Master Jack Ezell and the reading of the morning newspaper by Milton Wilkes, which contained jokes on the different members of the class.

Miss King was assisted in entertaining by Miss Lula M. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Mayson, Mrs. Charles R. Perry, the president, and the members of group No. 3, including: Edward H. Anchors, Miss Grace Woolley, Miss Gladys Barton, W. G. Caldwell, Mrs. W. K. Boatenreiter, Mrs. J. K. Ezell, Mrs. S. J. Jordan, Miss Sarah Sanford, Miss Berta Sanford, Herbert Ayers, Robert L. Ayers, Jr., Mrs. Stuart Murray, Seals Aiken and Miss Josephine King.

Inconsistency of "Wets"

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

The wets have no intention of following the mandate of a referendum unless it is a wet referendum, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union finds.

Take Missouri, for instance. Senators Reed and Hawes, of Missouri inform the W. C. T. U., they will not recognize the record-breaking dry majority in their state as a dry mandate but will continue to vote wet.

The referendum which polled so great a dry vote in Missouri was staged by the efforts of the association against the prohibition amendment which extensively advertised the fact that the vote would reveal the will of the people, and the official figures on the referendum show a dry majority of 275,543, with the great brewery center of St. Louis, showing a big drop in wet votes and Kansas City, Senator Reed's home, the largest dry city in the world, showing a greater dry population than ever.

In New York and in Illinois where drys by the hundred thousand refused to vote, the wets carried their futile wet referenda, a signal for wet congressmen to issue statements declaring congress should abide by the mandates of the people and modify the Volstead act. Among them was Representative Fred Britten, of Chicago, from a beer garden district. Mr. Britten, in a statement to the Associated Press, said: "The republican party is now forced to recognize the people's sentiment on the failure of prohibition as now administered, or face probable defeat in the 1928 presidential contest."

Mr. Britten is a member of the association against the prohibition amendment, whose committee of 50 is pledged to supplant every dry with a wet. This puts Mr. Britten's loyalty to the republican party second to his allegiance to the A. A. P. A., which organization will work against all dry republican congressmen.

Four congressmen declared they would align themselves against the Volstead act because of the New York referendum, this quartet comprising Representative LaGuardia, a radical New York city wet. Representative McGee, a Syracuse wet, Representative McGregor from wet Buffalo and Representative Bacon, from Long Island. The last named was a dry, but he comes from a wet district in the home of the wet Roosevelts and of the State Senator Karle, one of the instigators of the New York referendum.

The first announcement that Senator Reed does not intend to follow the dry mandate came in answer to a letter from Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U. Mrs. Burger is well and most favorably known in Georgia, by the way.

"As long as I am in the United States senate," wrote Senator Reed, "I intend to follow the light of my own reason and conscience in every vote I cast. I would not vote for a law which I believed vicious and indefensible in all the people in the world wanted such a law upon the statute books. I say this with every possible respect for the opinion of my fellow citizens, to which I always give profound weight and construction."

The second pronouncement from a senatorial wet comes from Harry B. Hawes, senator-elect from Missouri, who utterly ignores the dry majority stating that he intends to remain where he has always stood, on the wet side. Mr. Haws declares:

"I shall in the future, as I have in the past, exercise my individual judgment on this matter refusing to be dictated to by either the extreme wets or the extreme drys, using my own judgment in voting what I shall deem the best for the benefit of the people of Missouri."

Mr. Hawes was an attorney for the brewers in St. Louis.

This whole passage-at-arms indicates that the wets have no interior of following the mandate of a referendum unless it is a wet referendum.

W. C. T. U. CONFERENCE IN WASHINGTON.

The national W. C. T. U., will hold a conference in the Mayflower hotel, Washington, D. C., January 25, 26 nad 27, which will be a great inspirational gathering.

It will not be a delegated body, but any and all members of the W. C. T. U. who desire may attend. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and Mrs. Marvin Williams, the state president, will attend. Those who wish to travel with them should communicate with one of them.

A fine program has been prepared for the mornings and evenings.

The last evening will be a banquet at which many members of congress, with theiexr wives, will be guests. The first afternoon there will be a trip to Arlington where a wreath will be placed on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and those desiring to do so can go to Mount Vernon. The second afternoon a service will be held in Statuary hall, at the statue of Miss Willard. It is hoped that a reception at the white house on Wednesday or Thursday afternoon may be arranged.

As congress will be in session, it will be an opportunity to visit congress and see the national legislators at work.

All the national W. C. T. U. officer will be present, and many other leaders.

The Mayflower hotel has set aside a number of rooms at a special rate for the dates of the conference available for those who apply immediately for reservations. Send applications to Assistant Manager, Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C.

Reduced rates on the railroads of a fare and a half have been secured on the certificate plan. Full fare is to be paid going to Washington and a convention certificate secured from the agent. When the certificate has been properly signed by the chairman of the transportation committee and validated by the agent at Washington, it will entitle the holder to half fare on the return trip. The same railroad line must be used both ways. Tickets will be on sale January 21-26, with final return limit January 31.

It is hoped by the state officers that many will go from this state.

CITIZENSHIP.

"Pay your poll tax now". After December 19, you will be required to pay more than $1 or else lose your franchise," this is the advice of Mrs. W. G. Cotton, of Columbus, the state director of the citizenship department, and the state president, Mrs. Williams.

OFFICERS AT AUGUSTA AND LAGRANGE.

The new officers of the Augusta, Woodlawn W. C. T. U., are: President, Mrs. Y. T. Bishop, 1008 Baker avenue; secretary, Mrs. O. H. Blassingame, 155 Walton Way; treasurer, Mrs. J. T. Powell, 1532 Gwinnette street.

The LaGrange officers are: President, Mrs. George E. Billinghurst; secretary, Mrs. Howard Park; treasurer, Mrs. H. C. Butler.

Mrs. Mary Harris Amor, is in Tate with her son and daughter, Rev. and Mrs. Alton Lee Hale.

Morning Recital Given at Seminary.

The first number on the program of the morning recital which was given in the school auditorium last Thursday, brought forth hearty applauses. A tiny harp was played by a little girl just turned six, who played the accompaniment to "Holy Night," which was sung by the children in the first three grades. The vocal numbers were sung by Eleanor Memminger, Dorothy Franklin and Rosalind Stovall.

The piano numbers were played by Anne Gray, Laura Maddox, Eleanor Memminger, Sarah Turner, Frances Maiden, Suzanne Memminger, Mary Wyatt Scott, Helen Cornwall, Elizabeth Clarke, Elizabeth Jones, Sybil Speer, Elizabeth Everett, Emily Mathews, Virginia Cleveland and Mary Joe Evans.

Friday at noon, the pupils in the seventh grade planted a pink dog-wood on the lawn.

Those reading appropriate selections for Arbor day were Sarah Traynham, Dorothy Winings, Sarah Turner, Catherine Murray, Suzanne Knox, Louisa Robert and Marion Smith.

While there was no general observance of "Uncle Remus'" birthday, there were readings from many of his works during the day in different classes. Passing back and forth these days through the school grounds one sees little brown bears, brilliant red and blue birds, tall ghostly figures and many Indians.

If these effective costumes are an earnest of what the audience will enjoy on Thursday evening, when the student body will present Paul Bliss' "The Feast of the Red Corn," may feel assured of at least a feast for the eyes. Three pupils of Mrs. Hutchison read most pleasing in Mrs. Davis' room on Friday morning. They were Elkin Goddard, Anne Gray and Sarah Hopkins.

Jewish Women Join Hadassah Membership Drive

Jewish women of Atlanta are recognizing and indorsing the work of Hadassah by joining the local chapter in the present membership drive. According to indications, the chapter will at least double its membership.

The membership committee, headed by Mrs. L. J. Levitas, will carry out a person-to-person canvass and a number of social events in the interest of the drive. The local chapter is anxious to be one of the three winners of prizes for obtaining the proportionately largest increase in membership.

"I think we will be very near the top of the list," said Mrs. S. E. Levy in a statement last night. "We will work along on 'every member get a member' plan, so that our enrollment will be at least doubled, and most likely, more than that. We find that women who have been only slightly acquainted with the work of Hadassah are eager to know more and to be active in its accomplishment. The work of healing the sick and of making conditions fit for the most healthful rearing of children appeals to every woman and it is to such work in Palestine, a land just beginning to be revitalized, that Hadassah is dedicated. Hadassah maintains a system of medical social service that is enlarging in scope every year."

The committee on membership, headed by Mrs. L. J. Levitas, is composed of the following women: Mrs. Harry Diamond, Mrs. I. M. Weinstein, Mrs. H. Taylor, Mrs. Sam Goldberg, Mrs. Joseph Cohen, Mrs. Joseph Smolensky, Mrs. M. B. Copeloff, Mrs. N. O. Newman, Mrs. A. Cohen, Mrs. M. R. Russ, Mrs. S. E. Levy, Mrs. Sam Rosenberg, Mrs. P. Koplin, Mrs. B. S. Cohen, Mrs. Sam Sugarman, Mrs. Joseph Weiss, Mrs. Charles Buchwald, Mrs. Dave Effron, Mrs. H. D. Geigerman, Mrs. Harry Constangy, and Mrs. N. Sinkee.

At the next meeting of the Atlanta chapter the new members will be introduced at a membership tea.

Club Program To Commemorate 78th Birthday of Uncle Remus

At the regular meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club Monday afternoon, December 13, at 3 o'clock, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, the president will present a program, which was planned in commemoration of the birthday of Joel Chandler Harris, American author, journalist, and beloved citizen of Atlanta.

A fitting tribute will be paid to the memory of this renowned southern author, whose Afro-American folklore studies have brought him world-wide fame and popularity. All citizens of Atlanta love and honor the memory of the writer, who so admirably pictured the humorous and imaginative side of negro life, and dialect which was an integral part of the life of the old south. He knew it intimately and accurately, having made a study of the negro. His true portrayal of the negro, his ways, and characteristics have resulted in his studies becoming classic.

He was honored in 1905 by being elected a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters. His fourteen Uncle Remus studies were written between 1881 and 1908. Among his works of a more serious vein are "Henry W. Grady," "Stories of Georgia," and other books. For twenty-five years he was one of the editors of The Atlanta Constitution. He was born in Eatonton, Ga., December 9, 1848, and died July 3, 1908.

Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president of the Uncle Remus Memorial association, and Mrs. E. L. Connally, vice president, will be in charge of the meeting. Mrs. Robert W. Blackburn, author of "Folklore From Mammy Days," and an eminent interpreter of southern negro dialect will read the "Story of the Little Rabbit," and the "Nursery Song" from "Uncle Remus, His Songs and Sayings." Mrs. Blackburn is an impersonator of plantation characters and sings negro lullabys, using the original tunes of "Uncle Remus," which she has carefully collected and preserved. She studied interpretive lectures under Janet Taltot, lecturer of the Woman's club, of Cleveland, Ohio, and an exponent of the Curry Emmerson method of expression.

Dr. Louis Conde, Jacksonville, Fla., teacher of mental science, will make a ten minutes talk on "Psychology for the Child and Mother."

Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, chairman of music, will present Ed. A. Kane, president of the Emory Glee club, and George Baker, past president, who will sing a program of songs selected appropriately for the theme of the meting. Mr. Baker and Mr. Kane have appeared before many organizations at home and abroad, and their part of the program will be most enjoyable.

The president, Mrs. Smith extends an invitation to the family and friends of Joel Chandler Harris and the members of the Uncle Remus Memorial association to attend the meeting on Monday afternoon.

At the close of the program tea will be served by the members of the press and publicity committee which includes Mrs. B. H. Hill, Mrs. J. T. Floyd, Mrs. Carpenter Jones, Mrs. Flora McD. Pitts and Miss Dorothy Banks.

North Ave. School News of Interest.

The finals for the class basketball championship was played off Wednesday afternoon. It was a hard fought battle between sophomores and juniors, the sophomores winning 18 to 17. There is an especial glory for the sophomores in that this is the first time a class below the junior has won the championship shield. Playing for the sophomores were: Edith Harrison, Annette Barry, Mary Dell Carson, Marion Porter, Catherine Tanner, Charlotte Teasley, Alice Baxter; for the juniors: Penelope Brown, Alice Gray Harrison, Margaret Vardaman, Betty Cole, Adolyn McClatchey, Emily Jane Randall.

Between halves an interesting contest for cheer leaders resulted in a choice by judges of Margaret Fuller, Lynda Bryan, Constance Dinkler.

The sophomores were again in evidence Friday afternoon and evening in their pirate party given in the gym, under the leadership of their president, Sara Croft Smith.

Plans for Christmas are well under way. Friday the classes will carry Christmas baskets to needy families and will have a Christmas tree for 12 invited guests, "shut-ins." The happiest feature of the season is the Christmas service Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the North Avenue church. This service is full of traditions and is dear to every North Avenue girl. In the soft glow of the candles the whole school gathers in the church and in holy hymn, in Christmas carol, in scripture story tells each to the other the beautiful message of Christmas—"O Holy Night—O Night, O Night Divine."

Holiday Program Will Be Given By Home Group

A special holiday program will be given by the American home department of the Atlanta Woman's club, at the clubhouse Wednesday, December 15, at 3 o'clock, in celebration of the proximity of the Christmas season. Invitation cards are being mailed to members by Mrs. Murray Howard, secretary.

Believing that Christmas and the home is the finest combination possible for the promotion of loving family life, the department's program will consist this month of numerous delightful ways of enjoying this holiday season. Miss Clara Lee Cone, chairman of the division of home-making, will present a reader and a program of Christmas music. Miss Cone will also sponsor a "discovery contest," in which members will share with each other their ideas of the best and happiest way of celebrating the holiday season within the family circle. For the best suggestion on "The Best Way to Spend a Home Christmas" a prize of artistic value will be given, the gift of the Binder Picture Frame company. Mrs. R. I. Reed, divisional chairman of the Smith Hughes classes, will exhibit some of the art work.

Mrs. E. M. Helbig, chairman of home finance for the department, will add some practical ideas on the subject of "Christmas Planning and Spending." As an object lesson she will describe "bargains" she has seen in Atlanta.

Following the success last month of the prize contest on the Thanksgiving menu, which, printed in Atlanta papers, helped many a housewife, Mrs. Charles Harding, chairman of the department's Atlanta Woman's Club Cookbook, announces another contest at this meeting on the best menu for a "Sunday night supper" for a family of four and two guests, the menus to be economical, yet interesting, and taken from the club cookbook, with page given, and if possible the prices. The name of the contestant should be written on the back of the paper and the menu should be written in ink or typewritten. A delicious cake will be offered as a prize for this.

After the program Wednesday punch will be served to members and guests by Mrs. Newton C. Wing, department chairman, assisted by Mrs. Fort Land, chairman of hospitality.

Education Group Urges Live Trees.

Mrs. Tom Brooke, chairman of the applied education department of the Atlanta Woman's club, announces that there will be no meeting of this department for the month of December on account of the Christmas holidays.

As the Christmas season approaches people are making their plans for getting a tree, either through their florists or by having one cut from the woods, which means every year thousands of trees are cut down all over the country. An appeal was made at the convention of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, which was held at Atlantic City this fall, for clubwomen to advocate the use of live Christmas trees, replanting the trees after the holiday season and in that way aiding in the preservation of forests. On account of the mild climate in the south this can be easily done and a request is being made by the various clubs that the public assist in this movement. The benefit derived is twofold, the grounds around the house are beautified by the additional tree and deforestation is avoided.

Service Star Legion Meets Next Tuesday.

The December meeting of Service Star Legion wil be held Tuesday afternoon, December 14, at 3 o'clock in Edison hall, corner of Peachtree and Harris streets.

The chairmen and committees to serve in 1927 will be announced. Also a nominating committee for election of officers at the January meeting. A number of matters of vital interest to Service Star Legion will be acted upon. It is important to have a full attendance.

Charles T. Smith Addresses Garden Group at Meeting

Charles T. Smith, of Concord, was the lecturer at the meting of the garden committee of the Atlanta Woman's club Thursday, December 9. Mr. Smith is owner of the Concord Nurseries, which have been successfully established in that city for many years. He is a large dealer in fruit trees and gave the club a most instructive talk on the use of fruit trees in landscape work. While the garden committee emphasizes the growing of flowers, they know that the real garden must have trees and shrubs also, and the year's program always includes informative talks on these subjects. "It is often just as desirable to plant a fruit, nut, or flowering tree as it is a shade tree, and more profitable," Mr. Smith said.

Members of the garden committee went to Marietta arbor day to attend the exercises incident to the planting of the first trees on the highway between Marietta and Atlanta. A number of trees have been and more will be given in honor of prominent Georgians. Mrs. Joel Hunter, chairman of the garden committee, gave a tree from the garden committee in honor of John T. Boifeuillet, a well-known writer of Georgia history.

The garden committee meets the second and fourth Thursdays in the month through the year. There will be no meeting the fourth Thursday in December, however, as that is just two days before Christmas. Nonmembers of the garden committee are welcome to attend any lecture in which they are interested upon the payment of 25 cents.

Art Division Is Given Treat.

A rare treat was provided for members of the art division of the Atlanta Woman's club at their meeting Tuesday by their chairman, Mrs. Gaertner, who has arranged a splendid program for this year's work.

At the meeting Tuesday morning Mrs. Gaertner showed colored prints of some of the works of three of America's leading artists, namely: Bellows, Henri and Perrine, discussing the influence of their lives and personalities on their work.

Mrs. E. W. More, one of Atlanta's most enthusiastic art leaders, was asked to tell of her personal acquaintance with these artists, responding with an interesting talk.

The next meeting of the art department will be held the first Tuesday in January. Anyone interested in art is cordially invited to attend these meetings.

Americanization Chairman Sends Out Communication

The message from the state chairman of the Americanization committee, Mrs. John W. Daniel, of Savannah, is commended to the careful consideration of every chapter in the state, as this work is one of the most important in D. A. R. activities.

The development of the society's activities in this field of endeavor in recent years has been remarkable, and it is the hope of all D. A. R. to further perfect the notable achievements of the pioneers in Americanization work, which will require constant and painstaking effort on the part of our national, state and chapter committees.

About 85 per cent of our foreign-born residents are natives of European countries, so that the Americanization problem is essentially one of aiding various European peoples who have cast their lot among us to become adjusted to American life and to appreciate the true spirit and meaning of American institutions.

It is suggested that the presentation of flags to members of citizenship classes and newly naturalized men and women, with appropriate ceremonies, be continued and extended, and where needed, the public library should be induced to serve the foreign-born, and the foreign-born made acquainted with the library. There are many other ways in which the Americanization purposes of our society can be furthered, which can be worked out in the individual localities, and surely there is no organization which has a better right to assume leadership in this work than the descendants of revolutionary fathers. Mrs Daniel's letter follows:

My Dear Madam Regent and Chapter Chairman: As we resume the activities of the D. A. R. temporarily laid aside during the summer months, let us realize the necessity for constructive action in this, our Americanization work. It is more important than ever before.

As state chairman I am anxious that each chapter take up the work that will accomplish the best results in its particular community. Let the chapter appoint a committee that is interested to do this work. I would suggest prizes be offered to foreign-born children for the best essays on subjects vital to them. Also prizes offered for essays on "What Good Citizenship Means." Have your committee cooperate with the public schools in teaching the children of foreigners and arrange, if possible, for classes for the mothers.

What kind of citizens may we expect of children if the parents cannot speak our language and do not understand what our country stands for?

Please read carefully the enclosed bulletin of our national chairman on "Americanization" and report the work of your chapter to your state chairman.

Very truly,
(Mrs. John W.) KATHERINE DANIEL.

Message From State Regent

The state regent sends the following:

For home and county:

Addressing meeting of past presidents American Legion auxilary, Mrs. J. Willis Martin, of the women's committee of the sesqui-centennial, said:

"There is no one more interested in peace than you, but you and I know that the only way to attain it is through preparedness. Won't you, as women, do all you can in putting down the great wave of pacifism?

"We are not as safe as we think we are. We are in more danger than ever before. This is not a note of pessimism, but I plead with you in the name of the women who are trying to bring back the traditions of 150 years to take an interest in what is going on. The people of this country do not understand. We are today the richest and greatest country in the world, but we will not be for long if we ourselves cannot understand our own country.

"Help us to perpetuate these traditions—help us to stand for what they mean."

Behind the Veil.
(From Better American Federation Letters.)

Neither Time, Effort, nor Expense should be spared to maintain the traditions of America through the educated judgment of our citizenship.

The American people have never failed to render patriotic response to any crucial call for action. It is, however, natural for them to wait until the "zero hour" has arrived which makes defense compulsory. For a long time most of us have discounted as pessimistic foreboding predictions that the red menace is a real source of danger. We cavalierly refer to the situation as an ebullition stirred up by a handful of agitators, but when seriously confronted by what we realize requires action, 95 per cent of us are instantly ready to go to any limit to uphold our government.

During the past 25 years subtle plans have been developing for the gradual weakening leading to the ultimate abandonment of the constitution of the United States. Plans have been made to gradually create a spirit of dissatisfaction with our constitution, to make it a chronic subject of dispute, criticism, agitation and by degrees amend it as frequently as possible, and thus weaken its integrity, and ultimately undermine it.

Revolutionists against all constituted authorities of government have carefully seen to it that as many of us as possible shall be lulled into a false sense of security. They count on our doing nothing towards effectively interfering with them until they are ready to fire the bomb which will find us unprepared, indifferent, non-active. Pacifism is a deadly menace.

The remedy is first in the concentration of public sentiment to end this drifting away from constitutional safeguards, and getting back to the firm and safe foundations which the constitution established. A primal need is for officials who will regard their oath to support, maintain and defend the constitution as obligatory in letter and spirit.

Second, to require in all of our schools and colleges the teaching of American principles and ideals, so that patriotism shall be fostered toward creating the true spirit of America in the upbuilding of American citizenship. Third, the strict enforcement of every law against sedition, the holding to legal accountability every individual who incites an organization whose propaganda is hostile to the measures and principles of this government.

Fourth, a nation-wide campaign of education to revive and stimulate confidence in our government as the best and safest ever known.

Fifth, to oppose bolshevism and all its affiliations, with a deepened loyalty to the constitution and the flag as representing the truest principles and ideals of national strength and prosperity.

Chapter Reports

Armistice day was appropriately observed by the Major General Samuel Elbert chapter, D. A. R., of Tennille, the exercises taking place under the auspices of this chapter at the high school during assembly.

Rev. E. G. Orahood, chaplain of the chapter, made a most stirring address, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience. Professor J. E. Jones, superintendent of the schools, told an interesting story of his varied experiences while with the army in France during the world war.

The program concluded with the singing of a patriotic song.

Year Book Received.

A most interesting year book which is added to the number received by the editor, is that of the Nathaniel Macon chapter, of Macon. Subject for study during the year is, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," each program having some noted American or American institution as the special feature. This includes American art, music, fiction and architecture, also American woman, and a sketch of Paul Hamilton Haynes, poet.

Mrs. Julian B. McCurry Honored

MRS. JULIAN B. M'CURRY.

Mrs. Alfred J. Bresseau, president general, national society, Daughters of the American Revolution, has appointed Mrs. Julian B. McCurry, of Hartwell, a member of the national committee on better moving picture films, which is in recognition of her splendid ability in all lines of D. A. R. work, over a period of several years.

Mrs. McCurry is prominent in club work and during the state regency of Mrs. Julius Talmadge, was D. A. R. state corresponding secretary, occupying this office with brilliant success. She was organizing regent of the John Benson chapter, D. A. R., of Hartwell, and a former regent of Elijah Clarke chapter, of Athens. Mrs. McCurry is also a Colonial Dame and a prominent member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. She is a lineal descendent of Captain Samuel Reid, of Eatonton, and Captain Henry Walton, of Madison, for whom the chapters in these cities are named.

All Georgia daughters will unite in congratulating this loveable and brilliant woman on her appointment to this important national committee.

Years of Personal Reminiscenses In the National Society D. A. R.

The third installment of the address by Mrs. John Laidlaw Buel, honorary state regent, of Connecticut, delivered before her home chapter recently, which is a resume of the National Society, D. A. R., is presented today:

Question of Dues.

Reduction of dues always received the same treatment as reduction of representation. Once I remember little Mrs. Lockwood appearing on the stage followed by clerks with great piles of books, the Lineage books, the handsomely bound volumes of application papers, the bound volumes of the magazine, the printed matter of the society of every kind. One after another she held them up before us and set them down on Mrs. Fairbanks' table until that lady was completely hidden from view. Then she shook her finger at us and said: "That's what becomes of your dollar. And that's not to mention clerk hire, office rent, rent of opera house and so on," she added.

The house roared with laughter and there was no more talk of reducing the amount of dues sent to Washington.

At this congress announcement was made that the site of Continental hall had been exempted from taxation by special act of the United States congress. Cheers rent the air and in the midst of them a loving cup was presented to Mrs. Fairbanks. Instantly as she took it and thanked the donors, she turned to the house and holding out both hands said, "I am in a receptive mood. Come on." And they came, bringing contributions for the hall throughout that entire day.

Three sets of plans for the building by three winning architects were submitted to congress that year, 1903, and thrown on a screen. These three architects were accepted as those who were to engage in the final competition for the winning plans, and thus Continental hall got really under way, to be ready for occupancy by the congress two years later, as stated above.

It was high time. In 1904 there were 1,037 accredited voters, and delegates began to overflow into the galleries of the opera house, much to Connecticut's disgust, who overflowed with them. There were no seats for alternates—poor alternates, whose wrongs and troubles have dated back thus far.

The opera house could seat only 763 persons all told. It was lucky the 1,037 were not all there. Continental hall, with its dream of 1,676 seats, was a spacious vision of delight. It was also a $400,000 proposition, but we started building with $93,000 in the building fund. Who says we did not build on faith?

It was left for Mrs. Donald McLean, Mrs. Fairbanks' successor, to finish the construction work. She induced the congress of 1907 to bond the society for $200,000, the amount needed then to complete it. We all thought we were going to perdition; we were not then accustomed to big loans. But the event has vindicated her wisdom and her sound business common sense. The half-finished structure, without permanent roof, etc., was deteriorating thus exposed to the weather in this piece-meal method of construction. Mrs. McLean dedicated the completed hall before she went out of office, and handed it down to her successor, Mrs. Scott, to finish and furnish. Thereafter, we worked to pay off the bonded debt, a good apprenticeship for what lies before us today. Thus Mrs. McLean with her bond issue advanced the cause of Continental hall to which she was ardently devoted. We owe its completion, I may say, its salvation, to her sensible grappling with "high finance" and its successful outcome.

Affairs In 1909.

Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, seventh president general, and Mrs. Buel, fourth state regent of Connecticut, entered office together in 1909. This was the beginning of my 16 consecutive years of service on the national board. 13 as state regent and three as vice president general. The same year, 1909, gave to Lucretia Shaw chapter of New London a new regent, Mrs. George Maynard Minor, who then began her upward way through state vice regent and vice president general to the presidency.

Mrs. Scott had a fund of energy most remarkable for one of her years, all of which she gave to our society with tireless devotion. Immediately after her election she set about finishing and furnishing the hall. This was accomplished in February, 1910, and in March the society's offices were moved in from F street. Therefore when I entered my first congress as state regent in 1910, I entered a fully occupied hall with our clerical staff there in full swing.

In Mrs. Scott's administration we began our important work for the southern mountaineers, congress by vote endorsing the plan to give scholarships for them in the southern schools and colleges.

Long before this, we had started on the education of the foreigner in American ideals of life and citizenship as a branch of our patriotic education work. We called it patriotic education and were pioneers in it long before others realized its importance. Later, the wave of "Americanization work" spread over the country as the latest thing in education. It was no new thing to us.

Mrs. Scott was lovable and hot-tempered all in the same minute. She scolded us like children sometimes on the board, but we loved her just the same. She and I were always good friends and she stood by me in many a troubled hour during my first year or two as state regent. Mrs. John T. Sterling—may her memory never fade from amongst us—was our vice president as well as our vice president general then, and together we had many a pleasant, as well as strenuous hour on Mrs. Scott's board.

Mrs. Scott served our society with distinction in many capacities, but in none more so than as president general.

We began buying land under Mrs. William Cumming Story elected in 1913 as eighth president general. It was necessary for our own protection to secure the remainder of the city square on which Continental hall stands, all the land, that is, extending back of us to Eighteenth street. Mrs. Story began the campaign of purchase by chapters at $1.25 a square foot, by securing an option on part of it. Outstanding in my memory is the friendly contest between the state regents of Connecticut and the District of Columbia outbidding one another across the auditorium for land. Our seats were on opposite sides of the house, the raised seats at right angles to those on the floor. She and I were soon the only ones pledging purchases of land, the entire house having stopped to watch us as each matched the other with the pledges that rained in upon us from our respective chapters. Connecticut won.

Outbreak of War.

On the outbreak of the world war Mrs. Story enlisted the society in war relief work for Europe through the Red Cross.

At her final congress in 1917 the last payment was made on the bonded debt on Continental hall. Mrs. Ellen Washington Bellamy, of Georgia, donating the last $1,000. The canceled notes were presented to the congress and destroyed in triumph before our eyes by the treasurer general one whole year before they were due.

This was a hectic congress. It was seething with the fervent patriotism of a people just plunged into a mighty war for the high ideals of liberty for which we stood. Besides this, it had a presidential election on its hands and a free-for-all magazine staggering under an $80,000 debt.

In 1914 and 1916 the congress had elected Mrs. Minor vice president general, from Connecticut, both times at the head of the list of 10 to be elected. Her motion to put the magazine back on a subscription basis and the debate that followed over a substitute motion that threw the house into a parliamentary tangle were memorable incidents. Few that heard it will forget this speech of Mrs. Minor's, when she stepped forward on the platform in an attempt to untangle the snarl and relieve a tense situation: "Perhaps I can make you understand," said she, and the house melted into laughter. "As I understand it (and the parliamentarian will tell me if I am wrong), this substitute motion is the exact opposite to mine. If you do not want it vote it down. Then you have mine before you. If you want mine, vote for it; if you do not, vote it down." Deafening applause greeted her explanation and the air was cleared. They had wanted hers all along but did not know how to get it. They promptly passed it and her words became a proverb which rang through the congress that week: "If you want it vote for it; if you don't want it, vote it down." From that hour the mark of the presidency was upon her.

National defense and a sane preparedness were the keynotes of Mrs. Story's congresses from the time the great war broke out. There was no mistaking where the national society, Daughters of the American Revolution, stood on military preparedness against war, then or ever afterwards. Hence our society was more than ready to place itself and its resources at the service of the government when our country finally plunged into the war on the side of the allies and human freedom. Elected almost at the same moment, Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey became our war president general throughout the rest of that stupendous conflict.

It would be quite impossible even to outline the war activities of our society under the leadership of Mrs. Guernsey. Among them were the raising of the $100,000 Liberty loan fund and the $50,000 fund for the water works given by the society to the devastated villages of Tilloloy in France; the adoption of over 4,000 French orphans at a cost of nearly $138,000; and the loan of our land back of the hall to the government for the use of the Council of National Defense, which built thereon its temporary office building. Mrs. Scott, honorary president general, was made chairman of the society's war relief service committee, which organized a remarkable volume of work throughout the country through its publicity director, the late Mrs. William Henry Wait, resulting in a total outlay of $40,863,118.43 in gifts for relief work and in subscriptions to Liberty bonds, by members and chapters. There was no sympathy with pacifism throughout the length and breadth of the society or in its congresses.

Atlanta Chapter D. A. R. Will Hold Christmas Meeting

Members of the Atlanta chapter D. A. R. and visiting D. A. R. are invited to attend the Christmas meeting of the Atlanta chapter Wednesday, December 15, at 3 o'clock at Craigie house. Mrs. Lucius McConnell, regent, will preside.

Mrs. Mabelle Shropshire Wall, one of the foremost musicians and teachers of the south, who will be in charge of the music for the afternoon, has arranged a program of selected songs and piano numbers, a vocal duet by Misses Doris and Ruth O'Steen, and a soprano solo by Miss Minna Hecker, accompanied by Miss Ardis Colby.

Colone. John T. Boifeuillet, a distinguished Georgian, whose reputation as an orator and writer is known nationally, will address the chapter on incidents in connection with colonial governors of Georgia. As Woodrow Wilson's birthday comes this month, Colonel Boifeuillet will pay a short tribute to him.

All members of the Atlanta chapter who have not paid dues for 1927 are requested to see the treasurer at this meeting, as for every 100 paid-up members by January 1, 1927, the chapter is allowed one representative in Washington.

As this is the last meeting for 1926 it is hoped all members will be present.

Robert E. Lee U. D. C. Holds Meeting.

The Robert E. Lee chapter, U. D. C., of College Park, held a meeting Tuesday in the home of Mrs. V. C. Mason, on Virginia avenue. By request of the president, Mrs. R. L. Proctor, Mrs. Heard reread her report of the Statesboro convention. Mrs. Clyde Fleming was chairman of the program. The local W. C. T. U. organization of College Park were honor guests of the chapter and took part in the memorial to Mrs. P. G. Rauschenberg, late historian of the chapter.

Mrs. E. G. Harris and Mrs. B. P. Gray presented the Confederate flag to the chapter that is a gift provided by Mrs. Rauschenberg just prior of her death.

A committee, consisting of Mrs. T. V. McCain, Mrs. R. S. Rosser and Mrs. B. D. Gray, presented the memorial sketch and resolutions relative to the death of Mrs. Rauschenberg.

Miss Manora Conley sang an appropriate selection, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. J. D. Conley.

Chaliapin Will Sing In Comic Opera

Feodor Chaliapin, the great Russian basso, and his party of operatic stars will present "The Barber of Seville" at the auditorium Tuesday evening. It is a comic opera with a happy ending. The entrancingly beautiful music presents unusual opportunity for a display of vocal powers, and Chaliapin, in arranging his production, has added bits of conversation.

An important feminine member of the cast is Elvira de Hidalgo, noted Spanish coloratura soprano, who will be heard in the renowned role of "Rosina."

The orchestra under the direction of Eugene Plotnikoff will be a most pleasing feature of "The Barber of Seville," with twenty or more finished musicians composing this organization. Rossini's composition is exquisite and Chaliapin is one of the favorite operatic stars.

Miss Mary Brown Spalding Will Wed Croom Partridge

Cordial interest centers in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Brown Spalding, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schaffner Spalding, to Thomas Croom Partridge, as they are among the most prominent and distinguished families in the south.

The lovely bride-elect is a graduate of Girls' High school, and later took her A. B. degree at Randolph-Macon college at Lynchburg, Va., where she was a member of the Kappa Delta sorority. She was a member of the 1924-25 Debutante club, and is a member of the Cotillion club and the Junior league and for the past year has been connected with the department of psychology of the Atlanta public schools. Miss Spalding has lived in Atlanta all of her life, and through her parents, grandparents and great-grandparents on both sides of her family has inherited the traditions of the pioneer days of the city and the state.

Bride-Elect's Relatives.

Her maternal grandparents are Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally and the late Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Spalding were her paternal grandparents. Misses Constance, Frances, Sally and Elizabeth Spalding are her sisters. The bride-elect's father, John S. Spalding, president of the Spalding Foundry company, is descended from a line of ministers and educators. Her grandfather, the late Dr. Albert Theodore Spalding, was an active Baptist minister for 66 years, having been for ten years pastor of the Second Baptist church of this city. Her great-grandfather, Dr. Albert N. Spalding, was a Baptist minister and college professor of Greenville, S. C., and at one time served as pastor of the First Baptist church of Atlanta. Her grandmother, Mrs. Spalding, was before her marriage Miss Constantia Schaffner, of Charleston and Aiken, S. C. Other members of her father's family were associated with the founding of both Bessie Tift and Brenau colleges for young women.

Miss Spalding's mother was before her marriage Miss Mary Connally, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally. Dr. Connally, the bride's grandfather, is the oldest resident of Atlanta, being now in his 90th year and having lived here nearly 83 years. He is the oldest son of Thomas W. Connally and grandson of David Connally, pioneers of Fulton county, who lived on the family plantation near East Point, before Atlanta was built.

Mrs. Connally, the bride-elect's grandmother, was, before her marriage, Miss Mary Virginia Brown, daughter of the late Joseph Emerson Brown, the war governor of Georgia, who was also justice of the supreme court of Georgia and United States senator. He served his state over 40 years through the critical periods of war and reconstruction. He was also president of the Western and Atlantic railroad and first president of the Atlanta board of education.

Mr. Partridge is a resident of Atlanta and is associated with Alex C. King, Jr., and Harmon W. Caldwell in the law firm of King, Caldwell and Partridge. He is a former resident of Charleston, S. C., and Moticello, Fla., and is a graduate of Emory university and was admitted to the practice of law in Atlanta. In college he was active in literary work, having at one time been editor-in-chief of the Emory Campus, and is a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and the Sigma Upsilon honor society.

Mr. Partridge is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John Andrew Partridge. His father has been for a number of years a member of the North Georgia conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and is now serving in Atlanta. His paternal grandparents, the late General Benjamin Waring and Mary Denham Partridge were prominent residents of Monticello, Fla., and through them he is descended from some of the early settlers of the south. Captain Nathaniel Partridge, of the British army, was the founder of the family in America, having landed in Charleston, S. C., before 1690. On his paternal side he is also descended from the Waring family of South Carolina and the Taylors of Virginia, in whose family records are found the names of Presidents James Madison and Zachary Taylor.

His mother was, before her marriage, Miss Catherine Moore, of Monticello, Fla. Her parents were the late Thomas J. and Mary Younge Simmons Moore. Mr. Partridge's maternal great-grandparents, Thomas and Adeline Weaver Simmons and Kidder Meade and Caroline Croom Moore, all settled in Jefferson county, Florida, in the pioneer days, emigrating there from the Carolinas and Virginia. Adeline Weaver Simmons was a member of the Weaver family of Georgetown, D. C., who were residents there for several generations, and prominent in naval and diplomatic circles.

New Y. W. C. A. Headquarters Will Be Officially Opened With Splendid Program Friday, December 17

The opening of the new Young Woman's Christian Association headquarters on Auburn avenue takes place Friday, December 17, in the building which once housed the Atlanta Athletic club. This organization will be in position for the first time in its history to go ahead with a program of work that is worthy of Atlanta. It will face a future that is bright with promise, not only because of the physical improvements made possible by the new headquarters, but by the increased enthusiasm and the spirit which has made the building and the improvements possible.

A program with a firm foundation laid for it by sincere and earnest workers in the past is now ready to be fulfilled by the new secretaries of the Y. W. C. A.

General Secretary.

Heading this group of new officials is Miss Julia Ewing White, the general secretary, who came to Atlanta from Chattanooga in September, after serving for two years in Chattanooga as general secretary. Miss White's experience prior to this has admirably fitted her for the responsible position she holds, and her wonderful work in various positions held previously is known all through the south and west.

Miss White served in that same capacity in Fort Worth, Texas, for about two years. Her work with Y. W. C. A. started in 1917, when she was director of a Y. W. C. A. hostess house at the officers' training camp, Camp Stanley, Texas. Later, Miss White worked with the Y. W. C. A. and the government in employment and vocational guidance work for the girls and women who had followed their husbands and brothers and sweethearts by the hundreds and thousands down to San Antonia. After the war, this office was closed, and Miss White went into the town department of the Y. W. C. A. and organized the Town association in Okamulgee, Okla. Later, she went into the finance department of the Y. W. C. A., and served as national board secretary of the secretarial annuity fund, the insurance feature of the Y. W. C. A., with headquarters at 600 Lexington, New York city.

Miss White Enthusiastic.

Miss White stated that without the wonderful foundation program laid by their predecessors, the present secretaries could not have hoped to do the wonders that they now feel sure to accomplish. She is very enthusiastic over the new headquarters and equipment, and after December 17 may be found in the new office on the first floor. She praised the wonderful work of the members of the Y. W. C. A. board, headed by Mrs. W. R. Prescott, president. The members are: Mrs. S. F. Boykin, first vice president; Mrs. T. Guy Woolford, second vice president; Mrs. R. J. Bates, treasurer; Mrs. E. K. Large, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles Freeman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ernest C. Kontz, chairman of finance committee; Mrs. R. K. Rambo, chairman legislative committee; Miss Susie Wailes, chairman of publicity; Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, Mrs. J. P. Averill, chairman of residence committee; Mrs. Stephen Barnett, Mrs. B. L. Bugg, chairman membership committee; Mrs. Archibald Davis chairman educational committee; Mrs. James C. Hobart, Jr., chairman business women's committee; Mrs. Ernest C. Kontz, chairman finance committee; Mrs. J. N. McEachern, chairman Phyllis Wheatley branch; Mrs. Emmett Quinn, chairman industrial committee; Mrs. Julian Robinson, chairman Girl Reserve committee; Mrs. Perrin Nicholson, Jr., co-chairman Girl Reserve committee; Mrs. Alfred Newell, chairman cafeteria committee; Mrs. Irving Thomas, chairman health education; Mrs. A. R. Colcord, Miss Ethel Moore, Mrs. Fred W. Patterson, Miss Mary Poole, Mrs. F. M. Robinson, Mrs. W. C. Royer, Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mrs. W. H. Flowers.

Miss Robina Gallacher, secretary of the room registry work and special case work, is doing one of the most difficult jobs that the Y. W. C. A. is called upon to handle. Her work is, in part, an extension of the work accomplished by the Y. W. C. A. home. That is, she finds places of abode for women—young and old—who do not want to live in an institution, or who for some reason prefer a private boarding or rooming establishment. In her files, Miss Gallacher keeps records of reputable places to which she may send the many who come to her for assistance. She also has the case work, which is difficult to describe, and is of a nature that does not seek publicity.

Miss Gallacher is well suited to her particular role, having lived in Atlanta most of her life, and worked here with the family welfare for two years. She came to the Y. W. C. A. to do the same work last year that she is so successfully carrying on again this year. A wonderful personality is needed in this work, and Miss Gallacher qualifies in every respect. Her office in the new building will be on the first floor.

At the residence, the Y. W. C. A., 52 to 56 West Baker, home where many girls reside economically, and in comfortable surroundings, are two secretaries. Miss Dorothy Lee has been here for four years, and is the matron. Mrs. Keitle is in charge of the dining room.

Miss Mary Moss, who came to Atlanta with Miss White, in September, after spending the greater part of the summer at Camp Highland, the Y. W. C. A. camp, is the new secretary in charge of the industrial department of the Y. W. C. A., which is concerned with girls in industry. Miss Moss graduated at Columbia college, South Carolina, and Curry School of Expression, Boston, Mass. She has studied at the University of South Carolina, the University of Virginia and the University of Wisconsin. A summer spent abroad and experience teaching at the Southern seminary, Buena Vista, Va., have been of invaluable assistance to Miss Moss in her present work. Her Y. W. C. A. career began in 1919 in Charleston, S. C., and she has worked in almost every department of the Y. W. At one time Miss Moss was general secretary in Petersburg, Va., but her specialty has been the industrial work and the work with business girls, which she was doing in Chattanooga, just prior to her coming to Atlanta. Under Miss Moss' guidance, a thriving club has been formed, and others are being formed.

Health Education.

One of the most interesting departments of the Y. W. C. A. is the health education department, which is under the secretaryship of Mrs. Elizabeth Reamer. This department has already announced in detail its program for the year, and with the opening of the new headquarters Mrs. Reamer will immediately begin to put into effect the interesting plans along lines healthful and physical. Mrs. Reamer came to Atlanta in the early fall, and while her activities have been necessarily limited until the opening of the new headquarters, she has already started a hiking club which is growing daily in membership and arousing widespread interest throughout the city. Mrs. Reamer's office in the new building is located on the same floor with the gymnasium and the swimming pool. For details of the program of activities in the health education department, see Mrs. Reamer in her new office.

The Girl Reserves are a very important part of the Y. W. C. A., and the charming young secretary is a very important figure on the horizon. Miss Sarah Ezell, who came from Chattanooga with Miss White and Miss Moss, is doing a wonderful work with the many clubs organized all over the city. There are Girl Reserves in the High schools, in the Junior High schools, in the Decatur Junior and High schools, the Decatur orphanage, the Stewart Avenue Day home, and the new Wesley home. Each group has an adviser, and the members are girls from 12 to 18.

Miss Ezell was educated at Peabody college for teachers, receiving the bachelor of science degree, and at the national school of the Y. W. C. A. for professional training. She taught at Raleigh, N. C., and was the assistant Girl Reserve secretary in Nashville. Prior to her coming to Atlanta, she was Girl Reserve secretary in Chattanooga.

Special Ceremony.

Under Miss Ezell's direction, the Girl Reserves will stage the exquisite "Hanging of the Greens" ceremony in the new headquarters, Sunday, December 19, at 5 o'clock. The public is invited to this semi-religious ceremony which is to be an annual custom to open the Christmas season.

The Y. W. C. A. cafeteria, on Alabama and Broad, is an important feature of the organization. In charge is Mrs. Margaret Saunders, with Miss Lucile Ramsey as cashier. For excellent food and economical prices the cafeteria is noted.

Miss Doris Hawes, the bookkeeper, and Miss Lucile Stewart, information clerk, are numbered among the general secretaries. These two attractive and alert young girls are with the Y. W. C. A. for the first time this year, and are doing splendid work in dispensing information and carrying on the intricate problems of the office routine.

'Occupations for Women' Is Name Of Book Published by Alliance

The Southern Woman's Educational alliance is publishing a December book on "Occupations for Women," which brings to a focus the work of 12 years during which women have been studied in their relation to economic conditions and opportunities. The study is thought by a number of advance critics to be unique in the field of occupational investigation.

The alliance has had for several years a branch in Atlanta and an office here in charge of an experienced vocational counselor. Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, who was awarded two years ago a chamber of commerce certificate of honor for her "untiring work for the cultural development of Atlanta," is local chairman, and the other officers of the branch are Mrs. Charles A. Conklin, Mrs. Albert E. Thornton, Jr., Mrs. Edwin K. Large, vice presidents; Mrs. Blair Foster, recording secretary; Mrs. Rembert Marshall, corresponding secretary; James F. Alexander, treasurer.

O. Latham Hatcher, president and organizer of the Southern Woman's Educational alliance, has directed the research upon which the book is based, has edited the study and has written the introductory chapter, "Women Today," which sums up the philosophy underlying the movement for vocational and professional recognition of women.

Logical Sequence.

"Occupations for Women" follows in logical sequence upon a smaller book issued by the Southern Woman's Educational alliance on "Social and Vocational Orientation for College Women," edited by Dr. Iva L. Peters, formerly professor of economics at Goucher college and now dean of women at Syracuse university. "Occupations for Women" will draw as its constituency high school graduates, undergraduates in college, alumnae, parents, employers, business and professional organizations, libraries of many types, sociological students and others interested in the economic status of women and in problems of woman's vocation adjustment, as well as instructors in high schools and colleges, deans, advisors and personnel workers.

Though there is special reference to the south and though the book is based on intensive studies made in Richmond and Atlanta, its scope is broad enough to include all sections of the country. In the introduction Dr. Hatcher touches upon the great economic and industrial changes, as well as the thought processes, which have occasioned the entrance of women into business and the professions, balances with the obvious difficulties that exist, the points of view of married women who are trying to combine home tasks with outside work, and ties together the widely diversified chapters that are to follow.

First from the Atlanta office and then from the Richmond office, the staff of the Southern Woman's Educational alliance worked intensively over a period of more than a year interviewing representatives of the occupations in which women are engaged, ascertaining the number of women employed, the approximate salaries paid and the educational and vocational preparation necessary. The fields of work presented in the book, with their hundreds of occupations, are accounting, advertising, art, banking, dancing, dentistry, department store work, dramatic work, education, home economics, insurance, landscape architecture, law, library work, medicine, music, nursing, personnel work, pharmacy, public health, real estate, religious work, social work, scientific work, secretarial work and writing.

The section of writing contains two interesting interviews by nationally known authors, James Branch Cabell and Ellen Glasgow, both of Richmond, giving helpful, though somewhat conflicting advice to young women who are expecting to enter upon literary careers, and several paragraphs on magazine work contributed by Ida Clyde Clarke, celebrated writer and speaker, formerly of the editorial staff of the Pictorial Review.

Acting as advisors on the various chapters or assisting otherwise have been such national authorities in their fields as Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, noted divine and religious educator; Frank Alvah Parsons, president of the school of fine and applied arts; Mrs. Hopkins, of the New York school of applied design; William A. Fitzgerald, director of research information of the National Dry Goods association; Lillian A. Quinn, vocational director, American Association of Social Workers; Mary Van Kleeck, of the Russell Sage foundation; William M. Proctor, of the department of education, Leland-Stanford Junior university, author of "Educational and Vocational Guidance;" W. V. Bingham, director of the Personnel Research federation; Emma O. Lundberg, director of institutional work, Child Welfare League of America; Florence Jackson, of the bureau of occupations of Wellesley college; James Francis Cooke, president of the Presser foundation; Florence V. Noyes, of the Noyes School of Rhythm; Louis H. Chalif, of the Chalif School of Dancing; Dr. W. H. O. McGehee, dean of dental practice, New York university; Harriet E. Howe, of the American Library association; Richard W. Hill, national secretary, American Institute of Banking; Edith Hatcher Harcum, of the Harcum school, Bryn Mawr; Mrs. Otis Skinner and many others.

The pressing need for a book that gives full information concerning occupations for women, the sort of preparation both necessary and available, the salary scales obtained, the chance for personal achievement, as well as for usefulness, is being emphasized daily by the requests from all parts of the country for immediate delivery of the book.

Dr. Hatcher brings to the task of editing "Occupations for Women" a wealth of experience in research and, for the last 12 years, of occupational research in particular. She is an A. B. of Vassar college and Ph.D. of Chicago university. For a number of years she was associate professor of English at Bryn Mawr college and head of the department of comparative literature. She is author of many magazine articles, bulletins and special studies, and of two books, "John Fletcher—A Study of Dramatic Method," and "A Book for Shakespeare's Plays and Pageants."

The Southern Woman's Educational alliance, of which Dr. Hatcher is founder and president and under the auspices of which "Occupations for Women" is being published, was organized to help girls and women in the south prepare for life through the right education and the right occupational training by providing safe information and counsel about education and occupations. The book, gathering together helpful information for the girl about to choose her life work and for the counselor, is designed to further educational and vocational guidance which has always been the main portion of the alliance program. The headquarters of the Southern Woman's Educational alliance are in Richmond, Va., and there are branches in New York, Chicago and Atlanta.

Return of School Girls Inspire Xmas Parties

As the season advances activity heightens and the pinnacle of social festivities will be reached at Christmas when the galaxy of college girls and boys assemble for the gaities to be given in their honor. News gathered through the social columns, and bits of gossip, whisper plans of a round of entertaining that will overshadow all preceding seasons. Parties galore being planned for the junior society set predict days and evenings of delightful events for the returned college contingent.

Miss Porter's Party.

One of the loveliest affairs of the Christmas season will be the tea at which Mrs. Russell Porter will entertain at her home on The Prado, in compliment to her charming schoolgird daughter, Miss Augusta Porter, who is attending Sweetbriar college.

Some time after New Years Miss Broyles and Miss Marian Cobb Bryan will be honored at a dancing party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Broyles and Judge and Mrs. Shepherd Bryan. Miss Broyles will be an attendant at the wedding of Miss Eva Hall, of Macon, and Norris Broyles, which will be an interesting event of January 12, taking place in Macon.

Sacred Heart Seniors Hold Debate of Interest.

The senior high classes of the Sacred Heart school held a debate Thursday, the subject, "Resolved: France should pay her war debt." The debaters on the negative side were Miss Dorothy Bosworth and Miss Margaret Gailmard, those on the affirmative were Miss Mary Catherine McGowan and Miss Deliah Beveridge.

Both sides had excellent papers and rebuttals. Some very good points were brought out in the negative and affirmative papers. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

Mr. and Mrs. Heath Will Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Heath will entertain members of the Georgia Mechanical society this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at their home in Scottdale. All members of the society are invited to be present.

"SOMETHING new under the sun" is what Atlanta people are eternally seeking, and this "something" will be realized in the Junior league tea room, which opens January 1 in the Medical Arts building at Peachtree and Forrest avenue.

Recollections of a French peasant's home will be revived in the novel decorative scheme that has been chosen for the tea room which is being developed under the direction and with the aid of Mrs. Latine Montague and Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr.

The low ceiling and group of small windows furnish the immediately needed back ground. A fake fireplace with its brass fire-things, brass kettle and clay pots will give the true atmosphere. Corner cupboards and racks around the room will hold pottery and antiques. Another unique decoartion will be the plate and spoon racks. Reds, greens and blues will form the color note, and gay chintzes in a small pattern, combining these primary colors will be hung at the windows. Long tables—with crude benches—will be covered with the red and white checked damasks. Especially decorative and original will be the china—a most charming and unusual design—with which the guests will be served by girls wearing attractive costumes, which will be different each day in the week. And the crowning note of all this will be the hospitality and cheer that will greet all visitors wending their way to the tea room.

Miss Keipp Appears On Music Club's Morning Program

Miss Madeline Keipp, well-known Atlanta lecturer and musical educator, will appear in the third of her series of talks before the Atlanta Music club at the morning musicale on Wednesday at 11 o'clock at the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Miss Keipp's subject will be "Mythological, Primitive, Oriental and Medieval String Instruments." She will be assisted in her subject by William B. Griffith, who will illustrate the instruments described, and Mrs. W. B. Griffith, who will appear in two harp solos illustrative of Miss Keipp's talk.

Mr. Griffith will display some of the rarest and most interesting antique musical instruments ever shown in Atlanta. Among them will be a "turning lyre," a medieval drone instrument with strings which are set in motion by a wheel. This unique object was made in Italy more than 300 years ago and is still in a state of excellent preservation. He will also show an antique Chinese fiddle, which belongs to the family of H. R. Bates, of Atlanta, the American history of which runs back to the gold epoch in California when one of the Bates family came into possession of it. Miss Keipp will describe its probable carlier origin in China and describe the musical instruments of its period.

In the musical program which will follow the lecture Mrs. Griffith will play "La Source," by Zabel, and "Fantasie," by Dubois. She will be accompanied by Mrs. W. H. Bedard at the piano.

Club members are requested to present their membership cards at the door. To non-members the price of admission is 50 cents. Mrs. E. K. Davis, membership chairman, will be at the door to receive new members.

Miss Lillian Le Conte To Be Honored At Holiday Tea

Miss Lillian Le Conte, who is a member of the junior class at Agnes Scott college, will spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams at their home on Piedmont avenue, leaving college on Friday, December 17.

Mrs. Williams will entertain at a large tea at her home Monday afternoon, December 27, in compliment to Miss Le Conte, inviting a number of young girls to meet her daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will be hosts at a dinner at the New Year's ball at the Capital City club which will also honor Miss Le Conte.

MAJOR and Mrs. Graham Johnson prolonged their New York visit to attend the marriage of their cousin, Mrs. Caroline Ligon Graham Slaughter to William Robertson Coe, Wall street financier.

The ceremony took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Slaughter, 290 Park avenue.

Only a few close friends were at the marriage ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. T. A. Kilborne, pastor of the Greenwich Presbyterian church. It was followed by an informal reception.

Major Johnson gave the charming bride in marriage, and she was elegantly gowned in biege chiffon, and carried gardenias. Mr. Coe's gifts to his charming bride consisted of a strand of priceless pearls and a magnificent square diamond ring set in platinum, the latter gift being selected under Major Johnson's superior knowledge of jewels.

The wife of one of the wealthiest and most influential men in America, Mrs. Coe, a former Alabaman, spent her childhood in the south. She is related to the Ligons, of Montgomery, and is a niece of Mrs. R. A. Johnson, of Atlanta.

Mr. Coe, whose wealth is numbered in seven figures, left with his bride on his private car for a wedding journey through the Grand canyon.

The Coe home on his estate, Planting Fields, near Oyster Bay, L. I., rivals a medieval mansion by its magnificence and grandeur, and it is here that Mrs. Coe will preside in future, dispensing the hospitality for which southern women are famed.

In the sporting world Mr. Coe is widely-known for his interest in racing. Only last January he refused $250,000 for his three-year-old colt, Pompey, which was the champion two-year-old of 1925 and the greatest money winner of that year. Among other well-known horses which Mr. Coe has owned is The Finn, which he purchased in 1923 from John R. Madden and Montfort Jones for $110,000. He is a member of the Metropolitan, New York Yacht, Riding and Driving, Turf and Field, Piping Rock and other clubs.

THE romantic wiles of Dan Cupid may effect the ranks of the Debutante club for a marvelously good-looking young gentleman seems to be paying court with decidedly serious intentions to one of the debbies.

Whether she favors him or another suiter remains upon the lap of the gods, for the girl herself admits she is having a hard time making up her mind. Her intimates declare the framed photograph of the Atlantan now adorns her dressing table, having recently replaced the picture of an extremely dashing, far distant and much older cavalier.

The deb in question is much too young to even consider entering the state of matrimony having not yet entered her twenties. She could well afford to wait a year or two before becoming Mrs. So and So.

However, love looks not with eyes, but with the mind, and winged Cupid is painted blind.

NO one enjoys a joke on herself more than Mrs. Frank Holland, the Atlanta matron who is successfully guiding the Girl Scouts' activities. With all seriousness attendant upon the usual, dignified Sunday morning church services, this trim little lady's attention was diverted from the scholarly sermon by the annoying odor of moth balls.

Not that Mrs. Holland does not believe in the particular and fastidious idea of protecting one's fur coat but she believes more in the complete airing of such garments before appearing in public.

It was along these lines she mused during church hour, hoping that there would be no gentle reminders of such matters by the time another Sabbath day rolled around.

Imagine her amazement when she removed her own wrap after reaching home and five pungent, glistening little moth balls rolled out of her pocket.

SHORTLY, we are told, a marriage will take place in our midst which will unite two as widely-separated faiths as did the marriage of Ellin MacKay and Irvin Berlin.

It will also confirm a rumor that has been current for many months, and the lovely bride-elect will in all probability go forth without the parental blessing.

Though very young and still ranked among the subdebs of society, this Atlanta belle is widely traveled and possesses savoir faire which is rarely found in one of her years. She spent the past summer traveling in Europe and was an admired figure in continental society as well as in her own exclusive circle at home.

The groom-elect, who is considered one of the most eligible young men in the smart set in which he moves, has both wealth and good looks to his credit.

And his marriage to the girl of his choice will in all probability terminate as happily and successfully as has the MacKay-Berlin menage!

ATLANTA friends of pretty Miss Eva Hall, of Macon, caught a glimpse of her this past week in Atlanta. Spending a few days with her friends, the John Lewis Holmes, at their home on Cherokee road, she was busily engaged in "putting the finishing touches" to her trosseau.

Atlanta will be indeed fortunate to welcome, as a charming acquisition to its social ranks, this popular young girl when she comes here to make her home with the Arnold Broyles, following her marriage to their son, Norris Broyles, on January 12. And it is so like Mrs. Broyles—with all her magnanimity and charm—to redecorate and furnish to Eva's taste and

Miss Bohler Weds Jack Bergstrom At Quiet Ceremony

Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends throughout Georgia, is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Catherine Bohler, of Cartersville, and Jack Bergstrom, of Atlanta, which was solemnized at the home of Dr. and Mrs. T. G. Fowler, on North Moreland avenue, Wednesday afternoon, December 8, at 4 o'clock.

The marriage was characterized by unusual beauty and simplicity in the presence of only the immediate families, and a few close friends.

The impressive ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Barlow, professor of Spanish at Tech Hi, and a close friend of the groom. The lovely bride was becomingly attired in a model of Princess blue crepe, ornamented in deep bands of velvet; with this she wore a smart close fitting hat of lustrous metal cloth embroidered in threads of blue, and with other accessories in blending tones.

Her bouquet was bride's roses and valley lilies.

The bride and groom left immediately for a short wedding journey, after which they will be at home to their friends on North Moreland avenue.

The bride is a talented and attractive young woman, possessing a very loveable disposition, which endears her to those with whom she comes in contact.

Mr. Bergstrom is a young man of sterling qualities, and has a host of friends who will extend congratulations.

wishes the suite in this hospitable home which she will occupy.

NOT LONG AGO we told you of a wedding scheduled to take place under another flag!

Now rumor tells us that the lovely bride-to-be, whose home is in an adjacent state, has changed her mind—at least her affection has reverted to a former love. Admitting a wish to see him before she announced her engagement to the young banker so far away, a telephone call swiftly brought him to Atlanta, where she was visiting. The result was that engagement ring No. 1 was replaced by engagement ring No. 2 and passage canceled for an interesting family party on a southbound liner early in January.

Instead of taking up her residence on foreign shores, this popular belle, whom Atlanta claims by adoption, will make her home in the Creole City when she becomes the bride of her "former love."

THE youthfulness of the modern grandmother is the mirage of the age with her short skirts, fluted hat-brim and atmosphere hosiery.

Two of these engaging personalities met in the Tenth Street postoffice Friday and exchanged intimate thoughts pertinent to their grandchildren, little suspecting that their conversation was overheard by the busy gentleman behind the stamp window.

He doesn't exactly belong to the juvenile set himself, but, according to his ideas, a grandmother evidently means exactly what the dictionary defines—an old woman!

"You all must be getting mighty old," said he. "But I like old people," he continued in a very patronizing voice.

As one of the grandmothers departed she flung high her head crowned high with lots of golden hair and mischievously retorted: "Well, old age has its compensations. We don't have to be careful about the seam of your stocking being straight up our legs."

Every eye was instantly riveted upon zig-zag seam of the atmosphere stocking worn by the facetious grandmother.

TWENTY children from the Home for the Friendless were guests of Colonel William Lawton Peel at the Tipica concert. No one in the group was happier than the host himself as he munched popcorn and peanuts with his little guests. Only once did the dignified colonel show signs of discomfort.

It was during the rendition of a most classic tune when a solemn quietude prevailed throughout the big auditorium. The atmosphere was pierced with whining m-e-o-w-s which came from the exact direction where Colonel Peel and his proteges were seated. We wonder if the popular host ever discovered that the m-e-o-w-s emanated from fuzzy little noisemakers tucked inside of the waistcoat pockets of two little red-headed boys seated beside Colonel Peel.

A TRIO of Washington seminary freshmen, prevented by a long-established custom from attending the formal O. B. X. dance, staged a consolation party Friday evening.

Miss Jacqulin Moore, a Phi Pi, invited Miss Louise Moore, a sister sorority member, and Miss Harriett Wynne, a Pi Pi, to a spend-the-night party.

The magnetic charm of these fascinating "freshies" drew a host of stags, drawing up in high-powered motors before Miss Moore's West Eleventh street home during the intermission of the O. B. X. dance. Rugs were folded, a victrola ground out the latest jazz music and they tripped the light fantastic for an hour or two. Out at Druid Hills, where the O. B. X. dance was given, friends searched high and low for the stags "among those missing."

Try Mine
My powders, used by movie stars
By Edna Wallace Hopper

I am a stage star and a movie star. All my friends are stars. I know these public beauties as few do.

We are extravagant. Supreme beauty means so much to us that nothing else can matter. I long paid for powders $5 per box, to secure the very best.

Now, by grace of the makers, I supply those powders at very modest price. The very super-powders for which I paid their price. All toilet counters now supply them at 50c and $1, under the name of Edna Wallace Hopper.

There are two types, but of this superlative grade. One a cold cream powder which clings and stays. I always use that. But many prefer a light, fluffy powder. So I supply both styles. Both come in three shades—white, flesh and brunette.

Carroll's Vanities To Open At Erlanger December 27

BY RALPH T. JONES.

It is the theory of good newspaper writing to tell your news in the opening sentence. However, when you have four or five matters of delightful interest to the subscribers, how are you going to get 'em all in one sentence?

Let's take 'em one at a time—

The new Erlanger theater, on Peachtree near North avenue, where the big shows are coming in the future, in place of the old Atlanta, will open on Monday, December 27.

The opening attraction is a magnificent and startling production of Earl Carroll's famous "Vanities."

The principal comedians are Lou Powers, Atlanta's greatest favorite among all the funny men, and Bert Swor, the star blackface comedian who used to be such a large part of the Al Fields minstrels.

There are three pieces of good news for a Christmas and New Year present.

Of course, it is possible to enlarge upon them all. Frinstance—

Carroll's "Vanities" is the show that, for several years, has been the chief topic of all conversation by those fortunate souls who have just returned home after a visit to New York. It is the first time, however, that it has been brought to Atlanta. It is you remember your "just-from-New-York" friends told you, excruciatingly funny. And there are more than the believable quota of good looking girls. But, it is understood, no bathtubs.

Lou Powers it isn't necessary to talk about to Atlantans. They remember him too vividly in "Sally," and other musical comedy successes of recent years. Also as the principal comedian in last summer's municipal opera company. It might be mentioned, however, that all the critics say he has more and better opportunities for his own brand of comedy in this production than he ever enjoyed before. Trust Lou to take advantage of them.

Bert Swor, you likewise remember. The slew footed, drawling parsonification of a typical Georgy darky.

As for the new Erlanger—wait, we'll tell you more about it later. And you'll see for yourself the week of December 27. For the time being, let it be said that Manager Lewis Haase can't find words to express his pleasure over the theater he can, at last, invite Atlantans to. And he was never speechless before.

Mrs. Ashby Lectures.

"Solving Life Problems by Constructive Thought and Work," will be the subject of a lecture in practical psychology by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY ENDS YEAR'S ACTIVITY

Inman Park Methodist Woman's Missionary society held its last meeting of the year Monday, in the Sunday school auditorium.

Miss Josephine Wilkins, representing the children's code commission of Georgia, gave a talk on "Juvenile Courts," and told about the new and revised laws for child protection; also the bills to be presented in the legislature next summer.

Mrs. John Hurt suggested that every member of the auxiliary talk to her neighbors and friends about these bills and do her part to bring about the passage of same.

Mrs. George Butler, the retiring president, gave a report of the work accomplished during the year and stated that the name of Inman Park auxiliary had been placed on the Belle Bennett Memorial tablet.

The following circle chairmen have been appointed for the year of 1927: Mrs. J. T. Eason, Mrs. M. C. Evans, Mrs. C. H. Robeson, Mrs. B. M. McFall, Mrs. A. B. Heath, Miss Helen Baldwin, Mrs. T. A. Rivers, Mrs. M. M. Mills, Mrs. W. O. Lindsay and Mrs. E. E. Barnes.

The Rev. Henry B. Mays will install new officers for the woman's missionary society Sunday evening, December 12, at the regular church service. The public is cordially invited.

The business woman's circle of the Inman Park Woman's Missionary society will hold its last meeting of the year Monday evening, December 13. Supper will be served at 6:30 o'clock by Mrs. Hanson's circle.

BRICKER WILL PREACH ON "HIS OWN CITY"

This morning at 11 o'clock Dr. L. O. Bricker, minister of the Peachtree Christian church, will deliver a sermon on "His Own City." The sermon will be based on the story of Jesus taking up his residence in the city of Capernaum, because it was a more convenient and profitable place for him to live; how he identified himself with the institutions and people of Capernaum, what he contributed to the life of the city and how he tried to be a good citizen.

WORLD ZIONIST HEAD COMING TO ATLANTA

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, inventor of TNT and president of the World Zionist organization, has been invited by J. Saul, chairman of the United Palestine Appeal in this city, it was announced Saturday, to speak to the Jews of the south in Atlanta on Sunday, February 20.

Dr. Weizmann, director in chief for the work of reestablishing Palestine as a Jewish national land, is in the United States on behalf of the U. P. A. and the formation of the Jewish agency in accordance with the provisions of the Jewish mandate over Palestine.

The southern delegation to the national conference on Palestine held in Boston last week, headed by Hyman S. Jacobs, of Atlanta, extended an official invitation to the famous Jew then, contingent upon agreement upon a date which would be convenient for Dr. Weizmann and on which Jewish leaders from Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana and other southern states could come to Atlanta. February 20 was selected as the appropriate date following a tour through Georgia and Alabama made by Dr. Leo J. Frachtenberg, the executive director of the U. P. A. for the southern region, immediately following his return south from Boston.

Dr. Weizmann is a native of Pinsk, Russia, but during his early youth went to Geneva as a student, where he was associated in the university with Lenin and Trotsky, who later rose to world fame as leaders of Russian revolution at the same time that Dr. Weizmann became a world figure as the leader of Zionism.

After his student years in Geneva Dr. Weizmann became professor of chemistry at the University of Manchester, England, and at the outbreak of the world war was drafted into the British service as a brigadier general in the chemical warfare division, adapting TNT to military use as one of his many contributions to British defense.

A NOTE from Mrs. Gertrude Lander the other day telling me of the opening by her of an expert beauty department in the American School of Beauty Culture, at 58 1-2 Whitehall street, interested me very much, for I have known her quite a while and how efficient she is as an operator in all lines of beauty culture. I was delighted to know of her venture into "business for herself" and feel sure she will make a success in it.

Mrs. Lander is a graduate of the beauty school in which she has her department and her work, while there as a pupil, was commented on with much praise and deservedly so. She gives a strikingly beautiful permanent wave in the marcel, Mae Murray curl and various other modes that are le dernier cri this season for Milady of Fashion.

The next time you are downtown in the shopping section of Whitehall street, go in and see her—have her make you beautiful—she can, and you will like the methods in which she does it. Facials are a specialty with her, too, as well as permanent waving.

IT WOULD be to the advantage of anyone contemplating taking a business course prior to their entrance in the business world to make a visit to the Southern Business College at 56 Whitehall street, and have a talk with its president, Mr. L. W. Arnold—have him tell you of the course, the methods of shorthand taught there and the duration of it, etc.

The Southern Business College is an old, well-established school—it has been under the same management for thirty-six years—preparing men and women for the business world to fill splendid positions. The school is a most complete one—every requisite for a business education is included in the course given you.

Graduates of the Southern Business College are in great demand by prominent firms in this city and elsewhere because the training they receive is known and recognized by business men all over the Southern States—naturally they wish to employ them—they are efficient. So, when making a decision of where to go for your business course, go to the school and see the hundreds of pupils engrossed in their work—you will become enthusiastic and decide to take your course there—it's a wonderful one. You can begin your studies at any time—the sooner you start the sooner you are ready for a position and independency.

"ONLY A HANDKERCHIEF"

The "onliness" of the handkerchief, as a gift, is losing its significance, this season when these accessories are so beautiful. Whether in sets of several, or singly, the handkerchief has made itself worthy, both by its excellence of quality and its beauty.

Then, also, the handkerchief has lifted itself from the field of the useful to that of the ornamental, by taking a place so conspicuous in dress. Both in the tailleure and the formal costume the handkerchief has a place of prominence far removed from its one-time modest retirement.

NOVEL HANDBAGS.

The vogue of hand-loomed, home-spun has extended into the realm of handbags. Some of the most exclusive of these useful accessories are fashioned from this material, framed in metal, often of distinctive and artistic craftsmanship. In some instances these bags are lined with silk, again leather forms the more durable lining.

CONVENIENTLY located in the Henry Grady hotel with entrance on Cain street is the Randolph Beauty Parlor. This salon de beaute is well-known by women who are fastidious of their personal appearance.

The new process marcel permanent wave is a specialty with Randolph's, it looks like a "regular marcel," and is beautiful and becoming to everyone—it enhances their beauty. The manicuring and facials there are famous the town over—you can always be assured of an expert operator, too. You'll find there also the Marinello and E. Burnham cosmetics in everything essential as aids to beauty. Mrs. Randolph has her own line of cosmetics manufactured for her by a Parisian cosmetician, well-known throughout France. Make an appointment at this beauty salon—you will agree with me afterwards, if you do, that it is a splendid one.

GLORY FABRICS.

The gorgeousness of yardage this season fits it well for gifting purposes. Golden and silvered warp or woof, commingled with rainbow tints, or with plain coloring in the high shades now popular, presents a glorious surface, picture-like in loveliness. Such materials, combined with plain satins, crepes, silks or velvets, for pannellings or for sleeves, or in any distinctive way, enliven costumes for day or evening wear and the yardage itself is purposeful for Christmas presentation.

CHRISTMAS CANDLES.

The Christmas candles, always likable, are more than ever so this year. Not only are the colors more true, but shapes, whether hand-moulded or machine-made, are more symmetrical. A novelty is the very drippy candle, its own material seeming to have found its way down the sides in a distinctly artistic manner. The hand-made floral and figurine shapes are better than heretofore, many personages of history and romance being found in the collections for Christmas shining.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

One could not consider a visit to Richmond quite complete without a pilgrimage to Hollywood cemetery, that sacred resting place, where so many of our heroes lie sleeping their last sleep, heaped with the laurels due to their bravery and the rosemary which speaks our memory of their valor. Here it seems one treads more softly, as the one feels the presence of the sainted ones who went to their death holding high our colors. Here, in cause eternal, seems to waft heavenward, breathing of the purity of the spirit of the men who who the grey, leaving with us the fragrance of their nobility.

Confederate Monument.

A monument 90 feet high and 40 at the base commemorates the last resting place of 18,000 Confederate heroes. This is a wonderful piece of ingenuity, being large pieces of Virginia granite forming a symmetrical pyramid. An inscription on a large plaque on one side reads, "Memoriam in Eaterna." The story goes that when the last stone was to be placed to make the topmost peak of the pyramid, it was difficult to get anyone to undertake the dangerous feat. At last a sailor convict was offered his liberty if he would undertake the perilous mission. He successfully fulfilled it and regained his liberty by the manner of his courage. This monument points to the sky, with a solemn dignity and makes one feel that, though right didn't prevail over might, no cause is ever lost which is made immortal in the hearts of those who feel it their life work to honor its memory.

Heroes buried in Hollywood.

Henry Watt, the first Confederate to die in the war between the states, is buried here. He was killed in the battle of Bethel in 1861, so we were informed by the very courteous and considerate sexton. We were shown the graves of Major J. E. B. Stuart, Katherine Hoges, who followed her husband through the war and was given a military burial, being the only woman ever given that honor. A small holly tree shades the square slab that covers her last resting place. There were many places of interest all filled with the memories of the valor of the courageous ones but the real mecca of our pilgrimage was reached when we paused in reverence before a large round plot of ground over which the Stars and Bars will ever float.

Jefferson Davis' Tomb.

A huge wreath of snow-white chrysanthemums covered the tomb of the beloved chieftain of the Confederacy, sent by the general convention of the United Daughter of the Confederacy then in session. Evergreen spring eternally from this sacred spot as though kept fresh by the love and devotion ever lavished upon the memory of this immortal hero. The inscription reads as follows:

"The President of the Confederate States of America.

"Faithful to all trust. Martyr to principle, he lived and died the most consistent of American soldiers and statesmen."

And below are these words:

"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Beside the sainted president of the Confederacy is laid his faithful wife, who ever lived and had her being in the fortunes or misfortunes which befell her illustrious husband. The inscription here ran as follows:

"Sacred to the memory of Varina Howell Davis, beloved and faithful wife of Jefferson Davis, and a devoted mother to his children.

"Her children rise up and call her blessed."

Minnie Davis, the child of the Confederacy lies at one side, ever guarded by a beautiful statute of grief.

And as we stood in reverential silence, we felt the presence of the great guiding spirit of the indomnible leader whose shrine was our mecca—and again we breathed with grateful hearts the incense which floats upon the breeze that ever stirs the folds of the Stars and Bars over the tomb of Jefferson Davis.

Give Use of Land To Mountain School.

The following resolution was passed at the recent state U. D. C. convention:

"Whereas, the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, desires continuance of the Francis S. Bartow memorial fund in its present form, as invested in farm lands for the use of Rabun Gap school, on which we note an annual income of approximately 20 per cent on our investment. This is a trust fund for the educational work of the Georgia division and only the interest may be used; and,

Whereas, the recent fire at Rabun Gap school and the financial status of the school, even prior to the fire, was precarious, and the school was in danger of closing for lack of funds;

Garnaliel Bradford Honored

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS.

It is the fate of many illustrious ones—who give of their best—to receive the adulation of the public when alas, it is too late for the laurels to reap them any benefit, save as they reflect glory upon those who are near to them.. And this same public who waxes fat upon the bounties and jewels of the intellect of these matchless ones is quite prone to delay recognized appreciation. This is not the case with Gamaliel Bradford, whose well-deserved honors come to him while in the prime of his working power of benefit to others. At the state convention at Statesboro the United Daughters of the Confederacy in assembly passed a resolution indorsing his works and honoring this brilliant man. This resolution has been published on this page in an earlier issue.

At Richmond, at the general convention, a similar resolution was passed signed by Mrs. Walter D. Lamar Mrs. Walter Grace, Miss Caroline Patterson and Mrs. Mark O'Daniel, all of Macon.

Oliver Orr, one of Macon's well-known and brilliant attorneys, says of Gamaliel Bradford: "I was drawn to admire the wonderful Gamaliel Bradford through his sketch of Sidney Lanier which appeared in 'American Patriots.' This inimitable man has never been south, and admires us for what we are." Mr. Orr is an ardent admirer of this man to whom so much deserved honor has been shown, and on April 27, 1926, delivered an address at Mercer university on "The Soul of Gamaliel Bradford," which was received with great enthusiasm and interest.

Mr. Orr was instructed by the ex-commander of the United Confederate Veterans, General W. B. Freeman, to draw up a resolution honoring Gamaliel Bradford at the Birmingham reunion in May, 1926. This request was duly complied with and the resolucion was presented by General Colton Lynes, of Marietta. The resolution follows:

The south owes appreciation to Gamaliel Bradford.

When the pages of time are turned back to our southern heroes of 1861-1865 and the picture is presented to us by writers who reveal the truth about the south during the war between the state, and after the war, we should do reverence to all in our land, who praise us, but how much more should we bestow upon the man of northern birth, with no relatives in the south, and who has never been south, but loves it for what its people are; and is always striving in all his works to do us justice.

When, under the combined influence of heart, brain and soul, he records the greatness of scholars, statesmen, etc., he places the greatest value of heroism loftiness and honor upon our Confederate heroes who have accomplished the highest fame on earth, exceeding even those of the north, we can appreciate the fact that he labored for ten years on his greatest book, "Lee, the American," which is declared "matchless" by President Henry Louis Smith, of Washington and Lee university. Mr. Bradford has been honored with the highest degree of Washington and Lee university.

"Confederate Portraits" is another work by Gamaliel Bradford, and in this work one finds southern generals, admirals and statesmen treated in such a comprehensive and accurate manner as proves that the author has caught the spirit of the south, and in a climax of rare beauty, gives you an insight into their personalities. Hence for these attributes of justice, truth and accuracy so necessary to the historian and biographer, Gamaliel Bradford, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., is assigned to the highest rank in America.

Therefore, be it resolved by the United Confederate Veterans, in annual reunion assembled in the city of Birmingham, Ala., May 19, 1926, that we express to Gamaliel Bradford our grateful appreciation of his generally just, accurate and sympathetic presentation to the world of the spirit of the south, as shown in his splendid references in his volumes, "Lee, the American," and "Confederate Portraits."

Resolved that the foregoing preamble resolutions be placed upon the minutes and a copy of same be sent to the historian and author, Gamaliel Bradford, 493 Worcester street, Wellesley Hills, Mass.

Respectfully submitted to the committee on resolutions by

J. COLTON LYNES,
Inspector General, United Confederate Veterans.

ALBANY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy was held in the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the president, Mrs. H. J. von Weller, presiding.

The president announced that a most important matter had to be brought to the attention of the members. She had seen that a committee had been appointed from the Lions club to confer with the Veterans and the Daughters in regard to the removal of the Confederate monument from the center of the street at Pine and Jackson.

This matter brought on much discussion from members of the Memorial association present. Women who had helped raise the money for the monument in years far past, when property owners in the vicinity of every downtown corner were seeking to have it placed on their particular corner. The placing of the monument was finally put to a popular vote, the present site being decided upon.

OCONEE CHAPTER.

The lovely home of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Edmundson on Bellevue road was the scene of an elaborate party on Wednesday afternoon when the Oconee chapter of United Daughters of the Confederacy assembled for their regular November meeting.

Hostesses were Miss Mattie Wall, Mrs. J. P. Jernigan, Mrs. Moody Brown, Mrs. Maggie Martin, Mrs. D. A. Smith and Mrs. Edmundson.

The president, Mrs. Bashinski, called the assembly to order.

The opening session was full of business and plans for more business.

The president's report carried much of vital interest, the keynote being work for our veterans, urging that we strive for greater achievement in this particular.

The treasurer's report was most encouraging and the assembly voted to put the funds already on hand for the 1927-28 scholarship on time deposit until needed. After the registrar's splendid report, two new members were voted into the chapter. A committee was named for sending a box to the soldiers' home, near Atlanta. Plans were formulated for entertainment of our veterans at the December meeting.

The chapter voted to put on a historical pageant on Lee's birthday in January. After the good report on the proceeds from Sparks circus, the assembly at once voted to sponsor the circus again next year.

The reports from the state convention at Statesboro were given.

The program for the afternoon was a continuation of study on Baldwin county.

Mrs. E. L. Black opened the program with a splendid paper on Oglethorpe university where Lanier was educated. Famous newspapers of Milledgeville and distinguished residents was a topic interestingly given by Mrs. W. T. Simmons.

Seventh District Activities Will Interest Clubwomen

The Carrie Dyer Reading circle of Acworth, has recently remodeled and repainted the clubhouse and gave a play, "Sunshine," December 3, the proceeds to be used for the equipment fund. A recent musical program was presented in charge of Miss Hattie Mitchell, ably assisted by Mrs. C. G. Durham, Miss Annie Jean Awtrey and Frank Mitchell.

The Dallas Woman's club, at the last meeting, voted to sponsor the empty stocking fund this year, as they have done for some years past and a strong committee composed of Miss Bessie Crew, Mrs. J. I. Matthews, Mrs. H. Y. Holland and Mrs. O. J. Witherow, will have charge of the work. Fifteen dollars was voted to the library of the Dallas public school in celebration of children's book week. Trees will be planted on Arbor day in honor of Governor Walker, in whose administration the state board of forestry began to function; for Gordon Lee, former congressman for the seventh district and long a faithful and loyal public official; for Mrs. Felton, first woman senator, and to Mrs. Charles McGarity, president of the district and beloved member of this organization. The program for the day was in charge of Mrs. Charles McGarity, who made an interesting talk on illiteracy and rural education; Miss Crew spoke of educational week an what it will accomplish; Mrs. Gene Bullock, Mrs. Newt Hardage, Mrs. L. L. Johnston and Mrs. J. I. Matthews also made brief talks on educational topics. Mrs. R. J. Rundles and Mrs. Claude Rainwater were hostesses for the afternoon.

Chrysanthemum Tea.

The usual chrysanthemum show, staged each year by the Rockmart Woman's club, had to be given up this year as frost had blighted the blossoms, so a chrysanthemum tea was given instead, at the clubhouse, which was profusely decorated with the blossoms which were still lovely, though too badly blighted for a formal show. Mrs. Sam Lee, Mrs. W. J. Harris and Mrs. S. O. Jones had this feature in charge. In the faternoon Misses May and Grace Johnson, heads of the expression and music departments of the high school, presented their pupils in a program of piano and violin selections and readings which were thoroughly enjoyed. In the evening Mrs. J. A. Fincher and her pupils of the Cedartown schools, ably assisted by Mr. Merriman, violinist, and Miss Jeffie Fincher, head of the expression department in Cedartown, gave a delightful program. Refreshments were served after both programs by Mrs. E. L. Head, president of the club, and a committee of members. Candy was sold and chrysanthemums, also, and a nice sum found its way into the club treasury.

At the meeting of the Cobb County federation, held recently at Kennesaw, the following officers were elected for the next two years: Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, president; Mrs. Rolland, of Kennesaw, first vice president; Mrs. C. G. Greene, of Smyrna, second vice president; Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, Acworth, secretary; Mrs. A. B. Karwich, Marietta, treasurer; Mrs. Eugene Ray, Acworth, publicity. The retiring president, Mrs. H. E. Hague, of Marietta, presided and the formal business session was followed by a luncheon given by the members of the Kennesaw Woman's club.

Health Nurse Talks.

The Lesche Woman's club, of Dalton, listened to Miss Beluah Carrington, county health nurse, at their last meeting, who told of her work particularly in the Dalton district, and spoke of the appaling number of deaths from preventable diseases during the past 11 months and of the work being done by education in sanitation, looking toward prevention rather than merely cure of these diseases. Following Miss Carrington's talk, the program was turned into a symposium on "Speaking of Operations" and selections from that diverting yarn were read by Miss Mattie Lee Huff; also a selection from Irvin Cobb's "Anatomies" was read by Mrs. Walter McGhee. An amusing skit, written by Mrs. McGhee, in which the parts were taken by Miss Marian McCamy, Miss Martha Lin Manley, Miss Rose Huff and Miss Blanche Gardner, closed the program.

Mrs. A. V. Howe, seventh district chairman for good roads, urges that the various clubs in the organization continue in the future, as in the past, to beautify the highways by planting trees, shrubs and flowers. But she makes the very pertinent observation that tourists are not at all likely to be impressed by the beauty of the planting while the roads continue to be impassable in bad weather and marred by rough detours and suggests that the first work for club women is to try to better this condition by local publicity and by using their influence with county commissioners and other officials looking to the making of permanent good roads. Mrs. Howe also stresses the work being done by the state safety council, towards making the world safer for human beings who use the public roads, and urges that each club cooperate with that organization in every possible way, particularly by putting on a "safety first" campaign through the local newspapers and in other ways, as best suits local conditions.

Mrs. Lewis Calls Attention To Scrapbook Importance

By Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis, of Monroe, Chairman of Scrapbooks for the Georgia Federation.

Monroe, Ga., December 11.—Dear madame district president, local club president and members of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs:

Meaning of Book.

Have you ever stopped to consider what our scrap book means to our state federation? I am sure if we would reflect but a moment we will realize the great importance of a carefully kept scrap book, not only for state federation, but also for our districts and our local clubs.

Is not a club scrap book in reality a history of that club?

Not long since a member of a certain organization in Georgia was appointed to write a history of that organization from its beginning to the present day. Owing to the various changes in the officers of that organization the minutes of the chapter had been lost. The chapter did not have a scrap book chairman. What was the result? No entirely authentic history of the organization could be written.

Madame president, do you catch the point, and will you assist me in a plan which I propose to try out?

My predecessors have given to our state federation wonderfully kept scrap books and yet I feel that we should do something even more definite along this line.

Madame district president, will you not appoint a district chairman of scrap book, and will you not ask each local club president to appoint a local scrap book chairman?

Will you not request your district chairman to secure a history of your district federation, have it prated in your local or county paper and send me a copy of that history?

Will you not also request each local club president to appoint a local chairman of scrap books and ask her to have a history of her club printed in the local or county newspaper?

Will you not request her to mail me a copy of that history? Of course all histories should be as condensed as possible, giving only the most important facts from the organization to the present time.

A picture of the club house should be included in the history.

Beginning January 1, 1927, articles of the districts and local clubs will be published on the official club page of "The Atlanta Constitution."

Your cooperation shall be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely yours,
LENA FELKER LEWIS,
State Chairman of Scrap Book of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Arbor Day Exercises Honor Gov. Walker.

A large and responsive audience enjoyed the Arbor day exercises sponsored by the fifth district federation of woman's clubs at the capitol December 3 in honor of Governor Walker.

The invocation by Rabbi David Marx was an impressive feature of the opening ceremonies. Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president of the fifth district, explained that this memorable occasion was one in a chain of similar celebrations taking place on this same day in the various club districts of the state at the request of Miss Alice Baxter, state chairman of forestry. Miss Baxter and the clubwomen of Georgia sought to pay living and loving tribute to the governor, during whose administration and under whose wise influence the state department of forestry was created.

Mrs. B. D. Gray, fifth district chairman of forestry, gave a history of Arbor day, its purpose and the results of its observance in other states. Mrs. Gray suggested the giving of living Christmas trees purchased from florists, which, after the holidays, may be planted and thus eventually used to permanently beautify private grounds. She introduced Colonel George M. Napier, who delivered a forceful address stressing reforestation and pointing out the fact that forest fires form 90 per cent of the obstacles which prevent reforestation, and that 2,500,000 acres of forest land in Georgia are now under organized fire control.

Following Colonel Napier's address, Governor Walker, the district's guest of honor for the day, was presented by Miss Alice Baxter. He expressed appreciation for the honor conferred upon him and paid glowing tribute to Miss Baxter, who has been instrumental in developing a nature-loving and tree-planting sentiment throughout Georgia, and in so doing has performed a service of the highest value to the entire state.

A feature of the program was the singing of patriotic songs by 200 representative school children of Atlanta under the supervision of Miss Kate Harralson and Miss Hattie Rainwater, of the public school system. The Georgia Military Academy band, under the direction of Captain Post, played a number of appropriate selections.

The tree-planting on the capitol lawn was in charge of Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, assisted by B. M. Lufburrow, state forrester, and by Mrs. J. B. Bachman, chairman of forrestry, Atlanta Woman's club. Among the distinguished guests present were officers of the Georgia Forestry association, of the newly created state department of forestry, of the state federation of clubs, and of many patriotic organizations as well as representatives of the schools and colleges of Atlanta.

Brunswick Club Hears Interesting Program.

On December 1, occurred the second program meeting of the fall, of the Brunswick club, which is noted for its interesting and instructive programs. The musical and educational departments were in charge, Miss Minnie Bower and Mrs. J. H. Parker, respective chairmen.

"The World's Greatest Christmas Carols" was the subject chosen, and a most interesting story was told by Mrs. T. W. Simpson, about the carols as sung in various lands and countries, giving their origins and authors. One of the most widely known of the Christmas carols, "Come All Ye Faithful," was sung by the large audience, which taxed the capacity of the hall in which the meeting was held.

A delightful feature was the chorus of 25 small boys, from the grammar school grade, who sung in their childish voices two well-known carols. "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks," and "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." A trio, composed of three local young men, gave a beautiful number. "We Three Kings of Orient Are," which was one of the special features.

Other fine old carols, including "Oh, Holy Night," "Oh Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Silent Night," were beautifully rendered by talented local singers, and the musical portion of the program was concluded with the singing of "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear," by the audience.

Mrs. D. W. Krauss, gave a most comprehensive review of the new book, "The Advancing South," by Mims, which was splendidly done. She received the applause of the large number present, and was congratulated upon the fine manner in which this book was presented.

The club women were disappointed that the expected exhibit of the handicraft of the students of Tallulah schools was absent, but in lieu of being deprived of the privilege of ordering these hand-made articles, each woman present made an offering of 50 cents for the Passie Fenton Ottley Foundation, of Tallulah Falls school. Three-minute talks on the Federation school, were made by club women who visited the institution the past summer, and many intimate glimpses of the students and the school were given.

Mrs. G. V. Cate, president of the Brunswick club, and who is first vice president of the 11th district federation, attended the district board meeting in the spring and already plans are being made for the entertainment of the guests expected.

McRae Improvement Club Reports Fund Cleared By Dinner

The finance committee of the McRae Improvement club, which sponsored the Georgia products dinner, reported, through the chairman, Mrs. Fred Whatley, that the amount of $37 was cleared. Mrs. J. I. McMillan was chairman of the special dinner committee. Mrs. E. F. McRae, chairman of special committee to prepare the exhibit entered by the club in the Southern Georgia exposition, reported sufficient funds from prizes and donations pay all expenses. The meeting was called at the home of Mrs. Echols Graham, with the president, Mrs. J. H. Girardeau, presiding.

Mrs. George H. Harris, co-chairman with Mrs. Girardeau, for the Christmas seal sale in Telfair county, made an appeal to the club women for their support and explained the uses to which this money will be put by the Georgia Anti-Tuberculosis association.

Mrs. P. J. Cason and Mrs. O. H. Cook were received as new members.

The president turned the meeting over to Mrs. Eschol Graham, chairman of P.-T. A. organization and cooperation, who had invited the superintendent and teachers from the public school and college to be present for the organization of a P.-T. A. Stirring talks were made by Mrs. Graham and Mr. Morris, superintendent of the McRae-Helena Public school. It was decided to invite Mrs. Cox Wall, of Eastman, district organizer to address the patrons of the two schools on Friday, December 3, when the organization will be completed.

Mrs. Edwin Strange, of Winder, sang beautifully "Pale Moon," an Indian love song, by Logan, and Mrs. Jack Comer, of Cordele, read "Eliminated Eggs," and "The Elocutioner."

The hostesses for the afternoon were: Mrs. Graham, Mrs. C. M. Tillman, Mrs. E. F. McRae and Mrs. Fred Smith.

Generous Gift.

A generous gift of $50 for the maintenance fund of Tallulah has been given by Mrs. Walter Armistead, of Crawford.

Mrs. Armistead is a valued member of Crawford Woman's club and also chairman of publicity of the club institute for the eighth district.

Her many friends among all Georgia clubwomen, as well as those in the eighth district, are rejoicing over her generosity and expressing great appreciation.

Eleventh District Will Award Cup For Best Exhibit

Waycross, Ga., December 11.—The Eleventh District Federation of Women's clubs, of which Mrs. E. D. Dimmock, of Waycross, is president, held its executive board meeting in Waycross and voted to award a handsome loving cup to the club in the district making the best exhibit for the year. In addition a gavel will be awarded to the club achieving the most outstanding piece of work for the year.

The board indorsed the establishment of the Annie Rambo library at the Alto sanitarium and reiterated its support for the Tallulah Falls school.

The state president, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, was present and made an interesting talk. Mrs. T. J. Darling, of Waycross, was elected second vice president for the district and will have charge of the programs for the district meetings.

Mrs. Tripp Heads Feltonian Club.

Mrs. E. O. Davis was hostess last week to the Feltonian Woman's club, of Taylorsville, when the following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. W. D. Tripp, Sr., president; Mrs. J. H. Jolley, vice president; Mrs. J. R. Harling, secretary; Mrs. A. R. Davis, treasurer; Mrs. E. O. Davis, publicity. Various committees reported progress in the work, notably the finance chairmen, who have promoted a tea, a sandwich sale and a birthday party, netting about $75 since the last meeting. The clubhouse fund is the chief beneficiary. The organization voted to give its quota to the Passie May Fenton Ottley fund at once. A box of magazines was ordered shipped to the prison farm at Milledgeville. After the business session Mrs. J. A. Walker, of Stilesboro, gave several beautiful musical selections and refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. L. W. Joller, Mrs. J. R. Harling and Miss Helen Jolley.

Mrs. A. E. Gilmore, of Tennille, who heads the Washington County federation, which is an important factor in the tenth district club activities.

Third Article By Mrs. Warthen On Budget And Insurance

The greatest impediment that women have to face in their club work is lack of funds. Ways and means have been a problem since the first meeting of the first club and still the need persists. So it behooves us to study the question of finances from the other side, that of handling the funds possessed. The budget is the best solution to this engima. By its aid we are able to use what we have to the very best advantage, paying our obligations and expending the balance where it will do the greatest possible good.

A club budget is started in exactly the same manner as the family budget and uses the same plan with the exception of the name of the savings column. A club is not a money-making venture so it does not work to merely save but for some particular thing as to increase the clubhouse fund or swimming pool fund. This system will show a club exactly how far she can go on her sure income and will stimulate an interest in raising money for proposed work.

Inventory of Property.

Take an inventory of club property and list income which may be derived therefrom and expenses in the way of taxes, interest, improvements, etc. Figure the amount of dues that is expected to be paid in and estimate revenue from other sources judging from past years taking into consideration an increased or decreased membership. Add to this amount the balance on hand. Now for disbursements. The first thing a club wishes to do is to pay her dues so that she will have the proper representation at conventions and be a self-respecting club in which its members can take pride. General and state dues for per capita clubs are 30 cents per and $3.50 for affiliated clubs. In most districts the fee is $1 a year.

All clubs, excepting of course, those who have paid in full, are liable for 75 cents per capita to be paid to the Ella F. White endowment. This amount may be paid at one time or in three payments if the club so desires.

Tallulah maintenance is apportioned by districts. The chairman will notify each club of the amount of its part.

Gifts to the student aid and economic scholarship funds are optional but should be included in every budget. A little study of the work that they are doing will convince one of their worth.

The local causes will vary in each case but let us make an example of a very simple plan. We will not make columns, for the expense items will not be so many as in the family. Suppose a clubhouse to be the big thing that the club is striving for. Then catalogue the cost of year books, material for musical and literary papers, scholarships, books for library, shrubs for grounds, rent, etc.

Model Club.

Our model club is in a small town and has 50 members. The tentative outline follows: Balance on hand, $28; dues ($3 per year) $150; revenue from carnival, bazar, etc., $350; total, $528.

Dues, $16; Ella F. White endowment, $37.50; Tallulah maintenance, $30; birthday for Tallulah (donations) student aid and economics, $10; headquarters, $2; total, $95.50, deducted, leaving amount available for local work, $432.50.

Expenditures—Year books and materials, $35; scholarship, $50; books for library, $25; community service, $40; rent, taxes, cleaning, $30; shower for Rambo library at Alto (donated), linens for hospital (donated), Christmas boxes to soldiers and sanitarium (donated) $180.00

For club house $252.50
Subscriptions 500.00

Total $752.00

Can you not see at once the value of having such a plan? Isn't it inspiring to feel that the general obligations can be met with a great deal left to finance worth-while local causes? And if there is a goal to reach does the work not become more interesting and important? Present such a plan to any club and see how quickly the members respond to its demands.

INEZ SMITH WARTHEN,
(Mrs. Ober D. Warthen)
Chairman Budget and Insurance, G. F. W. C.

Mrs. Horn's Junior Report Read At Second District Convention

Mrs. J. A. Horn, of Boston, junior chairmanship chairman for the second district, read the following report at the recent district convention held in Tifton, December 1:

What are you doing for your juniors? Are you fitting them for leadership, are you giving them a chance to work and play under your guidance?

As your chairman I have set for our goal a junior membership in every club in the second district that will equal the membership of the adult club by next April. As you understand, junior membership is just a branch of the senior club, under which the junior club is organized. The idea is to interest young girls and young women in club work and ideals in order that they may be trained to become active members in the future.

Federated Club.

Each junior club is a department of the federation club, or under the auspices of such a club. It therefore is considered as being included in the membership of the senior club, and should not be federated separately.

We once had junior civics clubs that were separate from the older clubs, so probably this present method has been chosen as a better plan. You will notice that the work is called junior membership, not junior clubs. Every community has its own peculiar problems, and must be governed accordingly.

Since my appointment in July as chairman of junior membership in the second district I have written each club president to appoint a junior membership committee.

Boston club has organized two groups, 12 in each group. One group of 12 to 16-year-olds, and the other from 16 to 20.

We also have a story hour every Saturday afternoon that takes care of the children up to 12 years old. Moultrie reports a story hour for the children also.

At Pavo the whole school is organized into a builders' club to cooperate with the woman's club in every way possible. Donalsonville has two junior clubs. The music-lovers' club enrolling 23, and Symphony club, 18.

In Thomas county we have 15 clubs organized by our county home demonstration agent, and they are cooperating with the clubs and the Thomas county federation. These clubs have 280 members as follows: Boston club, 23; Fredonia, 6; Merrellville, 7; Meigs, 16; Stanland, 20; Patten, 12; Coolidge, 17; Ochlochnee, 42; Summerhill, 6; Unity, 8; Pavo, 47; Barwick, 36; New Hope, 8; McIntyre, 13; Metcalf, 19.

Your chairman recommends that every individual club in the second district federation institute a junior membership to be operated under the four following divisions, with a chairman or director for each division.

Mrs. J. A. Horn, junior membership chairman for the second district.

Mrs. Meadows Issues Rules for District.

Cairo Woman's Club Hears Reports On Public Welfare

Mrs. G. T. Hardy, president of the Cairo Woman's club, opened the December meeting, which was held in the home of Mrs. Kader Powell, by hearing reports from the six standing committees. Mrs. Weathers, of the educational department reported "The World Book" added to the school library. Mrs. R. R. Vanlandingham, of the public welfare department, stated that 400 children had been given the antitoxin for diphtheria, and that a magazine on health had been placed in the school library.

Reports were heard from committees appointed to make plans for the country store whereby a sum for the clubhouse is to be secured. The chairman of soliciting committee read the list of all business firms who had contributed. Chairman of the arrangement committee reported that on Tuesday the general merchandise could be arranged in the Cairo, Ga., club rooms. Publicity chairman reported 1,500 hand bills and 25 large placards printed, also that an announcement had been placed in the Cairo Messenger for the past three weeks. Reports were also heard from entertainment, package and ticket committees, and a refreshment and a decorating committee appointed.

Mrs. Eugene Clowr made an interesting report on the district woman's club meeting held in Tifton. Special stress was placed on the S. F. White endowment fund. Mrs. Hardy asked that the members of the club consider this and stated that at the January meeting it would be decided how this fund should be paid.

The following were welcomed as new members: Mesdames J. R. Woodward, W. A. Tyson, J. M. Jones.

The program subject was "Ethics of Family Life." Mrs. Lucile Bateman presented a talk on "Understanding Our Children." Mrs. J. J. Gainey and Mrs. Irma Beale gave a piano duet which was followed by a talk on "Recreation, Outdoor and Indoor," by Mrs. W. H. Duckworth. A reading by Miss Mariwilburn Weathers concluded the program.

Mrs. Palmour Issues Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president of fifth district of the Georgia federation, desires to thank, through the official club page columns, those who so loyally and faithfully assisted the fifth district in the celebration of Arbor day, December 3, at the state capitol at the time a tree was planted in Governor Walker's honor.

Clubwomen realize that the press is the strongest friend of federation work.

Norcross Woman's Club Meets With Mrs. T. D. McDaniel

The monthly meeting of the Norcross Woman's club, with Mrs. H. H. Miller presiding, was held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. T. D. McDaniel, who was assisted in entertaining by her daughter, Mrs. Ivan Humphries.

The library committee with Miss Lola Key, chairman, reported an increased amount of money added to the fund by the floral committee, to be added to the fund to build a retaining wall on the public library grounds. Mrs. William Keady raised this amount by sponsoring a doughnut sale.

The program committee chairman, Mrs. O'Kelly, of fine arts, and Mrs. H. V. Jones, chairman of crafts committee, gave a very instructive and interesting program educationally emphasizing the great need of a higher conception of art by our American people. Mrs. O'Kelly read a wonderful paper by Mrs. Samuel Inman, former general federation chairman of fine arts, on "The Art Association of Atlanta," and the magnificent donation given by Mrs. J. M. High to this association and the art treasures already placed in this building. Mrs. Lorenzo Ewing rendered two vocal solos with accompaniments. Twenty-four phonograph records have been sent to the tubercular ward of the state prison farm at Milledgeville.

Monroe Woman's Club Sponsors Silver Tea.

A silver tea, sponsored by the Monroe Woman's club, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Nunnally, on Walton Heights, was given for the benefit of the Walton County hospital.

The Monroe High School orchestra rendered a musical program, and over 100 friends of the hospital called, and quite a substantial sum was realized, aside from many donations of flat silver and tableware.

Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis, the efficient president of the club, and members of the Public Welfare department expressed pleasure over the success of the occasion, and grateful appreciation to those who had helped to make it so.

A membership drive for the club is planned for January, and committees have already been named.

Plans for the planting of memorial drive in memory of world war and civil war veterans are well under way. An intensive study of parliamentary law is being conducted by Mrs. C. M. Sanders.

Hartwell Woman's Club Observes Arbor Day.

Arbor day was celebrated in Hartwell by a tree planting, and appropriate exercises, under auspices of the eighth district division of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, on the grounds of the Hartwell High school.

The tree was a native holly and was planted in honor of Governor Clifford Walker, who during his administration, created the state department of forestry.

Mrs. P. P. Harrison was in charge of the tree planting. Mrs. W. L. Hodges, as master of ceremonies, delivered an address honoring the governor of Georgia.

The school children in response gave three cheers for Governor and Mrs. Walker, for the Hartwell High school and for the forestry committee, composed of Mrs. P. P. Harrison, chairman; Mrs. C. E. Matheson, Mrs. W. L. Hodges.

Eleventh District Executive Board Meets in Waycross

The calender of the Eleventh District Federation of Women's Clubs carried an interesting event in the meeting of the executive board held in Waycross at the parish house of Grace Episcopal church.

It was a representative gathering of clubwomen from all sections of the district that were greeted by Mrs. E. D. Dimmock, president of the district, when she called the meeting to order last Friday morning. Certainly Mrs. Dimmock cannot think of this meeting and the loyal support so generously given her throughout the district without feeling something of personal and district pride.

Out of this, the first board meeting of the year, and the chairmen and officers present with their plans and their hopes, came a great deal that was worthwhile and will be passed along to the clubs throughout the district. "This we should do, that we should do," was a popular note expressed with much courage and faith that the things outlined for feasible and possible, and much constructive work is expected to be done that will make this year the greatest the eleventh district has ever had.

Mrs. Brantley Attends.

The presence of Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Blackshear, lent additional interest to the meeting, and her sound and constructive advice gave balance and encouragement to the proceedings.

The president's report was an interesting feature and carried many constructive suggestions.

The loving cup awarded last year for the best club exhibit, and won by the Woman's club, of Brunswick, is offered again this year, and clubs are urged to prepare posters for this contest.

Another contest centering the interest of the clubs is that in which a gavel is to be awarded to the club achieving the most outstanding piece of work during the year. The committee will not make its award by measuring the work from standpoint of dollars and cents but from the value of some accomplishment of a human interest nature.

The board gave its endorsement to the plan of the federation to establish the Annie Rambo library at the Alto State sanatorium by which the sick people may be supplied with books of fiction, travel and romance.

It was requested that the clubs of the district respond to the call of the Tallullah Falls school for long leaf yellow pine needles. The needles are used by the students in making novelties and Tallullah is depending upon the south Georgia clubs for its supply of this material.

Mrs. Darling Elected.

The unanimous election of Mrs. T. J. Darling as second vice president will be of pleasing interest to the clubs throughout the district as well as over the state. Mrs. Darling will bring to her work great ability and talent.

Mrs. Brantley, state president, paid a deserved tribute to T. J. Darling, Waycross, for the valuable aid given in the Tallullah school construction program last year. Mrs. Brantley expressed the affection of the entire federation for Mr. Darling.

The only money raised from the floor at the board meeting was to cover a deficit in the amount due by the district to the Tallullah maintenance fund. The clubs represented at the meeting contributed the amount necessary to cover the deficit.

An interesting incident was the presentation of Mrs. J. H. Redding as dean of clubwomen in south Georgia. Mrs. Redding is a woman of high courage and purpose, with a faith in God as pure and untroubled as that of a child. Gentle and lovable, soft to every appeal of kindness and charity, she is greatly beloved by hosts of friends throughout the state. She is the mother of the Georgians and has held the office of president until recently.

Social Side.

There was a delightful social side to the meeting relieving the seriousness of the business session. The Georgians entertained the visitors at a 1 o'clock luncheon. The serving committee included Mrs. T. J. Darling, president; Mrs. W. W. Shape, Mrs. G. P. Folks, Mrs. D. Salisbury, Mrs. F. A. Bates and Mrs. J. E. Vann. Those leaving on late trains in the evening were entertained at dinner at the New Willard hotel by the health league, of which Mrs. Harry D. Reed is the president. At the invitation of Mrs. A. M. Litch, of the drama league, the visitors were entertained at a play presented by the league during the evening.

Among those in attendance were: Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Blackshear; Mrs. E. D. Dimmock, Wayeross; Mrs. G. V. Cates, Brunswick; Mrs. J. M. Dent, Douglas; Mrs. H. A. Stallings, Waycross; Mrs. Albert Tidwell, Quitman; Mrs. J. G. Steinheimer, Waycross; Mrs. L. H. Jenkins, Alma; Mrs. J. E. Dyal, Baxley; Mrs. Oscar Lott, Waycross; Mrs. B. W. Gray, Douglas; Mrs. B. O. Quillian, Willacoochee; Mrs. J. P. Highsmith, Baxley; Mrs. Walton Purdom, Waycross; Mrs. R. G. Dickerson, Homerville; Mrs. B. H. Minchew, Waycross; Mrs. Fred Brewer, Douglas, Mrs. A. B. Sheffield, Quitman; Mrs. C. R. Hawk, Valdosta; Mrs. H. D. Reed, Waycross; Mrs. T. A. Clark, Douglas; Mrs. Jones, Alma; Mrs. B. D. Brantley, Blackshear; Mrs. T. J. Darling, Waycross; Mrs. A. M. Litch, Waycross; Mrs. Ed Jarman, Baxley; Mrs. A. L. Drawdy, Homerville; Mrs. W. G. Wooten, Homerville.

Covington Woman's Club Indorses Mrs. Inman.

Mrs. S. M. Inman, of Atlanta, was indorsed as an officer in the General Federation of Women's Clubs by the Covington Woman's club on December 7. At the close of the business session Miss Myrtle Estes, violinist, and Miss Evelyn Estes, pianist, rendered a beautiful musical selection.

Little Marjorie Cook, talented young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cook, gave an excellent reading, "If Mother Liked Play." Refreshments were served by the hostesses of the afternoon, Mrs. Fred Jackson, Mrs. J. N. Leonard, Mrs. R. M. Mobley and Mrs. Wilson Biggers.

Mrs. C. A. Sockwell presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. S. L. Wattes.

A note was read from Mrs. T. T. Stevens, of Atlanta, acknowledging the receipt of $20 sent for the Tallulah Falls school. The treasurer reported $136 from the bazar which was held last Thursday and Friday, with more yet to come in.

The civic committee reported beautifying the plot of ground in front of the postoffice. It was voted to accept the offer of Mrs. LaRue C. Laubaugh, of Norfolk, Va., formerly Miss Vera Keller, of Covington, to put on a play in the early part of 1927.

The library committee reported $4 from the book pay table and a donation of books from Mrs. N. S. Turner and G. C. Adams for which they were given a vote of thanks.

Note of condolence is to be sent to Mrs. W. S. Cook. Two new members, Mrs. Joseph Siegel and Mrs. Henry Anderson, were given a cordial welcome into the club. Mrs. Emory Cook was elected to membership.

Monday, December 13, has been set aside as clean up week which will last through Friday, 17th, preparatory for the Christmas festivities.

Arbor Day Observed By Millen Club.

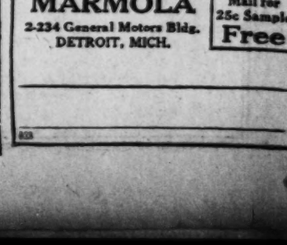

Friday, December 3, Arbor day, was fittingly observed by the Millen Woman's club. In full accord with the state federation, plans were made by the club and carried out under the direction of the cemetery committee —Mrs. C. B. Landrum and Mrs. G. C. Dekle.

The most impressive feature of the program was the planting of three memorial trees. The first of these, as in the state plan, was named in honor of Governor Clifford Walker, during whose administration the forestry law was passed; the second for Governor-elect Hardman, and the third was for the beloved Fred A. Brinson, superintendent of Millen High school, whose full cooperation and valuable assistance in all worthwhile undertakings has contributed so largely to its success.

In addition to the live oaks used for the memorial trees, six others and 75 crepe myrtles were planted on the driveway toward the cemetery.

The Arbor day program was held at the high school auditorium. Several appropriate readings were given. "My Georgia Land," the state federation song, was sung by a group of high school girls. Mrs. Hendrix Brinson, in a few well-chosen words, told of the origin and purpose of Arbor day. She stressed especially the thought "A nation that saves its trees saves itself."

Joyce Kilmer's beautiful poem, "Trees," set to music, was sung by Mrs. Dean Brinson. The trees were planted under the supervision of the committee.

E. Rivers P.-T. A. Hears Dr. Funkhouser.

In Dr. Funkhouser's talk before the mothers of the E. Rivers P.-T. A. at the meeting for December he gave a number of vital facts concerning young children as found out from a physician's standpoint. From his advice one would conclude that about the finest way to celebrate the birthday of the child is to have him thoroughly examined both physically and mentally.

He indorsed the diet kitchen in the school for keeping children well, rather than for the purpose of making money to buy less significant material things for a school. He also told of an evident need in Atlanta for a child's guidance clinic to keep youth mentally up to par, thereby robbing the criminal court of much overwork and adding much to the general happiness. The largest attendance of the year heard Dr. Funkhouser.

Mrs. H. G. Jacobs, president, urged the P.-T. A. to work together to put the diet kitchen in good condition as the time and money of parents is better spent for the proper nourishment of pupils than in monthly "doctor's, dentist's and druggist's bills." She also recommended that all mothers cooperate in getting out the P.-T. A. cookbook to be published by the home service department of the Georgia branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

A number of mothers commended "Children" magazine as a typical P.-T. A. voice of publication. "The Community Builder," a publication by the Covenant Presbyterian church, Peachtree road, was handed out to those present, as it contained many questions and problems of interest to the E. Rivers section.

A splendid framed photograph of E. Rivers, "The Good Friend" of the school, was raised in presentation and hung in the hall of the main building.

State Chairman of Children's Reading Issues Timely Article

Mrs. W. P. Martin, of Gainesville, Ga., who is state chairman of children's reading for the Georgia branch, P.-T. A. issues the following article on this worthwhile subject:

"Christmas is almost here. What is the P.-T. A., the mother of the schools of Georgia, preparing as a love gift for the children of our schools for this happy season of the year? What objective has the P.-T. A.'s for the children of our state? May we not suggest that the most valuable, the most far-reaching gift that could be made, a bookshelf filled with the best selected books for each grade of our grammar schools. These books to be placed in the individual classrooms and kept there for the use of the pupils during school hours. Daily contact with these books will make toward the greatest character building.

"The child is influenced more by the contact in books than with the contact with other daily companions. The pupils of these grades are eager to read, hungry for books, many from homes without books, all willing to concentrate and finish their studies in order to have some time to spend with a delightful book. If this project is put on foot with pupils from the first grade through the seventh grade, the number of books they are exposed to during these grades will make a splendid background for the real literature of the high school. There will be an appreciation of the best author, contact with the world and its heroes, a love for nature and her wonders, and a broader knowledge of the world of today, will be some of the results of the relation of these books with school work.

"You may wonder why the library is not so effective. Because the child cannot spend the time of getting the book and returning it. The time spent in getting the book from the library could be utilized in the room. Visit your school and see how handicapped your teachers and pupils are for books. Remember that what a child reads when he is young and tender, the impressions last through life. This is a practical and a feasible plan, to get before our children the very best books and give them a taste of worthwhile reading. If they read the right books now they will form the habit of good literature and keep it up.

"One good book well read is worth a dozen of some of the useless books that flood the news stands of today. We want the best books, written by the best authors, put before each grade of our grammar schools, and suited to the needs of each grade.

"A list of books is being sent out to the organizations of our state. All district chairmen of children's reading have not been appointed, but we are striving to get in touch with these chairmen, in order that they may satisfactorily help out in the district work. This list that is being sent out to you will be known as our state P.-T. A. list of children's reading. It has taken years of reading, experience, and research from the best authorities, the best librarians, in our state and nation and the best publishers to compile this list. Forty books for each grade from the pre-school through the grammar grades and through the high school will be submitted. A choice of 15 of these will be marked. We must acknowledge our appreciation of Miss Cox, librarian of children's reading, Carnegie library, of Atlanta, for making it possible to submit this list to you. The title, the publisher, and the price will be listed, nothing for your organization but to order the books and play Santa to your children in the schoolroom where they spend most of their time. Then we cannot forget the high school libraries. They need books and current magazines and need them badly. If we do not provide books for our children they will provide for themselves in time. Today the majority of our criminals are under 20 years of age. Only last week a chap was arrested for daring robberies he had done. When apprehended in his room stocks of cheap novels with their vile characters, horrid tales of murder and sickening deeds of the underworld. This chap came from a good home but his mind had been poisoned by this foul literature. We must give boys and girls good books and continue through high school, just as essential as companions. We are making this appeal to the presidents of our P.-T. A.'s, to the mothers who are members of this organization, and to those who are interested in child welfare, that you get behind this movement and let's make a progressive step at once for our children. They are the wealth of our state. The greatest wealth that we possess. Let's be as busy culturing them as we have been about our natural wealth.

"May we not take this for our objective, and use the slogan, 'A Bookshelf for Every Grammar Grade and More Selected and Suitable Books for Our High Schools.'"

Mr. Sutton's theme for the evening was, "We Think More in Terms of Things Than of People."

Mr. Sutton emphasized two points for the parent to consider in his efforts for his child. First, give the child the opportunity to develop physically, mentally, morally and socially. Let him do things for himself and grapple with his own problems. Second, what we call real scholarship—"Master it." Master the thing which has mastered you.

Mrs. Brown, chairman of the Junior Red Cross committee, reported that Tenth street had made 100 per cent in Red Cross membership, had won second prize in the tinfoil contest, had received two books from Mrs. Elsas as a prize for making the best record in Junior Red Cross work for 1925-26, had taken 33 orphans as guests to the matinee, sponsored by the Junior Red Cross, sent 184 boxes oversea, sent one large box of toys to Red Cross headquarters, and is now selling Christmas cards sent from Austria for the Red Cross.

Evening Meeting.

The speaker at the evening meeting was the state president, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, who gave an interesting talk on the "Value of the P.-T. A.'s in the Junior High Schools." "The object of the P.-T. A.," she said, "is to help ourselves to help our children. The P.-T. A. should be four-square just as the home is. The most important part of the whole organization is the class mothers. Upon them depends the success of the whole P.-T. A., for they must supply the audience. Every one should attend the meetings, every one is needed in the P.-T. A. as moral support for the president. The P.-T. A. is the only neutral ground in the whole city. The only place where some mothers can get any social life, meet other mothers, and get inspiration to improve their homes. It is the place for parents to become acquainted with their child's teachers and this is a duty they should not neglect. They should also become familiar with the curriculum of the school and the new ways of doing things."

S. M. Hastings, principal, announced that the annual school minstrel show would be held Wednesday evening, December 15, at Eggleston Memorial hall. He also announced that O'Keefe had again won the football championship. Muse and Amuse.

The Psalmist said: "While I was musing the fire burned." Musing—meditating—absorbed in thought—causing a fire to burn from within. Doesn't it make us want to pause for a moment and take stock of ourselves. "While I was musing the fire burned!" Visualize David as he mused, and we have those marvelous Psalms. Think of John Bunyan, as he mused in the prison and gave to the world "The Pilgrim's Progress."

But today instead of musing, it is amuse. Even the tiny children are studying with a view to finding what will best amuse them. What does amuse mean? First of all it is the opposite of muse. It is to distract, to divert, to delude, and so today we are rushing from one place to another to be distracted, diverted and deluded and to be prevented from musing.

Amusement is an outer force that attacks us, while musing is an inner force that fortifies and strengthens us. Shall the fire burn, that fire kindled by the Holy Spirit and kept glowing in the heart by constant musing, or shall we go the way of the multitude, drifting with the tide, being amused?

God grant that we may get down on our knees to pray for the restoration in our hearts as Christians of that lost art of musing.

MRS. A. G. SULLIVAN.

Donation Enables Church Building To Be Completed

If it were not for churches and and schools, the city of Atlanta (and all the other cities of the civilized world) would have to "shut up shop." Nobody would live in a place where there were no churches. So much do the English stress the importance of this, that no city no matter how many hundreds of thousands of inhabitants it might possess, calls a city a "city" unless it has a cathedral, while on the other hand, a mere hamlet possessing one is promoted to the title of "city." Atlanta is proud of her hotels and schools and her churches. It is not expected that the latter will be built as rapidly as either of the two former, because many folks are inclined to think anything good enough for the Lord, and give as an excuse for not doing their duty toward the building of a new one, that they don't believe in fine church buildings when so much poverty and distress confront us at our very doors. These same people would immediately sidetrack any offer to take up a collection for home missions. The poor we have always with us, and always shall, but who has the temerity to say that anything is too fine for the Lord who has given us everything we possess and without whom we would be less than nothing?

However, circumstances totally unforseen and most unusual arose to prevent the immediate completion of the new handsome structure of the Peachtree Christian church at the intersection of Peachtree and Spring. Everyone interested had given until they saw no prospect of being able to do anything further (or so they thought).

It remained for one man to step forward and say that he would give $150,000 to complete the structure and later install the finest imported tubular chimes at an added cost of $50,000 if the members of the congregation would give another $50,000 more to show their interest and good faith. Monday morning over $30,000 in signed notes was deposited in a local bank. These will fall due in May and again six months later. This means that no mere "scraps of paper" will be on hand, as usually occurs in pledges given for anything, for it will be as much a matter of business to meet and pay the notes as it is when one is erecting a private home. The materials have been ordered, the contract let, and work will proceed immediately. Of course, all this is nothing new, things of this sort have been done before and will be again, i. e. building a church with its attendant difficutlies, but this is the interesting part of this narrative.

The Disciples of Christ, or Christians as they are better known, are over one hundred years old, and among them, of course, are men worth millions, but this is the largest sum of money given by one man in all of their history, and they have grown to rank fifth in the place of the various communions of the world. This is another feather in the cap of Atlanta, although the donor is a native Kentuckian, but a long since adopted Georgian. This church when completed will be one of the most beautiful and modern of any in the city, and will stand a thousand years hence as a living monument to the man whose generosity made it possible and except for whom its completion would have necessarily been retarded. What finer monument could any man have than one of stone whose spire will point heavenward and whose chimes will convey to the hearts of countless thousands every Sunday morning "Peace on earth, good will to men."

Baptist Schools Hold Rally Day For Orphans' Home

Today, December 12, is rally day in the Sunday schools to be observed in behalf of the Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home at Hapeville, Ga. Mrs. George Westmoreland, president of the board of trustees for the home, says the need for a generous response in the way of gifts at this season is exceedingly great.

The home at present is crowded to its capacity, housing, feeding and clothing 328 children. There are still a number of applications on the waiting list of God's own little ones that cannot now be taken under the care of the home. The trustees met during the past week and it was sorely regretted that Mrs. H. D. Cornell and Mrs. T. T. Short were absent on account of continued illness.

Episcopal Women Hear Clear Call To Rededication

A clear call to rededication of ourselves for a closer walk with Jesus Christ resounded throughout the eighth synod of the Province of Sewanee, which met recently in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Jacksonville, Fla., November 16, 17 and 18.

The keynote was sounded by the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, bishop of east Carolina, who conducted the first service, followed by a quiet hour at 4 o'clock on Tuesday. Each speaker in turn took the same high ground of a renewed endeavor and for the woman's auxiliary this was especially emphasized by Miss Margaret Weed, president of the province, in her address of welcome Tuesday evening, and by Miss Grace Lindley, national secretary, when she addressed the auxiliary in its first assemblage Wednesday morning. All urged a more articulate expression of the Christ within.

Auxiliary Meeting.

Miss Weed, of Jacksonville, presided over the auxiliary meetings and each officer as well as delegate presented a most satisfactory account of her stewardship. A report from the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Thomas W. Bickett, North Carolina, showed that more than a thousand dollars remained in the treasury at the end of the national tri-ennium in New Orleans, and would be applied on the new program of work.

Reports from the various diocesan branches revealed that most of them are following the five fields of service.

Mrs. Wilson, president of the diocese of Alabama, mentioned a courageous step taken by the auxiliary in trying to form a plan of cooperation with the guilds several years ago. The plan had proved successful and the two branches were working in increasingly closer harmony.

Mrs. Henry Davis, diocesan president from Atlanta, reported the completion of the bishop's fund and other apportionments, while the corporate gift, which was to supply needs in Liberia, the Philippines, Alaska and the Canal Zone, was well under way.

The provincial secretary of the united thank offering fund gave special emphasis to the fact that this fund represented the gifts of almost every woman in the province and spoke of the effort now being made to interest the younger women of the church in this great missionary fund.

Inter-Racial Work.

In upper South Carolina rural and inter-racial work are being stressed, according to the delegate's report. Loan libraries supplied where the need is greatest and a loan fund for the education of under-privileged girls is in the process of formation.

The training school for colored nurses at St. Augustine's, Raleigh, N. C., was declared by Miss Lindley to be one of the finest efforts of the province which along all lines, she assured the women, was doing splendid and notable work.

Space does not permit of a detailed report of the many phases of work accomplished by the woman's auxiliary in the numerous dioceses throughout the province of Sewanee, but they are of such a character as cannot but leave their impress upon every community in which they are carried on, as well as upon the life of every woman engaged in this service of Jesus Christ.

MRS. FRANK WOODRUFF.

Briefly Told

Minutes of the annual meeting of Atlanta Baptist Woman's Missionary Union, which was held with the Kirkwood W. M. S., have come from the press and are available through the district secretaries. Mrs. Thomas Jeffries, recording secretary; Mrs. W. M. Jones, superintendent; Mrs. John Thompson, assistant superintendent, are responsible for this fine piece of work.

Meetings of district rallies of B. W. M. U. are beginning earlier this year than usual. The fifth district rally was at West End church, on Tuesday, December 7, presided over by Mrs. W. H. Dorsey.

The seventh district rally was held at Grant Park church Friday, December 10, Mrs. P. S. Paschal, secretary, presiding.

Mrs. C. M. Terry, Y. W. A. superintendent of Atlanta B. W. M. U., called a conference of Y. W. A. leaders at the Henry Grady hotel on December 7. Apportionment cards for 1927 budget were distributed.

Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist W. M. S. were fortunate in having Miss Julian R. Allen, state young people's leader, as the chief speaker on the week of prayer program Wednesday, December 8. Mrs. R. D. Webb arranged the programs and presided at the meetings.

The host of friends of Mrs. Henry B. Sacre will be sorry to learn that she is at St. Joseph's infirmary, having recently undergone an operation for appendicitis. Mrs. Sacre and her husband are the guiding stars of the Christian Endeavor society of the Peachtree Christian church, and the success and strength of this fine band of young folks is mostly due to their efficient leadership.

The Woman's Society of the Peachtree Christian Church have been holding a bazar for the past two weeks in the Alfriend building. They have worked hard to make it a success as they will install a handsome pipe organ in their new church. The "piece de resistance" of this bazar has been a sermon of their minister, Dr. L. O. Bricker, "The Voice of the Deep," bound and autographed, with a photograph of Dr. Bricker in the front for the small sum of half a dollar. The many who constantly request copies ofs Dr. Bricker's various sermons (which he never writes out fully, using only notes) will now have the opportunity for which they have longed, to possess in concrete form something which they have long desired.

Complete Quota for Bennett Memorial

The women of the Calvary Methodist church held an all-day meeting on Tuesday of the past week and completed the work for the year with their quota for the Bennett Memorial and every other fund overpaid. A remarkable year's work has been done by the 94 women composing this very live organization led by Mrs. Roland Bryce, the president.

The name of the society will be one of those in the North Georgia conference to be recorded on the Book of Remembrance in the new Bennett Memorial building on the campus of Scarritt college in Nashville, Tenn., for having contributed a sum amounting to $5 per capita to the building fund.

Rev. Felton Wililams is pastor of the church and is seen in the photograph. The president, Mrs. Bryce, is seated in the center on the first row.

Baptist Circles Hold Meetings

The Woman's Missionary society of South Side Baptist church held a social on November 29, at which time, after some business was transacted, a social hour was spent and refreshments were served. This society is growing rapidly, having almost doubled during the past year due to the earnest work of the past president, Mrs. L. L. Hinderbrand, and Mrs. J. W. Harper, who is now president. All the members are earnest, ready for service at all times.

The regular business meeting of the Woman's Missionary union of the Third Baptist church was held at the church on Monday. Mrs. J. T. Bowles, president, presiding.

Following the devotional, Mrs Bowles made a splendid talk on the Georgia Baptist W. M. U. convention she attended in Gainesville, Ga., last month. She urged more regular Bible readers and tithers.

All circles, home department chairman and R. A's. made splendid reports. Mrs. L. O. Laney, sunbeam leader, announced the Sunbeams were going to have their annual Christmas tree and would have as their guests some orphan children. The bazaar committee also made a good report.

It was voted unanimously to have a mission study in each circle once a month. The president announced that on the following Thursday a day of prayer for foreign missions would be observed at the church. Closing prayer by Mrs. Bowles.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Unadilla Baptist church observed the week of prayer for world-wide missions three days this week. Most spiritual and uplifting talks were given each day.

The subject for Monday was "Returning the Light to Europe" and the holy land, and the program was given by the George Shepherd circle and was led by Mrs. Hollis Graham.

"Light in Darkest Africa" was given by the Ella Bridges circle Tuesday, led by Mrs. G. N. Vinson. Mrs. Ella Bridges gave a talk on "Light Through African Baptists," and Mrs. Jemmerson on a talk on "Training Torch Bearers." "Light in the Far East" was the subject for Wednesday by Fannie E. Heck circle. Many interesting talks were made: Mrs. J. W. Saunders, Mrs. A. R. Ware, Mrs. L. O. Wooten and Mrs. J. W. Broxton being the speakers. A splendid offering was taken.

This society elected the following officers for the year: Mrs. W. T. Spradley, president; Mrs. J. W. Saunders, first vice president; Mrs Ida Leggett, second vice president; Mrs. Hollis Graham, secretary, and Mrs. H. Hamrick, treasurer.

The circles of the Woman's Missionary society of the Cascade Avenue Baptist church, met on Monday afternoon, November 22, as follows: Circle No. 1, at the home of Mrs. Bonnar on Montreat avenue; circle No. 2, at the home of Mrs. Penn on Gaston street. The president, Mrs. Culberson, attended each of the meetings.

Plans for the coming year were discussed, particularly the requirements of the standard of excellence cards. Circle No. 1 pledged the required amount for the year, both for missions and personal service.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Oakhurst Baptist church observed the day of prayer of foreign missions last Wednesday at the church, the president, Mrs. E. V. Deaton, having charge; the morning devotional was led by Mrs. E. Jackson.

The subject for the day was "Giving the Light." The G. A.'s had charge of the afternoon service, and rendered a very pretty play, showing the strong chain binding the different organizations of the W. M. U.

The evening service in charge of the business woman's circle, assisted by the R. A., was very entertaining; the young people put on a program called "Out of the Darkness Into the Light." There was a very pretty poster, representing star-light, each star being lighted as the Y. W. A. took part on the program.

At the end of the program, the Lottie Moon Christmas offering was taken

Fidelis Class Banquet At Inman Park Church.

The Fidelis class gave a banquet Tuesday at the Inman Park Baptist church. The banquet tables were decorated in the Christmas colors. The central table had as its center decoration a beautiful white cake with red tapers arranged on it as a cross. On either side of the cake was a candlestick holding a red lighted candle. As center decoration of other tables were white birthday cakes honoring birthdays in the class.

The new officers for the coming six months were elected as follows: Teacher, Mrs. W. T. Rhodes; associate teacher, Dr. Hal Davison; president, Mrs. P. D. Cunningham; first vice president, Mrs. C. E. Travis; second vice president, Mrs. H. L. Black; third vice president, Mrs. Bessie Hatcher; secretary, Miss Janibel Poole; corresponding secretary, Miss Leora Logue; treasurer, Miss Mamie Stynchcombe; pianist, Miss Ruth Sparks; reporter, Mrs. Ben F. Walker; menu chairman, Mrs. J. D. McCurdy; personal service chairman, Mrs. C. B. Tuggle; flower chairman, Mrs. Sturgis.

Mrs. H. K. Ramsey will entertain the old and new officers Monday evening at her home on Wieuca road.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. GRIMES

Central Congregational church has lost a faithful member and worker in the passing on December 1 of Mrs. Edwin L. Grimes, at her home on Vedado way. She attended church the previous Sunday, and was apparently in her usual health, meeting her friends with pleasant words and cordial handclasp, for one could always be sure of a hearty, cheerful greeting from Mrs. Grimes. She has held the office of deaconess in the church for several years, and for three years has been an efficient president of the Women's union, her term expiring with this month of December.

Although not in the best health, she was always in her chair, guiding the proceedings of the meeting with steady hand, interested and ready to hear both sides of any question that might arise and giving wise and calm decisions. The doors of her home were always ready to open for her friends, whether they came for conference or for larger meetings of the women. Mrs. Grimes was much interested in the work of the federation of church women and attended the board meetings when able. She will be deeply missed by her husband, for their only child died when very young, and the home existed for herself and her husband. And the memory of her strong and wise leadership will be an inspiration to those who are left to carry on the work she has laid down.

MRS. D. I. CARSON.

Emory W. C. T. U. Holds Meeting.

The Emory W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. Cox Friday. The program was in charge of Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, the subject being "International Peace." The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Comer Woodward. Pleasing features of the program were a recitation, "Three Thousand Miles of Borderland," by Ruth Cox, and "The Story of the Christ of the Andes," by Marguerite Rhodes.

Mrs. W. B. Baker told of "The Plan of Work for the Peace and Arbitration Department of the National W. C. T. U." Mrs. C. T. Brown read a leaflet, "The Logical Relation of the W. C. T. U. to International Peace." The members were reminded of the remembrance of Golden Rule Sunday.

A committee was appointed to plan a party for the W. C. T. U. and the foreign students of Emory during the holidays.

Hapeville League To Present Play.

"The Path Across the Hill," a comedy-drama in three acts, will be presented by the Hapeville Epworth league Saturday evening, December 18, at 7:30 o'clock in the Morrow school building, Morrow, Ga. This play is given for the benefit of Morrow school.

The Passing of Mrs. C. W. King

The Baptist women of Georgia were seated in the convention hall at Gainesville, witnessing one of the most representative meetings of women's activities ever held in the state, when an ominous silence was felt and a whisper was heard, "Mrs. King has passed." An unbroken wave of love and sympathy was wafted to Kentucky from Georgia.

"The heart feels most when the lips move not," Georgia felt that her once faithful representative was now one of the innumerable throng; Atlanta was deeply conscious of the loss of one of her best and most loyal workers.

Coming a stranger to the city from her beloved home, Kentucky, Mrs. King united with the Capitol Avenue Baptist church and was faithful amid sunshine and shadows. She was firm and unshaken in her trust in God and her loyalty to her church. When called to the superintendency of the W. B. M. U. of the Atlanta association, it was then her real qualities of a Christian leader were demonstrated; her mind and heart reached out to the demote, rural churches and societies. All felt they had a sympathetic friend in their superintendent as an executive her meetings were on time and reports full and comprehensive.

When failing health moved her physician to suggest a resignation, she declined, saying, "There were yet other plans to be accomplished." God in His wisdom did not permit the full fruition of her hopes, but who knows what awaits in that home beyond? Here one lays the foundation, another builds thereon. The influence of her good works will be felt through the coming generation and while Georgia weeps with Kentucky and extends heartfelt sympathy to the relatives and friends she would have them feel that Mrs. King's coming to Atlanta has been a blessing and a benediction to the Baptists of this fast-growing metropolis of the south.

MRS. T. L. LEWIS.

Missionary Society Installs Officers.

The installation of the new officers of the Park Street W. M. S. took place Monday afternoon, December 6.

The meeting was called to order at 3 o'clock by the president, Mrs. D. M. Therrell. An inspiring devotional on missions was given by the new minister, Rev. Marvin Franklin.

After the general business of the meeting was dispensed with the following officers were duly installed by Mrs. J. C. White, district secretary of the South Atlanta district: President, Mrs. D. M. Therrell; vice president, Mrs. Arthur Hale; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Montague; recording secretary, Mrs. R. J. Williams; treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Montgomery; superintendent of young people, Mrs. E. E. Aiken; superintendent of juniors, Mrs. C. C. Berry; superintendent of babies, Mrs. O. A. Harpless; superintendent of social service, Mrs. J. H. Merritt; superintendent of supplies, Mrs. O. T. Camp.

Judge Watkins Speaks To Missionary Society.

The East Point Church Street Methodist Missionary society met Monday afternoon in business session and was called to order by Mrs. J. T. McGee, chairman of social service.

The pastor, the Rev. E. W. Jones, conducted a short devotional service, after which Judge Garland Watkins, of the juvenile court, was introduced and addressed the assembly on "The Youth of Today."

The business hour was a full one and many knotty problems in the work were discussed and disposed of satisfactorily.

Mrs. O. C. Simmons was elected chairman of the Fannie Harrison circle and Mrs. D. G. Jones chairman of the Evie Trimble circle.

Mrs. J. W. Langley was elected treasurer and Mrs. J. D. Campbell was elected chairman of social service.

Georgia Baptist W. M. U. Executive Board Meets

The first meeting of the executive board of the Georgia Baptist Woman's Missionary union for the new conventional year, was held on December 8, in headquarters office, Palmer building, and was well attended by local members. Out-of-town members present were Mrs. Neel, Cartersville, president; Mrs. J. C. Lanier, West Point, vice president, also trustee of Woman's Missionary Union Training school, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Ben Thompson, Madison, vice president east central division; Mrs. Paul Jones, of Canton, vice president of north central division; Mrs. Gordon Singleton, newly elected local member of the board, was also present.

Plans were made for the annual meeting of the executive board to be held in Atlanta on January 4, at 9 o'clock (place to be given later), at which meeting every officer and member is expected to be present. Reports from all officers were very encouraging.

Mrs. Janie Cree Bose, principal of Baptist Woman's Missionary Training school, in Louisville, Ky., with Mrs. J. C. Lanier, will visit several Georgia Baptist colleges in February.

Miss Julia Allen, Young People's leader and college secretary, by request, assistd Dr. T. W. Ayrs in a church school of missions in November, which was held in Barnesville. An interesting item in the White Cross report was that the Atlanta B. W. M. U. will furnish the wire screening for the dispensary in Harbin, Manchuria.

Thanks were extended Mr. Arthur Henderson, of Hampton, Ga., for a special gift of $800 to the W. M. U. Training school, as a Georgia memorial scholarship in memory of his little son, who had passed away.

Mrs. W. J. Neele, president, and Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer, left immediately after the meeting for Valdosta, to be present at the 105th Georgia Baptist convention, now in session there.

The publicity department of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia expresses gratification at the hearty cooperation and splendid work of press and scrap book chairmen throughout the state during the conventional year just closed. Reports show hundreds of press notices and news articles contributed to both local and statewide papers and indicates a decided increase in interest and efficency in this special phase of Christian work.

The Atlanta Constitution, through the medium of its federated page, has been a positive factor in the development of church publicity and has received appreciative indorsement and commendation for this worth-while service by Baptist societies and associations all over the state. At the recent convention of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union both Mrs. J. W. Wills, editor-in-general of the federated page, and Mrs. Harvey Clarke, Baptist editor, were cordially thanked for their efficient and cooperative work in this especial connection.

In the scrap book contest projected annually by the Georgia union, the 1926 banner was won by the Pulaski-Bleckley association with Mrs. W. A. Mason, of Hawkinsville, as press chairman. A number of books were entered in the contest. All of these were exceedingly attractive, and all possessed varying features of particular merit.

Main points considered in judging books were number and quality of press notices and articles, proportionate number of churches and organizations in association represented, and arrangement and general attractiveness of book. Aside from the splendid amount of publicity these scrap books at present represent, they will be of great future value and interest as histories of associational progress and accomplishment.

Judges pronounced the Pulaski-Bleckley book a work of art and ability. Mrs. Mason and the local press chairmen of her association, to whom she gives much credit, are to be congratulated upon the winning of the state banner.

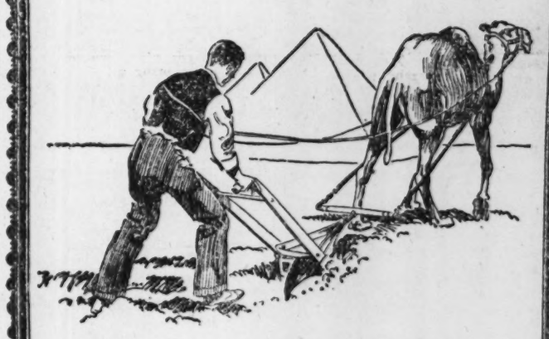

MRS. L. O. FREEMAN,
Publicity Supt., G. B. W. M. U.

Sixth District B. W. M. U. Rally.

All presidents in this district, with all their officers, are urged to be present, and are asked to bring their standard of excellence charts. Different departments of the work will be discussed by Mrs. W. M. Jones, Mrs. James Kempton, Mrs. M. O. Hemperly and Mrs. H. A. Cole. Miss Cordelia Brown will lead the quiet hour and special music will be furnished by Miss Dorothy Cline and Mrs. E. Powell Lee.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

Camp Fire Girls Will Light Living Christmas Trees

For all Camp Fire Girls who would like to know how to swim or how to improve in swimming there will be a Camp Fire day at the new Y. W. C. A. swimming pool in the new headquarters, the old Atlanta Athletic club. The term of nine lessons will begin Monday, January 3, at 3:30 o'clock. The price is $2 for the term, which must be paid at the first meeting. This will include the medical examination, which must be made by appointment through Camp Fire headquarters; instruction in swimming, diving and life-saving under an expert instructor. The course will allow one-half hour in the water each lesson. This privilege is for the Camp Fire Girls only and the regular camp swimming honors may be earned.

The girls' council reports from the various Camp Fire groups all over the city showed that many girls are enlisting their friends in the Christmas project of the Camp Fire Girls, to light the living Christmas trees. In order that this plan may succeed, it is necessary that every girl ask several friends and relatives to light a tree at Christmas time. The girls of the Swannanoa group will have a Christmas party, using a living tree as the Christmas tree, cooperating with the Christmas project.

Monday, December 13, is the day when all Christmas dolls must be turned in at Camp Fire headquarters if the doll honor is to be earned.

A special Christmas order has been received and is now at Camp Fire headquarters. Camp Fire manuals, rings, pins and stationery make wonderful gifts for Camp Fire Girls. In the bulletin recently sent out a mistake was made on the Christmas list. The Guardian's pins are only $2.50 instead of $2.85.

The Camp Fire Girls of the Pocahontas club, of the William Bass Junior High school, observed Arbor day Friday by planting a small evergreen tree on the schoolyard. A fitting program was given. A council fire was held at the home of the guardian, Miss Ethel Purcell, Friday night. Four girls received the new member honor recently offered by national headquarters to Camp Fire Girls who got one new girl to join and pay their dues by November 15.

The Glenwood Camp Fire Girls, of the Glenwood school, Decatur, enjoyed a three-mile hike with their guardian, Miss Pearl Langford.

The Trubekno group, of Tenth Street school, held the weekly meeting at the home of Dorothy Dink, on Myrtle street. Arrangements were made for a council fire to be held Wednesday, December 15, at 3 o'clock in the junior room of the Atlanta Woman's club.

The Zadata Camp Fire group, of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, entertained at a tacky party Friday afternoon. Mrs. D. W. Walker, guardian of the group, assisted in entertaining. The proceeds went toward paying dues, and honors were awarded those taking part. Miss Mary Lanier was awarded the prize for the tackiest costume.

The Swannanoa group, of the Decatur Junior High school, presented its play, "The Call of Wohelo," in the auditorium of the Junior High school Saturday night. Miss Emily Stead, assisted by Mrs. J. Howell Green, directed the play.

Billy Stokey Presented In Piano Recital.

Miss Dorothy Waldman presented her pupil Billy Stokey, son of Lieutenant and Mrs. William Provines Stokey in a pianoforte recital Friday evening at her home, 739 Park drive, N. E. Billy is only 9 years old, and the classical program he gave entirely from memory evinced the unusual ability of a real genius. The Kreutzer sonata, a fine example of chamber music, by Beethoven, was the opening number. All throughout the Adagio, Presto, Andante and Finale-Presto movements of this long sonata Bidy played with the ease, poise and understanding of a much older pianist.

Bach's "Gavotte" in G minor was handled with skill, and a group of numbers, "Norma Cometh," the Duet of Norma and Pollione, "Do Thou Guide Them," Adalgisa's Pleading, and chorus, "The Day of Vengeance," from the opera, "Norma," by Bellini, with a cantabile worthy of a mature player. But it was in Haydn's "Gypsy Rondo" that Billy played most brilliantly.

"On the Bridge of Avignon," a national folk tune of France, adapted by Leopold Godowsky; "Frolics of a Fairy Night," Heller; "Little Hedge Rose," Schubert, and "Sicilienne," Schumann formed the next group. Billy's attractive sister, Margaret, assisted him in a duet, "Pastorale," by Bachmann.

A tone poem of exceptional beauty, "The Nightingale," by George A. Leighton, one of Miss Waldman's theory professors at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, was representative of modern music, and Reinhold's "Brilliant Camp" closed the program, after which little Billy Stokey was the recipient of many congratulations.

GRAVURE PICTORIAL SECTION

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

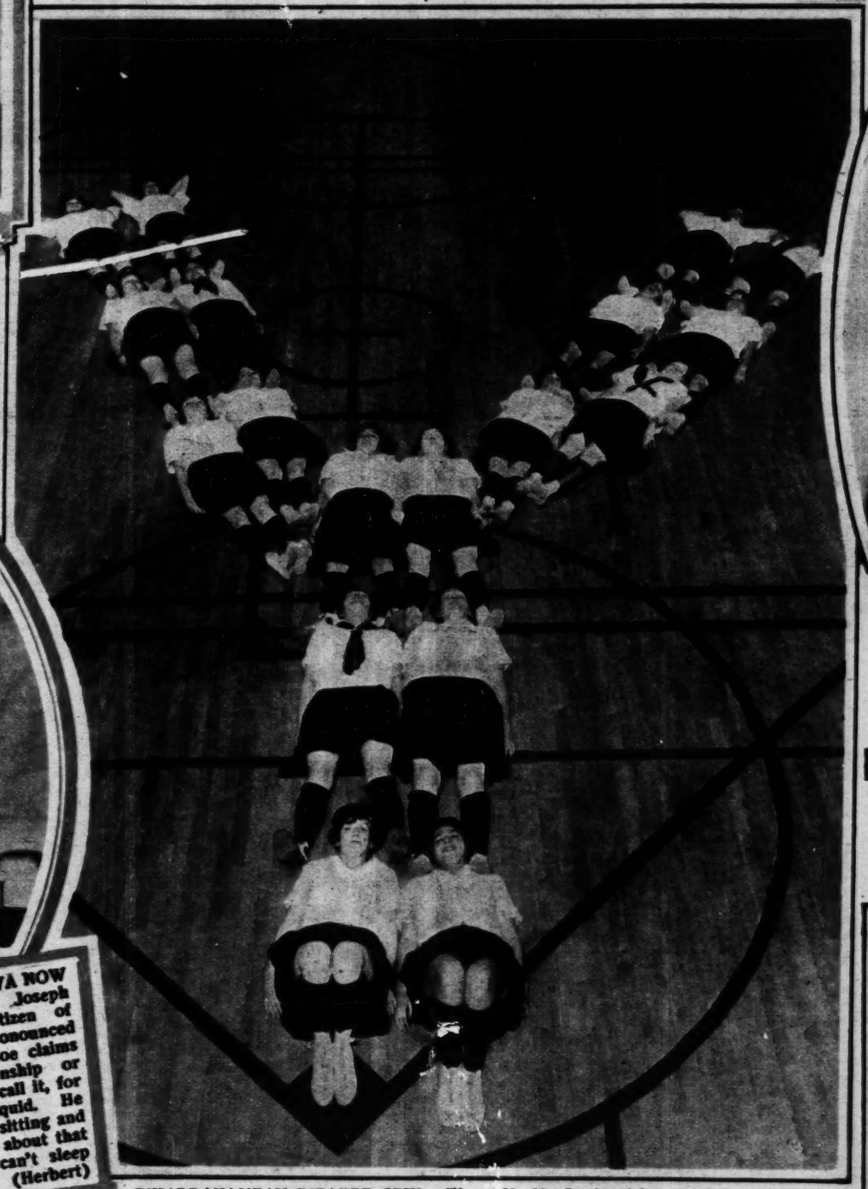

SUNDAY DECEMBER 12th, 1926

ALL-STATES BEAUTY QUEEN — Miss Ada Williams, of Kentucky, was chosen as "Miss Miami" to reign over the Florida city's progress week. Miss Williams won the all-states title over beauties entered by societies representing other states among residents of Miami. (International)

TIEING THE BOY FRIEND TO YOU—Patricia Avery, pretty screen star, invented this novel way of keeping him in mind. Her silk tie was sensatized, and the photograph of the best beau was printed on it. (International)

HE LIKES A LITTLE JAVA NOW AND THEN—Fact is, Joseph Peclet, 73-year-old citizen of Newark, N. J., has a pronounced appetite for coffee. Joe claims the world's championship or whatever you want to call it, for imbibing the black liquid. He drank 64 cups at one sitting and says if he doesn't get about that many every day he can't sleep well. (Herbert)

WHADDAYAMEAN WEAKER SEX?—These Y. M. C. A. girls, of Harlem, shown forming a "Y" on the floor of their gymnasium, are quite as expert as men, know all the regular gym stunts and can chin a horizontal bar or smack a masher with equal ease. (International)

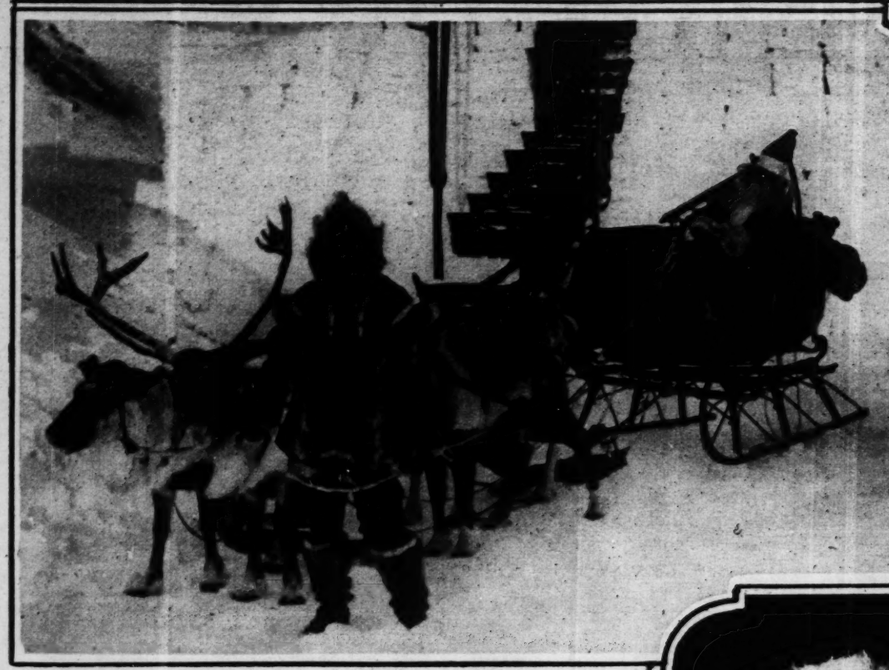

JUST A BIT OF GORGEOUS CHRISTMAS COLOR—You'll see him on the streets every day now as the holiday shoppers jam stores and pack sidewalks. And if the kids are along you'll just have to stop and make a purchase of the gaudy wares of "the balloon man." (Herbert)

MAN-CARRYING PAPER BIRD—A kite with sufficient lifting power to carry a passenger aloft is creating a sensation in Los Angeles. It's the property of an aeronautical student and was designed for aerial observation in war. In tests it has carried 186 pounds weight and has landed its passenger each time without mishap. (Herbert)

THE WOMAN ALWAYS PAYS—So declares Zizi Lambrino, shown in black fur, in a Paris court where she pleaded vainly for recognition of her morganatic marriage to Prince Carol of Rumania and sought to force him to support their child. The plea was denied. (International)

RARE PHOTO OF SANTA—It isn't every year that the jolly old gentleman consents to pose for the photographer at his home, but here you see him sitting in his sleigh with his reindeers all harnessed and ready for flight, and with Santa Claus' ice palace where he makes all his toys immediately in the background.

Hooray for Good Ol' Santy

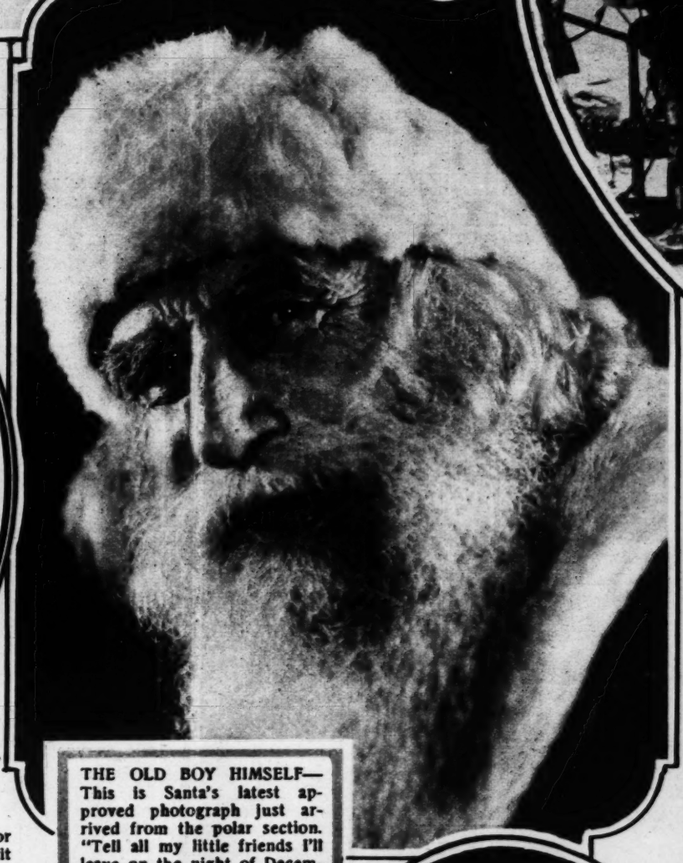

The patron saint of the little people—bright-eyed youngsters who are busy writing notes listing their Christmas desires—is preparing for his annual round of all kiddieland, and latest advices from the frozen Arctic zone where Santa Claus makes his home are that he will leave the North Pole early on the night of December 24 with his sleigh full of good things and with the most imposing visiting list he has ever compiled. Have all of you been good little boys and girls?

SANTA AND SOME OF HIS TINY ESKIMO FRIENDS—And here's the be-whiskered old fellow paying a social call at the ice igloo of an Eskimo family in frozen Arctic region. Yep, they're crazy about him up there too.

FIRST-AID TO THE WIND-DAMAGED COMPLEXION—Quick repairs for wrecked make-up is made possible by this little invention, a cosmetic kit attached to the auto steering wheel. Dorothy Phillips is a lovely demonstrator of the handy little trick for the feminine driver. (Underwood & Underwood)

THE OLD BOY HIMSELF—This is Santa's latest approved photograph just arrived from the polar section. "Tell all my little friends I'll leave on the night of December 24 to visit them," was the message he sent with the picture.

THE SEAL OF AFFECTION—Ida Woodford, Los Angeles girl swimmer, is shown making love to "Baby," her pet seal, who romps with her in the surf. (International)

ARMISTICE IN SCOTLAND—Mrs. Murdock, of Glasgow, wearing some of the decorations of her five sons, three of whom were killed side by side in the Dardenelles. She attended the Armistice day celebration in Glasgow.

FUTURE KING?—Prince Michael, of Roumania, pictured with Princess Helen, his mother and former wife of Prince Carol. In the event King Ferdinand, who is dangerously ill, should die, this child may be considered the legal successor, since his father has renounced his claims to the throne.

WOLF OF THE UNDERWORLD — "Bum" Rodgers, notorious New York criminal recaptured after being in hiding in the Bronx since his escape from detectives last December. He is charged with numerous crimes, but declares he has "not turned a trick" since his escape.

"AGONY IN THE GARDEN," by Bellini, another of the world's greatest paintings. The complete story is in today's Constitution magazine section.

BAINBRIDGE TOTS STAGE LILLIPUTIAN WEDDING—The event was sponsored by the Bainbridge chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and a handsome sum was realized for the work of that organization. In the center of the photo are little Frances Parker, the bride, and Fields Farner, the groom.

ANIMAL TRIUMVIRATE—These fluffy little fellows are lion cubs—Caesar, Antony and Cleopatra—brought by their owner to Miami, Fla., recently from Montgomery, Ala., in order that they might escape cold weather. (Underwood & Underwood)

LAYING THE EXPLOSIVE—This photograph shows workmen high up the slope of the mountain placing the dynamite in drilled holes outlining the space on the mountainside desired to be cleared and levelled for the carving.

WHEN POETS MEET—Betty Baxter Lewis, poet, novelist and song-writer from far-off Michigan, recently made the long journey to Atlanta to meet and greet Frank L. Stanton, poet-laureate of Georgia, to whom she already had paid poetic tribute through the medium of the mails. Here she is shown talking with Mr. Stanton at his desk in The Constitution building and with Dr. Wightman F. Melton, former head of the English department at Emory university and close friend of the Georgia poet. (Francis E. Price)

Blasting Stone Mountain's Face

This remarkable series of photographs shows in graphic detail the recent explosion and effect of a giant blast of dynamite in order to clear the scarp of Stone Mountain for the Confederate memorial to be carved there. It is said that this was the greatest single blast of rock the world has ever seen. The imposing spectacle was witnessed by a number of Atlantans interested in the memorial.

BREAKING THE GIANT STONE—As the explosives were set off, the face of the great rock was seen to crack and splinter as though the mountain were in torment.

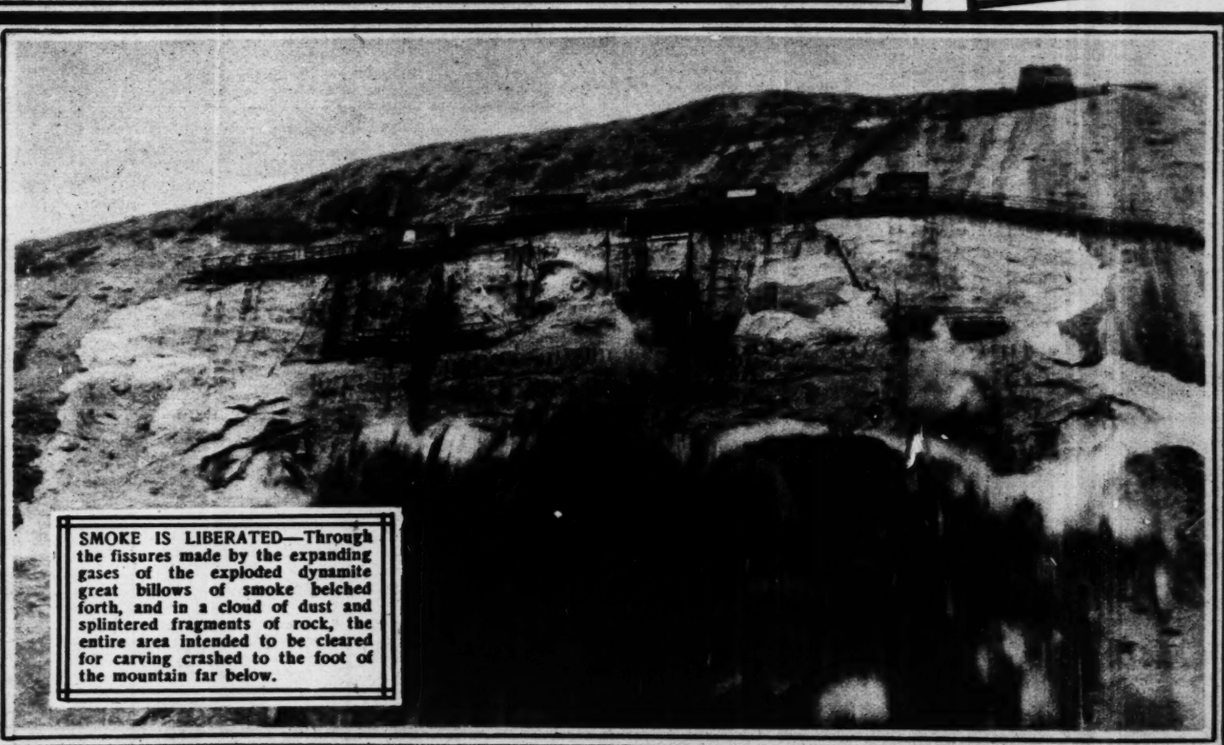

NATURE'S OWN MOSQUITO SCREEN—Gojke Simovic, who has sailed from Boston for Jugo Slavia, says he's going home to "live forever." His beard, he says, is "God-given and wards off mosquitoes." He claims to be immune from snake bites and eats grass and raw vegetables. In other words, he's a nut. (International)

SHEIK'S SPIRIT SPEAKS—At least Natacha Rambova, who has just returned from Europe says he has. According to Natacha, the famous screen lover has been sending her, his former wife, sweet messages from the spirit world. Strangely, also, according to Natacha, Rudolph has had no messages for Pola Negri, to whom, according to her version, he was to have been married when he died.

SMOKE IS LIBERATED—Through the fissures made by the expanding gases of the exploded dynamite great billows of smoke belched forth, and in a cloud of dust and splintered fragments of rock, the entire area intended to be cleared for carving crashed to the foot of the mountain far below.

ELEVEN, COUNT THEM—They're the children of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Scygrel, of Lansford, Pa., the parents being shown in the back row. The mother and children recently left to visit Poland, Mr. Scygrel remaining here to work hard and foot the round dozen bills of traveling expenses. (International)

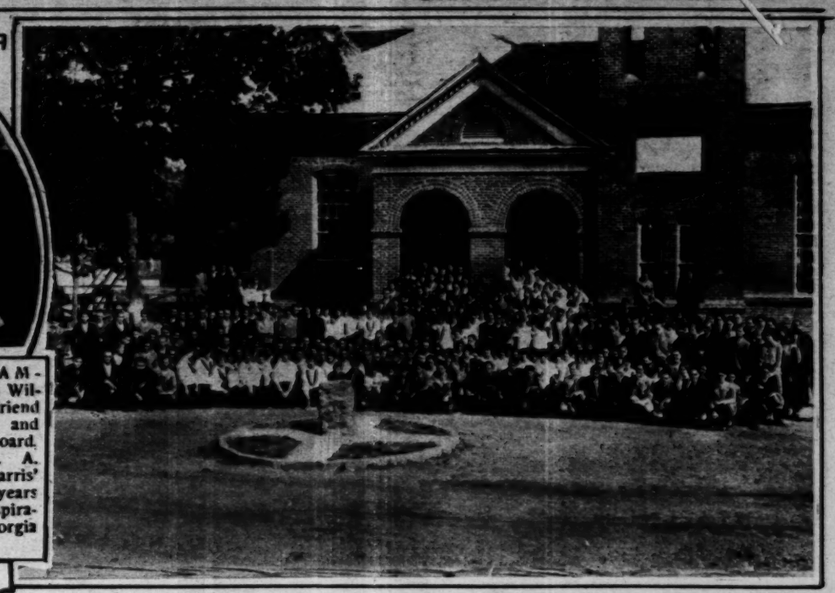

AFTER THE BLAST—Here's the effect of the explosion. The face of the mountain is shown clean and new, smoothed according to the desire of the sculptor.

WORKING IN THE BRICK PLANT to defray the expense of their education. These young men make the brick with which Young Harris buildings and others are constructed.

LEADERS IN CAMPAIGN — Colonel William Lawson Peel, friend of the institution and chairman of its board, left, and Dr. J. A. Sharpe, Young Harris' president for 27 years and the guiding inspiration of north Georgia youth.

THE CHAPEL of Young Harris, with a portion of the student body of 467 grouped in front of it.

Georgia's Mountain Youth Appeals for Chance

Young Harris College, hidden away in the folds of the north Georgia hills, is now conducting a campaign to raise $150,000 as an endowment fund, the drive now being in progress in Atlanta and its environs under the leadership of Colonel William Lawson Peel, chairman of the board. Founded 40 years ago, Young Harris is conducted under auspices of the North Georgia Methodist Conference. More than a hundred of its graduates have entered the ministry of various denominations; hundreds of others are teachers. The campaign is to supply actual necessities of the school, which offers education at the least possible cost to young men and women of the mountain country, many of whom work their way through the institution.

HOME ECONOMICS — In addition to standard junior college training, young women are offered an opportunity at Young Harris to perfect themselves in the art of intelligent home-keeping, working their way through school in this manner.

COLLEGE DAIRY—Young Harris maintains its own dairy to supply pure milk to its students. In this picture a young man who partially works his way through school is at work in the dairy.

Scene from "Stranded In Paris"

Help! She's "Stranded in Paris!" But that daring little lady, Bebe Daniels, starring all next week at the Howard, has plenty of laughs to keep her company, and she soon gets lovers galore, and gowns enough to clothe all Solomon's wives. No one with beauty like Bebe's is ever stranded long. Women everywhere today are keeping themselves looking their loveliest by using Black and White (Peroxide) Vanishing Cream, which preserves the satin texture of their skin, and acts as an ideal powder base, protecting face, neck and arms from cold, drying winds and smoky air. More than 80,000 dealers recommend it.

PEEL DORMITORY — This handsome building was erected in 1924 on the Young Harris campus by Colonel Peel.

The HAUNT of BLUE RIVER

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

by Elizabeth York Miller

Across the Years Alison Morrow Bore the Memory of a Florida Jungle and an Unknown Terror—A Memory as Nebulous as a Dream Until One Spark Made It Flame Into Sudden Reality.

It was a warm night, but she shivered as though struck by an icy blast. "It is haunted," she repeated with emphasis!

SOME few years ago it was the fashion amongst a certain literary cult to make pilgrimages to the workshop of one Miles Straker, the young glass blower philosopher of Blue River, a spot which for inaccessibility outrivaled Mecca where the traveler of limited time and means was concerned. People generally came by invitation and remained a month or more.

Mr. Straker had pitched his tent—or rather his father had done it for him—eighteen miles from the nearest railway at a point on the gulf coast of Florida. Disciples from New York had first twenty-four hours by train to Jacksonville, and from there another twelve hours to Fort Myers.

At Fort Myers a halt overnight at the Royal Palm hotel made a refreshing break, and then the pilgrim was offered a choice of two routes by which to complete his journey. He could drive the eighteen miles through sandy pine forest carpeted with scrub palmetto, or he could go by the gulf in a naphtha launch and up the Blue river to Straker's.

Miles Straker was a craftsman, author who did not disdain to advertise, and for him the best advertisement was his supposed withdrawal from the world. One of his arts was glass blowing, but there were others; and what John Straker had started as an industrial community somewhat on the lines of Ruskin's famous experiment had become under the shrewd genius of his son, a thriving one-man business.

The elder Straker had been a dreamer and a poet, a weak man altogether, whose disappearance from Blue River some seventeen years previously in the company of his best friend's wife had entirely disrupted the happy community and left Miles, then a boy of fifteen, with a few miserable frame buildings, a glass blower's resort and what machinery the disillusioned communists could neither sell nor carry away.

By the time he was two-and-thirty, Miles Straker had done a great deal with Blue River. He had dreams, too, but he put them to better purpose than his father had done. Also he had managed in his own ascetic mode of life to retrieve a scandal which possessed more than the usual elements of dishonor. The elopement of the elder Straker with the woman in question had been planned with cold-blooded care. She had started, apparently, with the intention of taking her two-year-old baby with her, but the child was abandoned and found wandering alone in the woods a day later, several miles from Blue River. Thus the eloping pair became actual criminals, and the hue and cry of the law was hard after them, but they got away and were never heard of again.

At the time this story opens there had arrived at the Royal Palm in Fort Myers a party of five who were on their way to Blue River to visit Miles Straker. Three of them were quite distinguished people. There was Professor Blount, a doctor of psychology of the University of California, whose hobby was venetian glass, upon which he was something of an authority; and there was Madame Duplessus, of the Sorbonne, and Roderick Blair, the English writer, also a doctor of psychology, whose book, "Memory and the Conscious Mind," had made a place for him in the front ranks of original thinkers.

Roderick Blair meant to do a little work during the six weeks or so they would be at Blue River, and to aid him in that purpose had brought along his secretary, a girl by the name of Alison Morrow. Professor Blount was accompanied by a student he had picked up abroad, a rather exuberant person who rejoiced in the name of Victor Gabrielli, and who threw the other members of the party into uneasy perplexities by reason of the fancy dress apparel he affected for everyday wear. Gabrielli was a poet, a painter, a sculptor, a singer, and were moments, also, when he was an sometimes he wrote books.

Professor Blount had long ago wearied of this unique "find," this treasure of manifold genius which had attached itself to him in a Heidelberg boarding house, but there was no getting rid of Victor Gabrielli now. He constituted himself the life of the party and they suffered him much as one suffers a mischievous puppy, sometimes with affection, and sometimes, it must be confessed, with considerable annoyance.

"I wonder," said Alison, who had a delicately ironic sense of humor, "how long it will take you to get the hang of glass blowing."

Gabrielli knew she was making fun of him, but the buffoon in his nature admitted that almost anybody had a right to laugh at his antics.

He threw her a doglike look, a look which said: "But I thought that you would keep out of the chorus!"

Alison didn't want to hurt Victor Gabrielli. Indeed, there were times when she quite liked him. He was a good-looking boy, fair-haired and blue-eyed, merry always, and always anxious to please—but. O, his conceit!

"Let's go and have a look at our boat," she said, holding out her hand as friendly as though, indeed he were an irrepressible Bonzo.

Miles Straker had sent his own launch to take them down the coast to Blue River and it was now moored at the crazy little landing stage below the gardens of the hotel.

Roderick Blair, in the shadows, drew at his pipe and watched the progress of the young couple. Blair was a silent man. Most of what he had to say went into his books.

As he looked at her, fluttering mothlike in her white dress through the southern twilight, Blair wondered if marriage would take away the mystic charm of Alison's temperament; "cure" her, as it were. But he did not favor Victor Gabrielli as a life partner for her.

"Do you know," Alison said suddenly, "I believe this place is haunted."

It was a warm night, but she shivered as though struck by an icy blast and stopped dead, holding fast to the rickety hand-rail of the pier.

"It is haunted," she repeated with emphasis.

Gabrielli, always impressionable, leaped to the suggestion.

Who, in a Floridian night, has not felt haunted?—the air like a scented kiss, heavy with jasmine and orange flowers, softly heavy; the sky luminous as though sprayed with gold dust and hung with golden lanterns; the gentle lap of the phosphorescent waves against the piles of the wharf; fish, flashing a backbone of gold here and there—and yet through all the softness ran a clear and stridently eerie voice of melancholy.

Victor Gabrielli shivered, too, but he liked it. He was literally on tiptoe.

"Don't, please—be still just a moment," Alison latid a hand on his arm. "I want to think. Yes, of course it's haunted. But we are the ghosts. At least I am. O, will you please go away and leave me? I want to be alone. I want to think out why I'm a ghost. I must have come back for some purpose. O, Victor, go away and leave me alone!"

The young man subsided under this urgent appeal, thrust his hands into his pockets and in a sulky, hurt mood strolled down to the end of the pier. Alison was grappling with an idea which was almost too big for her.

"I wonder—" she mused, "if I am dead? No, of course I'm not dead. I mean, even if I were there'd still be

Gregoire Gernazion Relates Horrors of Turk Massacre of 1920

BY ERNEST RUBIN.

GREGOIRE GERNAZIAN, native of Armenia, survivor of several Turkish onslaughts and hero of the massacre of 1920, is now an integral part of Atlanta's cosmopolitan population. Indistinguishable from the demotic natives of our city, he has but a few weeks to receive the official bestowal of American citizenship through his final naturalization papers. In fact, so effective has been the work of the great "melting pot" that he is known to his many friends as George instead of Gregoire.

But with all these external similarities Mr. Gernazian possesses unique experiences that can never be lost or forgotten. He participated in scenes the equal of which is known to most Atlantans only through moving picture romance. To watch one walk unarmed up to the reeking muzzles of a hostile enemy and beg of them the prize for which murderous days have whet their appetites, is an incident calculated to thrill the most blase cinema fan. To be the hero of just such a scene in a world of blood and bread, is—well, is precisely what George Gernazian was.

In the life of George, who is still young and ambitious, that incident was but the climax of a score of colorful years spent in Asia Minor, where, in the pretentious city of Marash, on an eventful day in 1898, he first saw the world of man. A curious place it must have seemed to him, a member of a small group of Christians perpetually baited by their powerful and engulfing neighbor, the Turk. Adventure came early and uninvited into his life. Reminiscently he recounts some of its incidents.

"Although the hostility of the Moslem was profusely manifest in the everyday life of Marash, where, as in most commercial centers of Asia Minor, Mussulman and Christian are thrown into close contact, the first serious clash that haunts my memory came in 1917. The Christians were driven out of Marash by the Turks. In the excitement I was separated from my parents and younger sister and brother.

"With other fleeing countrymen I made my way to Aleppo, Syria. There I found some relatives who had come from Marash under similar circumstances some time before, and with them spent the night, which happened to be Saturday. Sunday morning I went out, thinking to get my bearings in the strange city where I must make my livelihood, for the present at least—how long, I did not know. I had gone but a short ways when a military police officer approached me. He questioned me in the Arabian tongue. Apparently he wanted to see my passport papers, he was satisfied with a show of money, accepting the latter and releasing me.

"In Syria I entered school and later took a private tutor. I had graduated from college in Asia Minor and could speak four languages, but not Arabic, which I now determined to master in order to enter business where I was. This I did, later engaging in the exchange of foreign moneys, the calling I had followed in Marash. I built up a considerable volume of trade and increased my fortune to large proportions.

"Shortly after my arrival in Aleppo, word reached me that my parents had been robbed of all they possessed while being driven out of Marash. As soon as possible I sent a letter and money to the Christian refugee camp, whither I believed they had escaped. The package was returned with a note, written in Turkish postoffice officials, that the addressees had perished. Then, for the first time, I learned of the death of my father and mother, though I never knew under what circumstances. Later I learned of the safety of my sister and brother, whose youth had permitted them to hide successfully in Marash until the wrath of the Turkish citizens subsided.

"Near the end of this period financial reverses beset me, reducing my savings to a small sum. That, and the knowledge of my parents' death, determined me on returning to Marash to my brother and sister. Back in the city of my nativity, reunited with the two children, I started life over again, hoping the followers of Mohammed would keep their peace.

"Then months later the massacre of 1920 broke out. Marash was in a flurry, with shopkeepers of the market place striking out for their homes on the outskirts of the city, or other places of refuge. With the first bark of guns we knew the Turks were out to decrease the Armenian part of the population again. Most of these sought safety in the Christian churches. There were five large churches in Marash, belonging to as many different denominations. Carried off with a crowd, I found myself in the nearby Armenian Catholic church. There I was to remain for 22 days, separated from my sister and brother, while Turks devasted the Armenian quarters of the city.

"Time dragged on, the picture grew more horrible. Outside hordes of Turks, armed with guns and an animated hatred for their Christian neighbors. Within were a paltry 5,000 Armenians, many orphaned children and widowed mothers, huddled together praying to their Christian Father for deliverance of their souls, long ago they had despaired of saving their bodies. For nearly a month the sturdy walls of the Armenian Catholic church sheltered its faithful from the hostile Turks when the fever to sacrifice another batch of Christians to Almighty Allah again raged through their ranks.

"With the alternative of starving to death, or going out to certain death before the guns of the Turks, confronting us all, I determined to leave the church, taking my chances with death, in order to plead with the Turks for those left in the church.

"I wandered through the church to say good-by to my friends and relatives. They warned me I would be killed before I could utter one word to the enemy, adding that it was better all should perish together. My grandmother begged me not to leave the church. My uncle I found standing with watch in hand. I asked him the purpose of it and he replied, 'I am counting the minutes we have to live before the Turks break in upon us.' 'If there are only a few minutes left, let's make them happy ones,' I said in an effort to cheer him.

"Determined to do what I could in the brief space that remained, I prepared to leave the stronghold. Since my return to Marash, and even before, I had been working under American protection, secured for me from America by an elder brother, an American citizen who had fought as a volunteer non-commissioned officer with the American forces during the World war. With this privilege in mind, I took a piece of white cloth, painted U. S. in red on it and bound it around my arm. Then I replaced my native fez with an American hat that one of the refugees had, opened the door and slipped out, closing it behind me.

"There I stood with hundreds of murderous Turks before me. To those closest to me, and on the point of putting an end to my earthly existence, I held up my hand and asked that I be permitted to say a word—then they might kill me. I pleaded with them to spare those that remained behind, appealing to every avenue of sympathy and vanity that suggested itself. After fifteen or twenty minutes in this effort, gaining nothing, other than to postpone immediate death, I asked that they go with me to some Americans, who were in the city as missionaries and members of the Near East Relief society, to discuss the situation with them. They agreed—thanks to the American hat and arm band. With several Turks in civil dress affording protection, we left for the American quarters. We were forced to make our way through streets with snow a foot deep, buried in which were hundreds of dead Armenians,. It was difficult to keep from tripping over the corpses. Half way down the street we met a group of Americans approaching, their country's flag waving aloft.

"I informed them of our mission and together we proceeded to the Turkish civil headquarters in the city, here and there rescuing stranded Armenians as we went along. The educated Turks at headquarters regarded with favor the plea to save the remaining Armenians. The entire party then left for the beseiged church. On arriving there the Americans and myself gained admittance to the church to inform the famished Armenians that their lives had been spared. Their joy was pathetic. The doors of the church were thrown open and a civil guard provided for a few months, until all the Armenians could find some kind of shelter and return to business.

"Immediately following the promise of good faith on the part of civil authorities, I set out to find my sister and brother. After frantically searching the city, protected by a Turkish guard, I found them, safe in a Protestant church. I left them there in kind hands until I again settled down. A year longer I remained in Marash, regarded by my Armenian countrymen as the hero of the 1920 massacre.

"In 1921 I heard that two Americans were planning to return to their native land. The desire to get to the land of freedom, of which I learned from my older brother, had long possessed me. I felt now the opportunity had come, and worked night and day on the project. With the aid from the Americans I secured permission of the Turkish government to leave the city with my sister. Again a Turkish guard was provided for our party, escorting us from Marash to Aleppo. The trip required four days on horseback, and camping out at night on the sand. From there we went to Beirut, the seaport of Syria, and then to Havre, France. From there we learned the Armenian immigration quota was filled and we could not leave. I had been in communication with my brother, Hogop Gernazian, in America, who sent funds for our transportation. Hogop, who was a resident of Atlanta at the time, secured the assistance of Congressman W. D. Upshaw in making arrangements to bring my sister and myself to America. Acquainted with our experiences, Congressman Upshaw gave much of his time persuading the departments of state and labor to grant permission for our entry.

"The congressman interested many officials, including President Harding, in our case, and eventually we set foot in New York. Hogop met us there and brought us to Atlanta. In Atlanta I promptly took out my first papers of naturalization—but a few weeks remain between me and full American citizenship. In the meantime I went to the Atlanta Opportunity school, where I learned the English language, which was to become my mother tongue."

George, during his five years' residence in the United States, did not forget his suffering brethren in Armenia. He importuned his brother Hogop to bring other of their relatives in American freedom. In this they were successful. Between the years 1921 and 1926 they had interested in their behalf two presidents, Senators Harris and George and Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, many other prominent public officials and civic organizations, including the Kiwanis club of Atlanta and the American Red Cross, as well as the United States Veterans' bureau.

When not engaged with the task of aiding his fellow Armenians, George secured employment in Atlanta, at the same time continuing his schooling to fit him for what he prizes most—his American citizenship.

The Other Day

By Donald Ogden Stewart

KANSAS, like the cat in the adage, has two of everything. For example, there are two Kansas Cities. One of them is in Kansas and the other is in Missouri. The one that is in Missouri is the exception that proves the adage.

In traveling from Los Angeles to New York on your wedding journey you get to Kansas City, Missouri, about eight o'clock in the evening. You don't leave until an hour later. This hour can be spent in various ways. You can spend it in cleaning spots off your clothes. Or you can spend it in telephoning people in Kansas City whom you used to know when you were in college. Cleaning spots off your clothes is recommended.

"Where can I find a telephone?" I asked the first passing stranger as I came up and out into the enormous open spaces of the Kansas City station. He passed on without replying.

"Where——" I began, but another flotsam and jetsam of hurrying humanity drifted swiftly by, leaving me once more on the shifting banks of life's surging Sargasso sea without any information about where to find telephones.

"Here we are," I said to my wife, "once more on the shifting banks of life's surging Sargasso sea——"

She comforted me.

"He's just a flotsam and jetsam," she said.

I felt better.

We walked over and I took off my hat.

"You who are in uniform——" I began.

"What?" asked the man.

"Where are the telephones?"

"Who do you want to call up?" he asked.

"O, several people," I replied evasively. "Don Morgan, Alice Holmquist——"

"I meant local or long distance?" he said.

"Alice Holmquist is in Europe now," said my wife.

"That would be long distance," said the man, and he pointed. "Over there."

"But I don't want to talk to any one in Europe," I remonstrated, "and besides I don't believe you can."

"It was people like you," said the man, "who laughed at my grandfather."

"Was he a humorist?" asked my wife.

The man's nose went up in the air and he surveyed my wife scornfully.

"He was an inventor," he replied, "and his name was legion in inventing circles."

"How can you invent circles?" asked my wife. "That's silly."

"And have you any objections to humorists?" I demanded, also a little nettled.

"Yes," added my wife, "what makes you think inventors are any better than humorists?"

"I'm sure I don't know," replied the man, somewhat coldly. "I have never had any contact with humorists."

I looked at my wife.

"Shall we tell him?" I asked.

She nodded—her eyes sparkling with anticipation.

I adjusted my necktie and let my coat fall slightly open so that he could see my lead pencils.

"I am a humorist," I said.

He took it very nicely.

"Would you excuse me a minute?" he said, and walked rapidly away.

"Do you think he's coming back?" I asked my wife, after a pause.

We waited. After a few minutes I looked at my watch.

"If we are going to telephone—" I said.

We walked slowly in the direction the man had indicated.

"I'm sure his grandfather was not a very good inventor," said my wife, with a slight pressure on my hand.

"Thank you, dear," I said simply.

When we reached the telephone stand there did not seem to be any telephone book.

"Can you tell me where I can find a telephone book?" I asked an elderly gentleman who was standing near.

"I'm sorry," he replied, "but I'm afraid I can't. I read so little these days," he added.

"I know how you feel," I said sympathetically.

"When I was a boy," he continued, "everybody used to read Dickens and Thackeray."

He shook his head mournfully and walked slowly away. I watched him for a moment and then continued my search. Finally I found a book and began searching for the telephone number of my old college friend Don Morgan.

"Look under 'M,'" suggested my wife. I gratefully followed her advice.

"There seem to be a great many Morgans," I said. "Do you remember what his father's name was?"

"No," she replied. "I always used to call his father Mr. Morgan. I was much younger than he," she added, "at that time."

"You still are," I remarked.

She considered a moment.

"All right," she agreed. "Let's call up some one else."

The lady in charge of the telephone booths looked up inquiringly.

"I am trying to find a number," I began.

She closed her eyes. I waited. Finally she gave one or two slight shudders and her lips seemed to be moving. I bent over. The voice was that of a little child.

"Hello, mama," she said. "This is Gladys."

I looked at my wife. She put her finger to her lips.

"Shh!" she cautioned.

We waited. Finally the voice of the little girl became stronger.

"It is very beautiful here," she said.

"The name is Morgan," I announced, "and I think they live in one of the suburbs."

By this time the telephone lady was in a complete trance. Her breathing was deep and regular. Her eyes were glassy. Her lips once more began to move.

"I am very happy," said the little girl.

"That's great," I replied, "only, my train goes in about ten minutes now and——"

"I am very happy," continued the voice, "and everything is beauti-fu——"

The telephone lady awoke with a start.

"Did you get your number?" she asked.

I shook my head.

"No," I replied. "But Gladys is very happy."

"O, shoot," said the lady. "Sometimes I get Gladys instead of Mr. Washington."

"Mr. George Washington?" I asked.

"I don't know," she replied. "He always refers to himself as Mr. Washington—sometimes just as Mr. W." She giggled. "He's very funny at times."

"I don't think George Washington would know my friend's telephone number," I stated.

"You never can tell," replied the girl, putting a fresh piece of gum in her mouth. "He darned near found Mr. Gillespie's pink and white striped shirt for him last week. Mr. Gillespie lives over us," she added, "and the shirt had been missing since three laundries ago."

"In that case——" I admitted.

"Wait a sec," she said, and once more she closed her eyes.

Again came the slight convulsions and the curious twitching of the lips. Then, very faintly, the lips began to form words.

"I hope it's Mr. Washington," I whispered to my wife.

"We haven't much time," she whispered back.

The voice beyond the counter became more distinct. I leaned over. Then I frowned.

"Hello, mama," it was saying.

Suddenly a change came over the girl and a more remarkable change occurred in the voice. From the high, childish soprano of Gladys it suddenly tumbled several octaves into the deep rumbling cellar of a full grown male, and there could be no doubt that we were about to hear from Mr. W.

"Hello, everybody," he said.

"Hello," I replied.

The voice stopped as though it were looking me over. Then it commenced again in a much more intimate key.

"Who's this guy?" it asked.

The girl in the trance assumed her normal voice.

"It's a fellow who wants to know a telephone number," she responded.

"Doggone it, Mary," said the voice. "I got enough to do without going around looking up telephone numbers. As it is, I was up till nearly two o'clock this morning trying to find that fly swatter for your mother."

At that moment the station reverberated with the sound of some one calling out something about a train. I grabbed at my watch and then at my wife's hand. We started to run.

As I glanced over my shoulder for a last parting glimpse of the telephone girl I saw that she was still under the influence of the trance and that her lips were still moving very, very fast. Then we turned and sprinted for the gate.

As we got near a man in uniform looked around and saw us coming, then broke quickly into a terror-stricken run in the opposite direction. It was the same man in uniform whom we had spoken to earlier in the evening.

Her eyes were glassy. Her lips once more began to move.

What Has Happened to Justice?

Pretty Woman Who Slew Her Husband Went Free — She Painted Word Picture of Her Life

DID beautiful Gertrude Gibson Patterson deliberately kill the man she loved to satisfy an inordinate craving for money? Was she a woman of dual nature—capable of the highest love and devotion but, when lust for money was awakened, becoming a cold-blooded creature who forgot love, everything, stopping at nothing to gain her ends?

She craved luxuries, yet she once sacrificed all the luxuries a millionaire admirer could lavish on her to marry a man who had nothing to offer her but love. After starving with him, after tenderly nursing him in illness, did she kill him to recover the luxuries she once had sacrificed for him?

These were the questions raised at her trial in Denver, Col., on the charge of murdering her husband, Charles A. Patterson, former well-known football player and athlete of Chicago. Justice refused to believe such things, and acquitted her.

When Gertrude Patterson was a girl she imagined herself the heroine of every paper-backed novel she read. While she was envying these paper ladies whose lives were filled with luxuries and thrills the fates were weaving for her a career that would outmatch the most lurid of fiction.

She came out of a little mining town in Illinois. She was one of ten children. Her father was a mechanic, hard working enough but unable to do more than keep his large family from actual starvation. In this environment of poverty Gertrude blossomed like some rare flower.

Superiority Complex.

As she grew up she felt superior to the ugly little town in which she lived. She hated it. Her beauty attracted all the village beaux, but she spurned their awkward advances. She yearned with all the ardor of her young heart for beauty and color, for gay cities where romance walked with handsome, well-dressed men of the world.

She was only 16 when she went to Chicago, a guest of family friends. This first trip to a city was the turning point in her life. Chance introduced her to Emil Strouss, millionaire clothing manufacturer.

Strouss had neither the youth nor physical qualities to fit a romantic girl's ideal of a Prince Charming. He was in his thirties but old to 16-year-old eyes. He was fat—too young fastidious eyes, grossly fat. It was his riches that dazzled the girl. His money would free her from ugliness, buy her all the beautiful things she hungered for.

The millionaire waved his wand of gold and the small town Cinderella became a princess. The keen-eyed business man had the imagination to see that the girl had more than mere beauty. Nature was generous to Gertrude Patterson, endowing her not only with physical loveliness but with brilliance of mind and musical talent. Strouss sent her to Europe. After months of travel she entered a fashionable school near Paris.

A New Woman.

When she returned to Chicago her lover beheld a finished work of art. The provincial girl he had sent away came back to him more beautiful than ever in her Paris clothes and with a poise and social polish that girls born into blue-blooded circles might envy. The quick mind of the little mining camp girl had absorbed more than social graces. She came out of finishing school a linguist and an accomplished pianist.

Strouss installed her in a luxurious apartment in one of Chicago's fashionable hotels and introduced her as his wife. He gave her costly jewels, automobiles, everything money could buy.

It was not until two years later when the fates brought Chick Patterson into her life, that she realized there were things essential for happiness that even a millionaire couldn't buy. With all his millions, Strouss could not give her romance.

Chick Patterson was well-born, young, charming and handsome. As a student at the Englewood high school of Chicago, he won local fame as a football player and all-around athlete. His mother, Mrs. Mary Patterson, was principal of one of Chicago's high schools. His brother, Harry Patterson, was a prominent attorney.

He was manager of a roller skating ring at San Souci, an amusement park in Chicago, when he met the woman who three years later was to be charged with his murder. She had gone to the park with friends, one of whom introduced her to Patterson. It was a case of love at first sight. When they parted it was with the promise that they would meet again the next day. After that they had many stolen hours together.

The Transformation

A few months after their first meeting she went to California. Patterson followed and they were married in the lovely setting of Mount Carmel - by - the-Sea.

On their return to Chicago they went to live in a tiny two-room apartment. The woman who, for the sake of love, had renounced a life of luxury with a millionaire washed and scrubbed for the man she married.

Gertrude Patterson

Their happiness was short-lived. Three months after their marriage the bride went to Europe. She went with Strouss, her former admirer.

According to a diary kept by Patterson and produced at Gertrude Patterson's trial, and according to the testimony of his family, she insisted upon going on the ground she must have money. She led Patterson to believe, it was said, that Strouss had engaged her to assist him in buying materials for his factory and would pay her well for her services. He had faith in her assurance that she was going merely as Strouss' employee, it was testified.

Fear Drove Her Back.

According to Gertrude Patterson's story, it was Patterson who became irked by their poverty. She declared that the man she married changed suddenly from a lover who had made her forget everything but love into a despicable creature who abused her because she had no money to give him and who finally went to Strouss with a proposal to sell her back to him.

The two men—her former lover and her husband—bargained over her as if she were horseflesh, she declared, and finally Patterson sold her to the millionaire for $1,500.

While she and Strouss were in Europe, Patterson, she testified, wrote blackmailing letters threatening to kill both of them if she did not return. Fear for her life drove her back to him, she told the jury. Whatever the truth was, she returned to Chicago and went back to live with Patterson.

Not long after her return Patterson fell ill. Tuberculosis had gone too far to be checked. The once strong athlete became an invalid. Of the persons who knew the couple even those who were convinced that money lust had caused Gertrude Patterson to desert her husband for the lover who could give her fleshpots say that for a long period she was all devotion to the sick man and nursed him with wonderful tenderness. When the physicians ordered him to Colorado in a last hope to save his life, she went to Denver with him.

Patterson became a patient at the Phipps Memorial sanitarium in Montclair, a suburb of Denver. The wife purchased a pretty bungalow on one of Denver's fashionable streets not far from the suburb and fitted it with beautiful furnishings.

In the summer of 1911, three years after their marriage, she filed suit for divorce against Patterson in the Denver courts, charging that he beat her and otherwise treated her cruelly. H eretaliated by filing suit against Strouss, charging that the millionaire had alienated his wife's affections and asking $25,000 damages.

It was testified that Gertrude Patterson had tried to persuade him to withdraw this suit.

The Shooting.

A few weeks after both suits were filed Patterson was shot to death one morning near the sanitarium where he was a patient. Three bullets were fired into his body, two through his back and one through his heart. Gertrude Patterson was with him. She declared he shot himself.

The only eye-witness to the tragedy, a carpenter who happened to be near the scene, testified that he saw the woman raise a revolver and fire at the man. When the first shot struck him Patterson, according to this witness, fell to his knees and while he was crying "O God! O God!" the woman fired two more bullets into his body.

In interviews with reporters after her arrest Gertrude Patterson described herself as a rich man's toy. She denounced the millionaire who had educated her and lavished riches on her.

"Strouss is a monster!" she cried. "I was only a toy to him. Between Strouss and my husband, if I were forced to choose, I would have more respect for my husband."

In the long gallery of women murder defendants Gertrude Patterson stands out as an unusual type. She was only 26 when she was tried, but looked even younger. She was an appealing frail beauty, with large brown eyes that looked out from beneath long golden eyelashes with the lovely innocence of a child. She spoke in tones of culture and discussed music, books and art with the knowledge of a connoisseur.

Setting for the Trial.

The woman charmed even hard-boiled reporters. She moved a rug, her favorite books and a few pieces of dainty furniture from her bungalow to her cell in the matron's quarters of the county jail, and made her cage an attractive setting for her lovel yself. With her own tea set to serve tea and surrounded by flowers she received visitors as if she were hostess in her own pretty bungalow.

Willis V. Elliott, then district attorney of Denver, was a member of the law firm which filed her suit for divorce and withdrew as prosecutor in the case. The court appointed Horace Benson, prominent as a criminal attorney, to act in the district attorney's place. Judge O. N. Hilton, famous for his acquittals of women murder defendants, was selected by Gertrude Patterson to conduct her defense.

The state charged at the trial that she was still the recipient of Strouss' bounty; that it was his money that paid for her bungalow and its furnishings; that she had become tired of her role as devoted wife to a sick man and, planning to return to Strouss, desperately tried to induce Patterson to withdraw his alienation suit against the millionaire, because Strouss was annoyed and she feared she would lose her chance to regain the luxuries she twice had given up for Patterson's sake.

When Patterson continued to refuse to withdraw the action she resolved to kill him, the state charged.

Patterson was shot in front of Von Richthofen castle, one of the show places of Denver. It was built by the American widow of Baron Von Richthofen of the famous Germany family of that name, and is an exact replica of the ancestral castle of the Von Richthofens in the Black forest. It was Patterson's custom to take a walk every morning past this castle, which is a short distance from the sanitarium where he was a patient.

Before the Shooting.

Two nights before the shooting Patterson called at his wife's home. She was entertaining a young man by the name of Strain. Patterson expressed resentment at this visitor's presence. Finally he walked away. The wife followed. An hour later she returned, Strain testified, and asked whether he had a revolver. When he produced one from his pocket, Strain said sh easked him to leave it with her, explaining she feared Patterson would return and try to kill her.

The revolver from which the fatal bullets weref ired was identified by Strain as the one he had left with Gertrude Patterson.

According to the woman, Patterson had written her a note asking her to meet him in front of Von Richthofen castle on the morning of the shooting.

To bear up the state's charge that she waylaid Patterson on his morning stroll with the intention of killing him if he did not agree to withdraw his suit against Strouss, one of Patterson's fellow patients at the sanitarium testified that he was with Patterson when the defendant called him on the telephone. Patterson, said this witness, told the woman he didn't care

AUCTION BRIDGE

By MILTON C. WORK
THE INTERNATIONAL AUTHORITY

The hand given last week contained a problem of unusual interest, which I earnestly hope was solved by many of my readers. The hand was as follows:

North.
Spades: Q-J-8-5.
Hearts: K-10-6-5.
Diamonds: 5-3-2.
Clubs: A-7.

West	East
Spades: 10-7-4.	Spades: 9-3-2
Hearts: 7-2.	Hearts: 8-3.
Dia.: K-J-4.	Dia.: 10-9-8-7.
Clubs: K-Q-10-6-5.	Clubs: 9-8-3-2.

South.
Spades: A-K-6.
Hearts: A-Q-J-6.
Clubs: J-4.

South (Dealer) opened the bidding with one Heart. Although the hand has the conventional "high cards above the average" almost twice over, and "three suits stopped" and stopped again, it would be indeed foolish with unstopped Clubs to risk a No Trump with a strong Heart bid available. West bid two Clubs and North, with unusual assistance for the partner's Hearts, bid two Hearts. Barring a bad break somewhere four Hearts headed by King-10, Ace and one Club, and four Spades headed by Queen-Jack, would seemingly ensure game with even the lightest of sound Heart bids on the part of South. Had it been necessary, North would have assisted at least once more. As it happened, there was no other bidding and West opened with the King of Clubs against South's two-Heart contract.

This hand has been one of my favorites and I have given it frequently to advanced classes and used it to illustrate lectures. I have seen it played hundreds of times without once noting a single variation in the play of the first six tricks. Trick 1 is won with the Ace of Clubs; tricks 2 and 3 are trump leads, exhausting all the adverse trumps; and tricks 4 to 6 are three rounds of Spades, the third won in the Dummy.

It is rather curious that a hand containing a really subtile problem should have its bidding and first six tricks of such a cut and dried variety. Dummy always leads the last Spade at trick 7 so as to permit the Closed Hand to discard a losing card. This lead is just as unmistakable as any of the previous bids and plays; it is in the making of the South discard that ninety-five per cent of the players —including many experts — fail. With a losing Club in each hand, the apparently natural but fatally thoughtless discard of a Club is the one usually made. The Declarer who makes it does not stop to consider that the Closed Hand contains two cards which are sure losers—the Club and the small Diamond. What the ninety-five out of every hundred fail to see is that the Ace and Queen of Diamonds can be made sure winners without risking a finesse which is a probable loser. In view of the great North-South strength, the Club bid by West strongly suggests the King of Diamonds as being in the West hand; but even if that Club bid had not been made, the lead of the King of Clubs would have marked the Queen of Clubs in the West hand and at trick 7 South should discard the losing Six of Diamonds, not the losing Jack of Clubs—for the following reasons:

South, selecting his discard at trick 7, knows that West is out of Spades and Hearts; he also knows that West still has the Queen of Clubs. It also is highly probable that West has the King of Diamonds; therefore, the discard of the Jack of Clubs followed by an attempted Diamond finesse on trick 8 would not be apt to produce a Small Slam as, in addition to the small Diamond which would be a sure loser, the Queen would probably lose to the King, but the discard of the small Diamond followed by a Club lead by North and the play of the Jack of Clubs by South would put West in the lead. After the Club Jack is won by West with the Queen, West is helpless; should he lead a Club, Dummy would trump and Closed hand would discard the Queen of Diamonds, should he lead a Diamond it would be up to Ace-Queen, and in either case the Declarer would make a Small Slam.

Should South discard the Jack of Clubs on trick 7, he would spoil his certain Small Slam, as he would deprive himself of the only card by which the lead could be forced on West (if West let the Jack win, South would lose only his Queen of Diamonds); and without the Jack of Clubs, the Diamond finesse would be the only chance.

This hand illustrates an end situation which frequently turns up at the Bridge table. The average player looks upon Ace-Queen only in the light of a possible finesse; the expert, toward the end of the hand looks upon the Ace-Queen as a holding up to which he wishes to force an adverse lead. He exercises all his ingenuity to that end, and only resorts to the even chance of the finesse when the certainty gained by the lead up is unobtainable. Hundreds of unnecessary finesses are tried every day.

For next week the problem is how should the following deal be played:

North.
Spades: King-7-3.
Hearts: 10-6-5.
Diamonds: 8-5-3-2.
Clubs: Jack-10-8.

West	East
Spades: Q-10-6.	Spades: J-9-4-2.
Hearts: J-9-8.	Hearts: K-7-3-2.
Diamonds: 10-9.	Diamonds: K-7-4.
Clubs: Q-6-5-4-2.	Clubs: Ace-3.

South.
Spades: A-8-5.
Hearts: A-Q-4.
Diamonds-A-Q-J-6.
Clubs: K-9-7.

"THE CONSTANT WIFE" served to expose Ethel Barrymore to my critical gaze for the first time. And like everyone else who's ever seen her, I collapsed completely before her magnetic charm and personality. "The Constant Wife," which was written by nobody else but Somerset Maugham, reveals Miss Barrymore in her lighter moments. This is a sophisticated comedy of infidelity, sex and divorce, one of those in which the greatest issues of life are passed up with flippant remarks. And what an abundance of epigrams and real wit have gone into the magnificent Maugham's dialogue. When the wife in this play learns that her husband is unfaithful to her, she is forced to admit she doesn't really mind it at all. She decides she'd like to try it herself. As the play ends, we see her off to Italy on a six months' jaunt with her lover, assuring her husband as she goes that she'll be back to join him at the conclusion of her holiday. What can he say since she's fully aware of his numberless philanderings?

John Drew presented his usual suave and immaculate appearance among the horde of first-nighters. Edna Ferber was also on hand, having the satisfying knowledge that the Ziegfeld organization is now hard at work making a musical comedy out of her "Show Boat." Jesse Lasky was also an attentive first-nighter.

Jeanne Eagels made it a point to be at Miss Barrymore's opening. The very sight of Miss Eagels recalls the pit-a-pat of "Rain." At last has the sun started shining for her, for after four drenched years of "Rain" she is now rehearsing in a play called "Chicago" of all names.

There have been many who declined to acknowledge the present theatrical season had started until at least one Noel Coward play had come along. It is my painful duty to say that "This Was a Man," the latest Coward effort, is not in a class with his plays of last year. This is the one which was forbidden production in London. Why, remains the Lord Chamberlain's secret. It hasn't even the redeeming feature of being particularly naughty. In view of all Mr. Coward has written and is going to write, we'll have to forgive him for "This Was a Man." Anybody is liable to make a mistake sometime. He recently told me his "Fallen Angels" to be produced later in the season, is a great favorite of his, and that he believes his current London success, "The Queen Was In the Parlor," is going to be popular here.

At that, "This Was a Man" is by no means dull. It's just not what we've been led to expect from Mr. Coward. The cheerful presence of Francine Larrimore in the star part does much to help matters along.

No one has been more surprised than your correspondent himself at the comparative ease with which theater seats have been showered upon him by producers of shows. However, things have been going too nicely. The following was bound to happen. The other day I roamed into the office of a musical comedy press-agent and made my usual pretty speech about wishing to review his show in my column. After I had finished by picturesque recital, he glared at me rather hard and said, "But, Sonny, how do I know you're on the level?"

Of course he had me there. There's no answer to a question like that. But that seemed me to be entirely beside the point. When, if I may ask you, did I ever claim to be "on the level?"

"Agony in the Garden"

By BELLINI

This is the 43d of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotagravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY

IN the northern part of Italy during the latter half of the 14th, and the first half of the 15th centuries there were no fewer than twelve painters by the name of Bellini. All enjoyed reputations, but there was one who stood out and above the others like an Alexander on the banks of Hellespont—his name was Giovanni, born in the year 1428, shortly before Joan of Arc rode in the van of that French army at Orleans.

"Agony In the Garden," now the property of the National Gallery, London, is Bellini's masterpiece. In it he depicts a familiar scene in the Bible. After the Last Supper, Christ repaired to the garden, in the shadow of the Mount of Olives, taking with Him the three disciples, Peter, James and John. Here He grew sorrowful and sad as He fell on His knees and prayed. The three disciples overcome by fatigue fell asleep. Bellini has handled the subject with a delicate and pious reverence.

Jacop Bellini, the artist's father, attained the distinction of being the best painter in all Venice in his day, and when Giovanni was old enough he was placed in his father's studio to learn the trade. Biographers record that he developed slowly, yet, before he became of age, he could grasp the knowledge of design and execute better than his father.

Old Jacop, looked up to and admired, was proud of his own ability, and proud, too, was he of his son's ability, but Giovanni was usurping the title long held by the old master, and no one likes to lose a title—not even a father.

The father often sat and marveled at the ease with which Giovanni blended the refulgent colors on the canvas. In the son, he saw his master. He recognized the superiority of the work, so laying down his own palette and brush, he resolved never to paint again, and more, great as he was in his day, posterity knows of him, not for his ability, but because he was the father of Giovanni.

Bellini allowed no painting to leave his studio until he could not improve upon it. Discovering a flaw in his technique, he would suspend commissions until he mastered the weakness. His angels assume fine form—there is that divine, saintly look in their countenances that rivals the ones painted by Fra Angelico, and he never seems to exaggerate in expressing a feeling of pain or joy.

In 1516, three years before Leonardo passed away, Bellini died, aged eighty-eight. All spoke words of praise for his character, and his many paintings, which still grace the walls of the art galleries and churches throughout the world, from an undying memorial to the name, Bellini.

$2,000,000 Diamond Worn

Long Fruitless Search for Conde Gem Strengthens Belief It Was Stolen Not for Profit to Please the Vanity of Some Thief's Wife or Sweetheart and Will Never Be Recovered

THAT the world-famous pink diamond recently stolen from Chateau Chantilly, treasure house of the French Republic, is gracing some queen of the underworld is the most reasonable theory advanced by the cleverest detectives of Europe to explain their failure to recover the gem.

After a thorough "combing" of England and the continent, the ablest operators of the French Security Police and of Scotland Yard admit their fear that "the Great Rose"—that $2,000,000 gem of gems that glows with the rosy radiance of a perfect dawn—is lost to France and to the world of gem fanciers for all time.

Since the moment when the excited shouts of a faithful watchman echoed through the dim corridors of the historic chateau on the outskirts of Paris the search for the pink diamond has been feverishly conducted not only in France and in England but in every other country where gem thieves would be likely to go with their loot.

And after scores of theories have been sifted and rejected, the police are quite ready to admit that the priceless stone known to France as the Grand Conde and to the diamond connoisseurs of the world as the Pink Diamond is being worn next to the heart of some clever crook's favored lady.

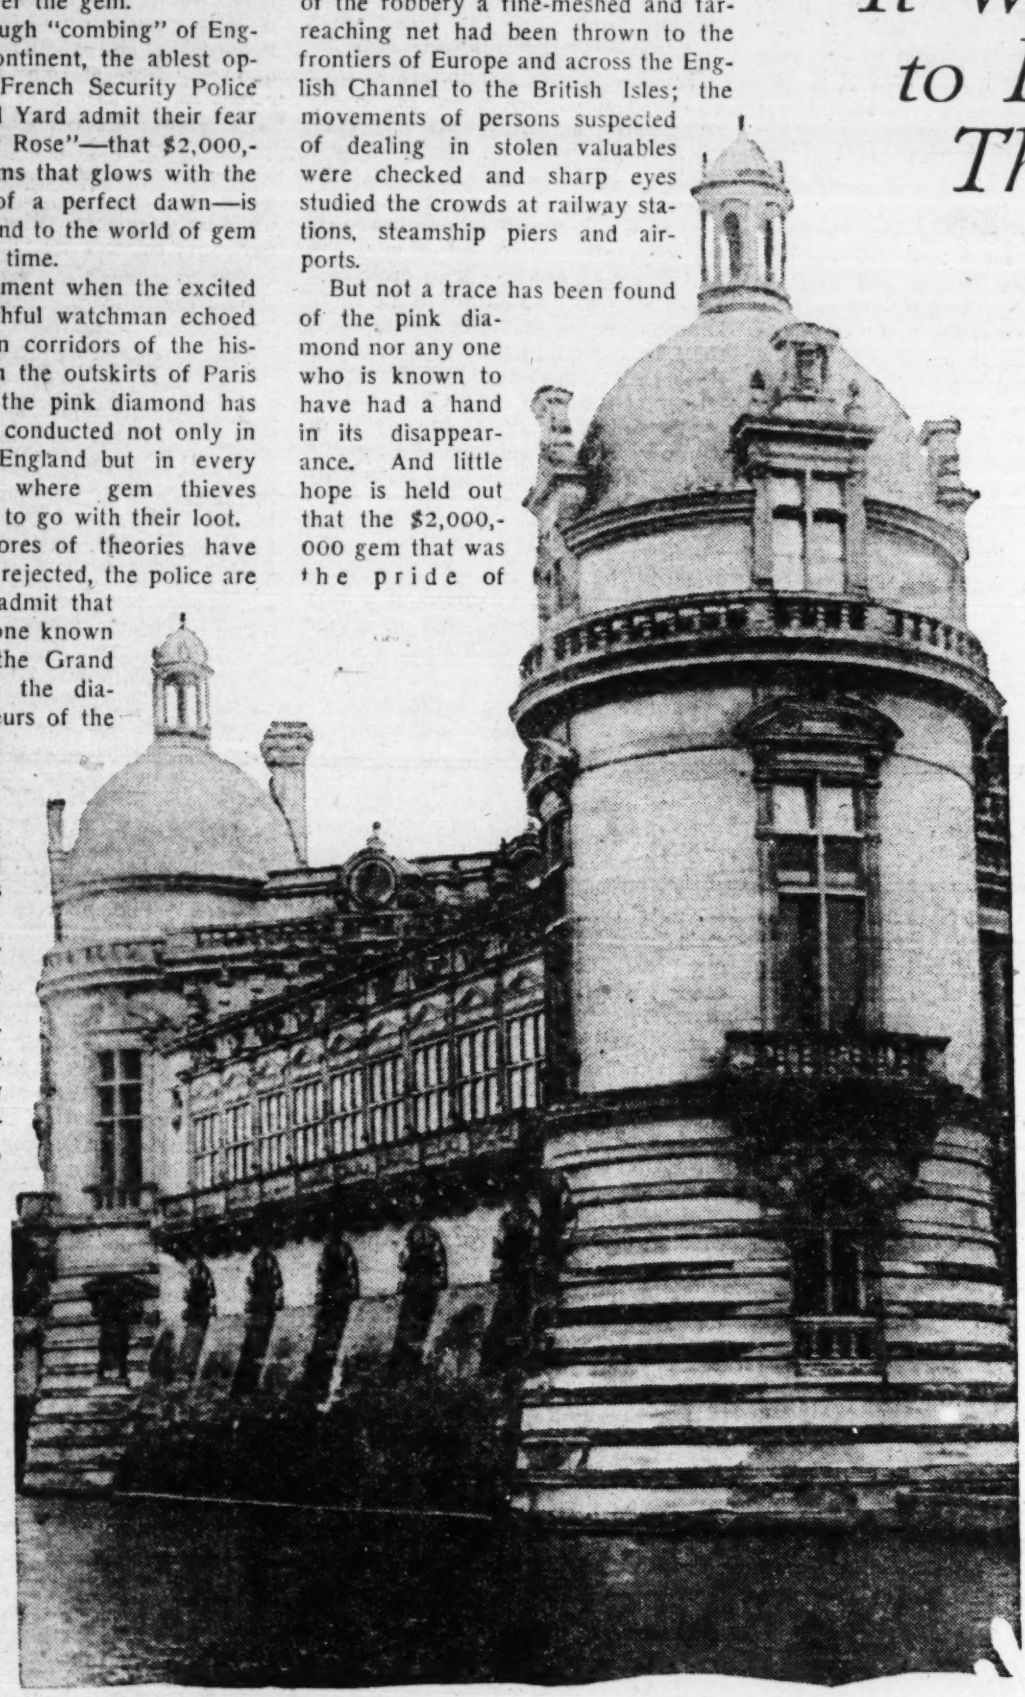

The detectives think that no jewel thief, bold and clever enough to enter the carefully guarded Chateau Chantilly, would be so foolish as to think there would be any chance of his marketing such a famous and distinctive stone as the pink diamond. The belief is growing that the diamond was stolen not to be turned into money, but to please the vanity and perhaps win the favor of some woman of the underworld.

According to this theory, the wife or sweetheart of the robber who looted the carefully guarded chateau of its most precious treasure had expressed a desire for one of the most beautiful and valuable diamonds in existence, and the thief gratified her wish by stealing for her nothing less than the Prince of Conde's peerless pink gem. The stone which royalty would be proud to wear is believed now to be in the possession of some underworld beauty who wears it proudly but very guardedly, lest it attract the attention of some one who will instantly know what it is and where it came from.

No "fence" or ligitimate buyer of jewels would dare take the gem, for even if it were cut into several smaller stones its distinctive rosy color would be too easily identified.

Hardly an hour after the discovery of the robbery a fine-meshed and far-reaching net had been thrown to the frontiers of Europe and across the English Channel to the British Isles; the movements of persons suspected of dealing in stolen valuables were checked and sharp eyes studied the crowds at railway stations, steamship piers and airports.

But not a trace has been found of the pink diamond nor any one who is known to have had a hand in its disappearance. And little hope is held out that the $2,000,000 gem that was the pride of

The historic and beautiful Chateau of Chantilly, twenty-five miles from Paris, from which thieves recently walked off with the marvelous pink diamond that once belonged to the Prince of Conde, marshal in the army of Louis XIV.

France will ever be seen again, except by a few privileged eyes in the European underworld.

The pink diamond, second in value only to the Cullinan diamond, is a strange gem with a strange history. No other diamond ever mined has the wondrous roseate hue that has made it known to gem fanciers the world over sometimes as "The Great Rose," and, in France, as the "Grand Conde" because its original owner was the Prince of Conde.

Its story, several centuries old, is written in blood. Legend tells us that it shone from the forehead of an ancient idol in the temple of a fabulously wealthy maharajah of India and that it was guarded night and day by a score of priests who were tortured and slain after a white man plucked it from the brow of the sacred idol.

What the fate of this first thief of the pink diamond was is not known, but it was next discovered in the possession of a Jewish peddler who sold it to Count de Runcieau, a wealthy aristocrat of France.

The count's beautiful mistress fell under the spell of the rosy lights that flashed from its polished face but was warned by a fortune teller that possession of the gem would bring disaster. For a time the lady laughed at this warning of impending tragedy but finally gave it back to her lover. Both were murdered in the night.

Again there is a gap in the history of "The Great Rose" and the fate of the murderer who took the gem from the dead body of Count de Runcieau is not known. But the legend of how the diamond got into the hands of the distinguished Conde family is regarded as part of the true story of the lost treasure.

A romantic young man of less exalted rank than the Condes fell deeply in love with the beautiful Princess Marguerite and had the temerity to ask her hand in marriage. Prince Henri Conde, then the head of the house, had no thought of giving his daughter in marriage to a suitor of humble birth.

So he smiled sardonically and told the youth he might have the princess when he appeared at the chateau with t the couch on which the lady lay. But she did not respond to his fond entreaties, for a dagger was plunged in her heart.

Frantic with grief the young man rushed to the door to tell Prince Henri of the tragedy, but the door was bolted and a harsh laugh greeted the young lover's frenzied beating of the door with his fists. In the morning his dead body was found beside that of the murdered lady of his heart.

The Great Conde, son of Henri, inherited the diamond on the death of the man who murdered his would-be son-in-law to get it, and the stone remained a priceless treasure of the family until the last of the historic house perished and the Chateau Chantilly became the property of France in 1897.

That the sensational robbery was carefully planned by thieves who knew the lay of the land is apparent, although the clumsy manner in which they left the treasure tower floor strewn with valuables too heavy to carry easily has led detectives to believe that the job was done by amateurs.

Two ladders were used by the thieves. One was thrown across the moat that surrounds the chateau and the other was raised to the balcony outside the high window by which the looters gained access to the Pink Diamond and other historic articles valued at $500,000.

Flimsy wooden shutters covered this window, but the thieves apparently had little difficulty in boring a hole in one of these and unlocking them. Once in the chateau's treasure room they made for the glass-topped cabinet in which the pink diamond glowed in all its magic beauty.

They did not stop to unlock the cabinet but smashed the glass that they might quickly grasp the famous $2,000,000 gem and be away before the watchman made his round. It is believed that the robbers knew that a watchman visited the treasure room sometime between 1:30 and 2:30 o'clock in the morning and that they timed their daring exploit accordingly.

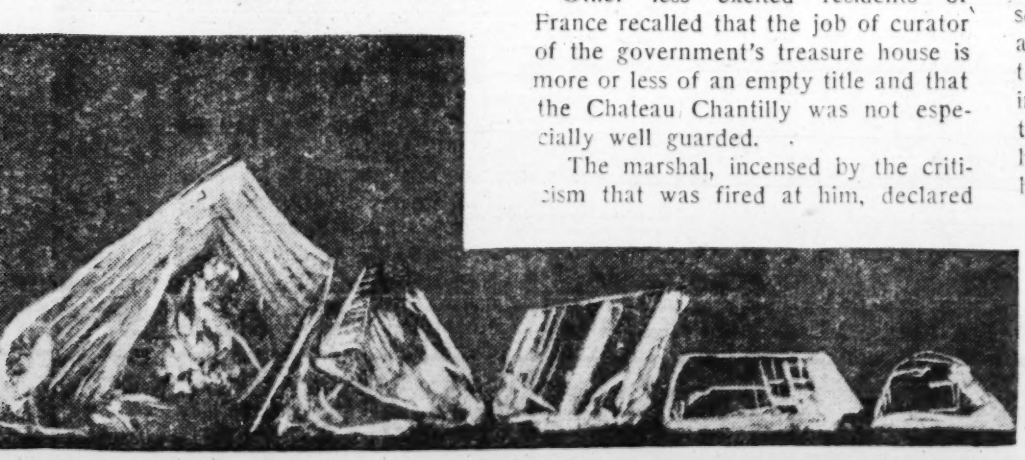

Besides the diamond, the burglars got away with two valuable jeweled daggers, a cross of the Legion of Honor made of diamonds, a diamond-studded belt and several gold bracelets. The treasure room was left in great disorder, for swords, pieces of ancient armor and other relics too heavy to carry away easily were scattered over the floor.

When the news of the robbery was broadcast to the world many Frenchmen said harsh words about Marshal Petain, French war hero and joint curator of the Chateau Chantilly with M. Paul Bourget, the author.

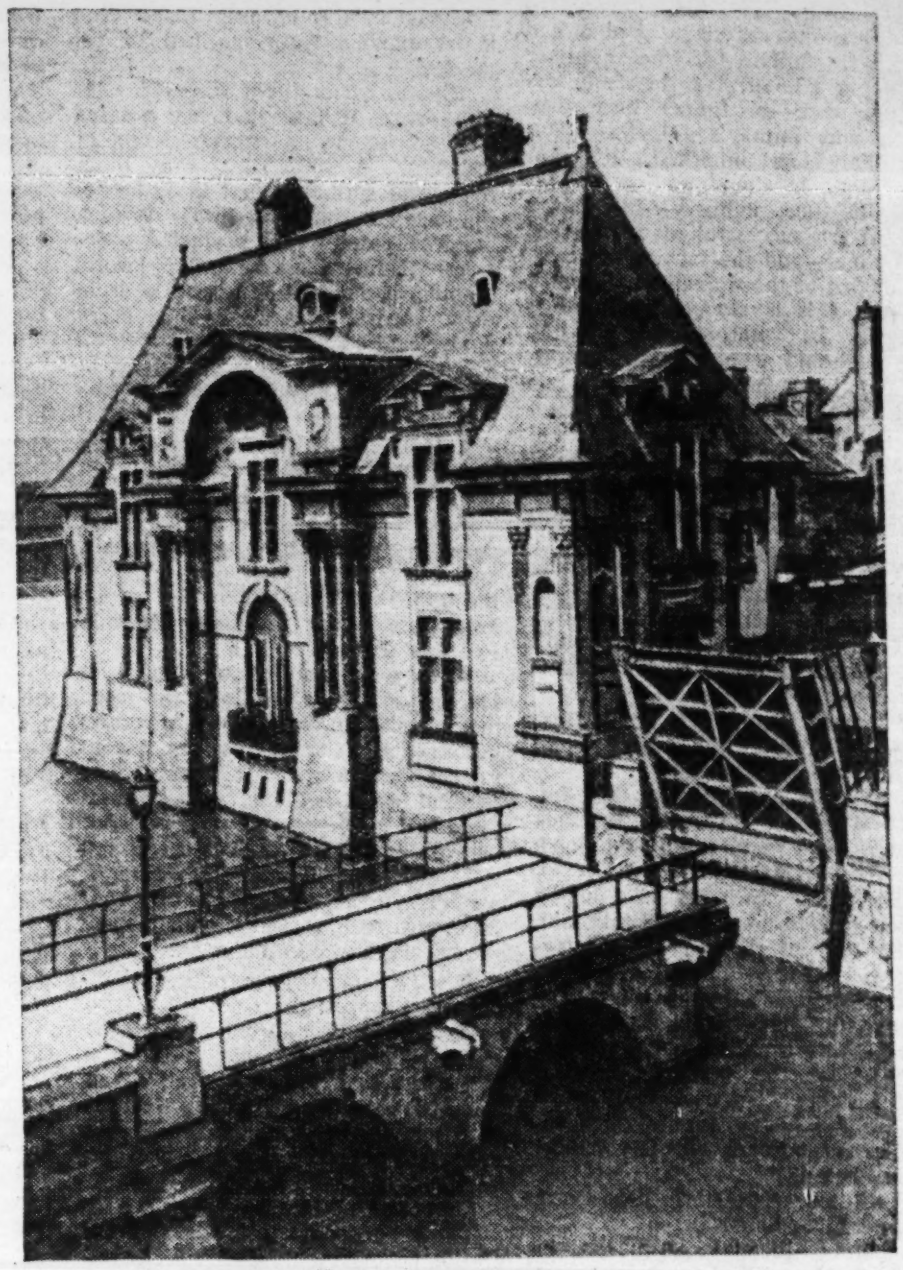

"He is to blame for this," they shouted with gesticulating arms. "Did he not know that the Grand Conde was as a magnet to the master crooks of Europe and the world? Where were his guards?"

Other less excited residents of France recalled that the job of curator of the government's treasure house is more or less of an empty title and that the Chateau Chantilly was not especially well guarded.

The marshal, incensed by the criticism that was fired at him, declared ost wonderful stone of its kind, was cut. The Conde pink diamond recently stolen from cond to the Cullinan diamond in beauty and value.

A view of the chateau showing the deep, wide moat that surrounds it. The police believe that the thieves, unable to lower the drawbridge, crossed the bridge with the aid of one of the ladders thy brought with them.

that he had more than once tried to get an appropriation that more watchmen might be hired to protect the pink diamond and other priceless relics from the possible attempts of robbers.

Copies of finger prints left on the rifled case which once housed "The Great Rose" were rushed across the channel to the offices of Scotland Yard and the London underworld was "combed" for a man whose finger print record was similar to the impression left in the chateau.

The Paris police are scouring France for an ex-convict related to a former watchman in the chateau who, they believe, may have told crooks just how to go about the job of stealing the pink diamond.

But the shrewdest detectives of Great Britain and the continent are frank to say that "The Great Rose" is lost forever and that it is even now being worn by some queen of the underworld who is the particular lady of the leader of the bold adventurers who gambled with death to get it for her.

A diamond cutter making in the Cullinan diamond the first of seven incisions that finally made seven stones of it.

Perhaps, when she learns the bloody history of the Grand Conde, she will hesitate to invite its curse and hide it away in some obscure spot known only to her and to the audacious crook who staged one of the most spectacular jewel robberies in the history of high crime. Maybe she'll snap her fingers at superstition and wear the celebrated crystal next to her heart, thrilled at the thought that few women have possessed a $2,000,000 token of love.

The vigilance of the police will not relax. To them mysteries are things to be solved, but they see only one chance of recovering the pink diamond. And that is the chance that the green-eyed god, Jealousy, may creep into the heart of some rival of the underworld lady and that she will take her revenge in a note to the police.

THE MAGIC MAN

A Blue

INSTALLMENT VI.

"A MOMENT ago," Roselius went on, "I referred to money as slag. Not a bad metaphor, for where you see a pile of slag there's a furnace—or there's been one. That's why money's a badge. Unless it's been inherited, it's apt to point to qualities of judgment, balance, industry—the things that set the successful man off from the failure—and the lack of it points to a dearth of those qualities. I don't say that this is always true, but it generally is. Before you married Rose I should want you to demonstrate that you have them. You see what I'm driving at?"

Schuyler did. He wet his lips and came out with it. Put into bald statement it made him flinch—like a hunter kicked by the recoil of his own gun:

"You think I ought to be earning enough to support myself."

"Does that seem unreasonable?"

"Then without that, you wouldn't —he forced it out—"wouldn't give your consent?"

"I haven't said quite that. If Rose loved you, that would carry great weight with me, of course."

In the poignant silence that followed Mitch arose to go. He took his departure externally contained, self-sufficient and superior as ever, though within him was seething a caldron of bitterness and resentment. At the foot of the curving, cherry-velveted stairway, beside a carved black cassone, a servant waited with his coat and hat. Mitch said goodnight with his usual easy cheerfulness.

Above, on the landing, Roselius stood looking contemplatively after him, till the heavy door clashed to. Then he turned back into the amber-glowing room.

"We'll see what stuff he's made of," he said to himself.

He climbed the stair, on the way to his room, thoughtfully. At the low Gothic door on the gallery he paused and turning aside to the organ, slid onto its polished bench.

But with his fingers on the keys he shook his head, swung round and got up again. His mood, somehow, was not translatable in music tonight.

Schuyler was in no lovely frame of mind when he came home to the empty house on Madison avenue.

In pajamas and slippers, at length he sat down, biting his nails and scowling at the guttering candle. If only he hadn't, in his stupid overconfidence, put himself into the hands of Roselius! With her father's opposition he saw his chance to win Rose pitifully dwindled.

He went over every word, every intonation of hers that afternoon.

"I think I know her." So Roselius had said. Perhaps he did, Mitch told himself, darkly.

As he lived over that moment in the Blue Garden, the blood beat in his pulses like little tom-toms—as it had done then. There came before him her face, oval and delicate, framed in its splendid bronze, with its short Greek upper lip, just curved enough, and its firm courageous chin. For one slender instant he had held her in his arms—that beautiful body with the softly rounded breasts and straight trim legs with her boyish stance, that he had once seen shoot down arrow-like from the high springboard at Melton, and emerge wet and golden and gleaming from the pool. God! How he wanted her! And only as lately as yesterday he had thought of her as a consolation prize for the loss of his bachelorhood!

Mitch sprang up and strode up and down the narrow space. It was past two o'clock, but he could not sleep. He felt himself caught in a net.

Gone now was that nonchalant assurance that an agreeable solution of his problem lay around any one of a dozen marital corners. He knew now that he wanted only Rose! And if he married Rose, he had to get money.

Ripples of impotent rage ran over him—rage at fate that had treated him so scurvy a trick. Rage at Roselius. A millionaire many times over, and springing that bring-home-the-bacon business on him! With a hundred patents and protected processes yielding hugs returns. "More than he could scatter to the birds in fifty wastrel years" — the burry phrase had stuck to his memory. So rich that he could snap his fingers at another fortune and throw into the fire his formula of the synthetic pearl —a secret good for the Lord only knows how much!

Protecting the sea pearl industry? Tommyrot! If a dealer couldn't sell pearls at profit, he'd sell emeralds, and why should Roselius care about the trade? Altruistic humbug! Much he'd care about it, if he were in Roselius' shoes!

A few written words and symbols in the drawer of his safe, and the pearl magnates down on their marrowbones before him. A scrap of paper, a penful of ink, worth millions. The thought fascinated him. And Roselius intended to destroy it. Why, if a burglar broke into Melton Park and stole that formula from his safe, it wouldn't make one cent's worth of difference to him, and it would make the burglar a multimillionaire!

Mitch's nervous pace suddenly halted. He stopped short.

A thought had darted to his agile brain. A mad, wild fancy that caught and clung as if it had hooked claws. The little tom-toms struck up their insane beating again in his blood, his skin rigid and the sweat broke out on the back of his hands.

Suppose he—found a way?

There had come to him a thought of the pawnshop in Everley square, with its rear room—Meg's Place and its dubious frequenters. Denny of the pale face and slick fingers. The Sporting Parson, ruddy-cheeked, silver-haired and foxy-eyed. Holloway—of whom Tim Hoye, the patrolman, had told him—who had served a term in a Montreal prison for safe-cracking. All of them on Meg's string. Such a job would be in her line—and there'd be enough in it for them all!

The trick would be not to take the formula but merely to copy it; then it would look like an ordinary burglary—as if the safe had been opened in a quest for money or valuables. If Roselius found the memorandum book missing he would know his secret had been stolen, and if there was to be any bonanza in it for them, he mustn't know—he must carry out his intention to destroy it. Besides, Roselius might suspect him, and that would stand to ruin his chance for Rose.

The air of the close room seemed suddenly stifling and he threw open the door. At the end of the corridor yawned the wide entrance of the drawing room. Its cooler atmosphere beckoned him and he caught up the candle and entered it.

He stood almost furtively, the candle flaring in the freer air, making his shadow huge upon the wall. Here between the windows hung those portraits of his forbears which, of less intrinsic than sentimental value, had failed so far of purchase.

"Here I am, a Schuyler, the last of the lot, down and out, stripped and beggared—worse than a beggar, for the beggar has no face to save. I've got to have money—I'm going to have it, by hook or by crook. I'm as honest as the next man, but I'm not going to give up what I want most in the world just because I'm squeamish or a coward. Destroyed, that pearl formula's of no value to anybody! Has a man a right to kill a scientific discovery like that, that would in the end give pleasure to millions of people? And is it robbery to take from a person what he doesn't want? Why shouldn't I hire some one to get it for me? He wouldn't even steal it; all he'd would be to copy it. Make them secretly—that would be easy to arrange—sell them quietly, and I could live forever on Easy street. And I could have Rose!"

He lifted the candle and held it up defiantly at the dust dim canvases. But there was no retort in the cold glint of those painted eyes.

He went back to his room and sat down by the open window, staring out into the nightly quiet, broken only by the occasional purr of a belated motor or the clip-trip-clop of a cab horse on the asphalt.

When, in the moan of the waking traffic, the gray dawn looked in, it found him still sitting there.

* * * *

In the rear room of Meg's place, under the hanging lamp, Greek George slapped two silver dollars on the red covered table with a scowl on his smooth olive brown face and snatched the dice. He rubbed them and rolled them expertly.

As the dice came to rest on Big Dick a slouching step came down the narrow stairway from the upper floor. It was Canuck, his expression heavy and listless. At the foot of the steps he yawned, then crossed the room and poured himself a sizable drink from a bottle that sat on the sideboard.

Denny gave him a morose glare.

"Nice hour of the day to be crawlin' out of the hay," he sneered.

"O, shut your trap, Denny!" Holloway spoke wearily. "You're always knocking the kid. He ain't done nothing."

"That's the trouble with him," returned Denny. "If he'd do something once in a while——"

"He just ain't found his right line yet," said the other. "Wait till he gets his chance."

" 'There is a tide in the affairs of men,' " quoted the Sporting Parson, straightening the carnation in his buttonhole. "What a student of life was the immortal bard! What is one's opportunity is not every one's. We are creatures of specialization. Some are born for one thing and some for another."

"Sure," agreed Holloway. "It's fate. I wouldn't be any good at strong arm work, and I ain't got the knack for gats. But show me a safe——"

"Whereas," supplemented the Parson, "when mechanical genius sets before you what is fondly fancied as an impenetrable receptable, you react to the challenge with inspiration."

"Yeah," assented Holloway, "that's it—in words of one syllable."

Canuck downed his drink with a gulp. He hated the taste of liquor, but its warm glow brought a pleasurable recklessness, and—if only for a dog's dream—made him forget the drab monotony and the sense of impotence and failure. He deigned no retort to Denny's jibe, but took his cap from a hook behind the stairway and went out by the rear door.

"The little slob!" ground Denny venomously. "Why Meg stands for it I can't see."

"Hell!" said Holloway. "Ain't she his mother?"

"Mother or no mother, if I was Meg, he'd go fast enough," said Denny.

"Mother love!" intoned the Parson. "A strange and beautiful thing. Without it life would——"

"Sing it to a hymn tune!" counseled Greek George. "She don't care a rap for him. She's snapped at him ever since I can remember. Am I right, Tug?"

Holloway shook his head. "You can't prove a thing by me. Women are funny things. You can never get your thumb on 'em."

The shop door clicked open as he spoke and Meg came in. At her nod Denny passed through into the shop and she closed the door.

"Boys, the game's cold. I've got to use the room. The back way, please. No, you stay, Tug. I want to talk to you."

The parson rose and bowed with empressement.

"Dear lady, au revoir." He took his hat, gloves and stick from a chair, and he and Greek George departed without further ceremony and with a certain smooth celerity. She locked the door after them.

Tug Holloway looked at her inquiringly. "What's up?"

"There's a man here I want you to see. He wants a safe opened."

"Has he jammed the combination?"

"He never had it," she said significantly.

"Well," he said, "spill it. Who is he?"

"A swell from uptown."

Holloway grunted. "Sounds like the old stool pigeon game."

She shook her head, a bit impatiently. "I've known him a long time—he's been here often. His old man was that millionaire Schuyler who went broke and blew his brains out a year ago—you remember?"

She sat down facing him, elbows on the table.

"The boy was left flat—only some jewels and old silver that had been his mother's. I've been buying off and onn, and he's been running along on that, but he's come to the jumping off place. He doesn't know how to work. He's been brought up to be a spender —one of the top-notchers—and he's got to have the dough."

He looked at her frowningly. "So he's sicking us onto one of his rich friends, eh?" He'd have to show me."

"He can," she said, with confidence. "This is the biggest thing that's ever come our way. Take my word for it."

"Where's this safe?"

"At a place called Melton Park on Long Island."

He gave a low whistle. "The Roselius place—the fellow they call the Wizard?"

"Yes. This lad goes there. I guess he's been stringing the daughter. He's clever and he knows what he's about. This isn't an ordinary safe job with a thousand dollars or so in it. It means velvet for us all, and, if it comes off, velvet a foot thick. I want you to listen to him."

Holloway nursed his blue-black chin in his palm.

"It won't do you any hurt to see him. You can size him up for yourself and if it doesn't look good to you, why that's the end of it. But I haven't given you many bum steers yet."

"That's right, Meg," he said. "You've got a long head. Well, bring him in. We'll see how it listens."

She went quickly into the shop and he turned to the sideboard and poured himself a drink—a very small one—and sipped it slowly.

A moment more and Meg entered with Mitchell Schuyler.

The latter was not quite his contained self of the day before. His fingers had a nervous twitch, and a tight band was across his forehead. He wished he had stopped for a rejuvenator in a discreet place he knew on his way downtown, for in his throat was the rasp of hot sandpaper.

Mitch nodded to the man standing by the sideboard and his eyes fell to the bottle. Meg caught the glance. She poured a generous glass and handed it to him and he took it gratefully. He drank it at a draft.

Ribbon Serial By Hallie Erminie Rives

"Thanks, awfully," he said. "I needed that."

"My friend, Mr. Holloway," said Meg. "Tug, this is the gentlemen I told you of."

Holloway sat down and his eyes traveled over Schuyler like a measuring worm.

"I hear you've got a safe in mind you think wants opening," he said presently. "At Melton Park."

"You know the place, then?" The glow of the liquor was running pleasantly along Mitch's nerves.

"I'll bet I do. Ten foot stone wall—watchmen all over the place, I expect, and a membership in the National Protective association. It'd be harder to get into than a penitentiary, and not near so safe."

"The estate is entirely open on the water side," said Mitch, "and the southern side is the railroad cut. That part of the grounds is so covered with shrubbery that a cow could walk in and nobody see it."

"Wait a minute," said Holloway. "Is it coin or sparklers in this can, and how is it you know so much about it?"

"It's neither one. What I'm after is something written on a memorandum book in one of the safe drawers."

"Blackmail?" said Holloway. "That ain't my line."

No, it's a chemical and electrical process. Words and figures written on the last page of that book."

"Have a heart!" jeered Holloway. "Butt into a place and tap a safe—like as not ending up in Sing Sing and maybe getting drilled into the bargain—for a scrap of paper?"

Meg touched him on the arm.

"Hold on, Tug. Wait till you hear what it is that's on it."

"It's a secret formula," said Mitch. "A way to make pearls—to make them as cheap as marbles. Roselius has worked it out. Not the kind of imitation pearls you see in the shop windows, but pearls that the biggest expert can't tell from those that come out of the sea. Noth with a magnifying glass, or by any other test known. Pearls worth not thousands of dollars but hundreds of thousands—millions!"

Holloway leaned forward, interested now. "The hell you say!"

"He's seen them, Tug!" said Meg. He's seen them with his own eyes."

"You have?"

"Yes. The three biggest pearl men of the whole world have been at Melton Park trying to buy that formula to protect themselves."

Holloway spoke slowly. "Suppose some one got it the way you say. What's to prevent the old man from beating us to the place?"

"Roselius is a queer duck," said Schuyler. "He thinks it would ruin the trade in real pearls and lose money for a lot of people. He's so rich he doesn't want any more himself. He's going to burn the formula up."

Holloway stared. "Well, what do you know about that!"

"We don't want the memorandum book stolen or even the leaf torn out. We want the last page copied and the book left right where it is."

"What's the idea in that?" asked Holloway.

"So Roselius won't suspect the formula's been lifted. We want him to go ahead and destroy it. When we once know how, we can make the pearls on the quiet and sell as we please. Not too many at once, naturally."

Holloway frowned. His youthful education had not carried far. By dint of application he could spell out the headlines in a newspaper, but thereabout his learning lapsed. Meg, who was not unaware of his shortcomings in this direction, was looking at him doubtfully. Schuyler had not told her this detail of the copying.

"What's this thing—this formula—like?"

"Like this." Mitch tore off the blank leaf of a letter from his pocket and wrote on it with his fountain pen. "You see—like a druggist's prescription—letters and figures mixed up together. It's very important that everything on the page be copied, every letter and figure. Even the smallest mistake might dish the whole thing."

Tug thought a moment. Then he said. "Suppose you wait outside a bit while me and Meg talk this over."

He rose and opened the door and Schuyler passed through into the shop. "Denny," called Tug, "is Canuck there?"

"No. Guess he's over at the Dago's."

"Go and see if he is, will you? I want him."

Denny went out, and Tug closed the door between the two rooms.

"Tug, you're not thinking of taking Canuck in on this?"

Holloway glanced up—he thought Meg was looking at him strangely. "Why not? What's the matter with the pair of us for a team? Me to open the can and him to get away with that copying stuff?"

"I don't like it, Tug. I don't want him mixed up in it. I—he'll bungle it."

"But, Meg, you know damn well I could never get away with it. A whole bunch of stuff like that, all up and down and flyspecks and pluses and minuses? And me with only an electric torch, too? Hell, no! But it'll be dead nuts for Canuck. I'm going to do the hard part. All he'll need is a pair of sneakers and a lead pencil."

"Take Greek George," she said, "or Oliver, or any one of the others. Canuck isn't fit for it."

"No; I'd rather have the kid. There's nothing wrong with him, Meg. He ain't had half a show, and I want him to pull off something worth while and give the razz to ones that are always knocking him."

"Why can't he go out west?" she broke out with sudden vehemence. "He could find a job or something. He's no good at this game of ours."

"I'm for giving him some chance," he said. "You want him to get on, don't you? The way to do it ain't by making him believe he's no damn good. You ought to encourage him."

She hesitated, turned away and stood staring at nothing, while he regarded her side-face puzzledly. She faced him at last. "Tug—if I ask you——"

But she was not to finish. On the instant the back door opened and Canuck slouched in. His face was set in sullen lines and a cigarette depended loosely from his mouth-corner.

"Denny says you want me, Tug," he said. "What's up?"

Holloway tapped the paper he had been studying with his finger. "Do you know what that is?"

"It's a chemical formula."

"What does it mean?"

"I don't know. That big O stands for oxygen, but I don't know what the rest means."

"Could you copy a page like that without making any mistake?"

"Sure! What's there hard about it?"

"Well, it'd stump me," said Holloway. "Listen, kid. I'm going to pry open a can over on the island, and I might take you along."

"He'll gum the works, Tug," said Meg.

Canuck reddened. "This isn't your job," he retorted angrily.

"I ain't afraid you'll bungle it, kid," said Holloway, and in few words sketched for him Schuyler's proposal.

Canuck's eyes sparkled. Not the gang—only Tug and him! "Great," he said.

Tug opened the shop door and beckoned Schuyler into the room.

"All right," he said succinctly, "we'll take it on."

But Mitch was looking at Canuck askance. He remembered him, though at this moment Canuck was far from appearing the spruce and natty Eighth avenue boulevarder he had been a few nights before kittening with Fritzie of the cabaret.

"See here," he objected. "I don't care to mix that up with a crowd."

"Canuck, here, is my side-kick," said Holloway. "It's a two-man job and he's in it with me, or I don't touch it. Let's hear your proposition."

They sat down at the red-covered table, while Meg stood behind them, leaning against the sideboard, listening.

"We'll split three ways," said Schuyler. "The point is to get the formula quick, before it's gone." He spoke eagerly now, his words fairly tumbling over one another.

"Tell me the lay of the place."

Schuyler leaned forward, his chest against the table edge.

"You'd best get in from the cut. That's easy. Any time after 1 o'clock; Roselius, as a rule, goes to bed before that. The butler and a maid are the only servants up after 11. You go straight through the shrubbery till you strike a road. That's the service drive. It has a low white fence running along one side. Follow it on the left and it brings you to the servants' door. There's a dog, and I suppose electric burglar alarms, but I guess you know how to handle them."

"No burglar alarm ever bothered me," said Holloway. "And I've got a silencer for the pup. Sounds fair so far. How about the inside?"

Mitch took the paper on which he had jotted down his quasi formula, sketched rapidly for a moment and wrote words upon it here and there.

"Here's the dining room. This hall leads to the stair. The door here at the turn opens into the room you want—a hugs room running up two stories, with a balcony around three sides. The safe is set in the wall—just here—under the corner of a tapestry. You can't miss it. It has a row of drawers. In the last drawer on the right is a black memorandum book and what we want is written on the last page."

He pushed the diagram across the table.

"There it is in a nutshell," he said. 'Suppose you make a copy of it."

Holloway's deft hand folded the paper and pocketed it.

"We'll keep this one," he said, "just to remember your handwriting by."

Mitch flushed, but covered his resentment with a laugh. "As you like it. When do you think you can do it?"

"Monday night," said Holloway. "There's no moon till late."

The baroness pushed away the cribbage board.

"Games are stupid," she said, "but I can't talk all night like those two men. They've been at it ever since dinner, and now"—she looked at the tall clock—"it's half past eleven."

Miss Thorp blinked at the clock face through her thick lenses.

"It's an enormous treat to the governor," she said, in her firm contralto. "He hasn't been as pleased at anything since I can remember as at this visit of yours and Dr. Florian's."

As she spoke the door of one of the work rooms under the gallery opened to the sound of approaching voices lifted in altercation. The baroness groaned.

"The pleasure men take in fighting! Squabble, squabble, squabble! You'd think they'd die of words on the brain!"

Rose, curled in a big chair under the reading lamp, with a new novel on her knee, laughed. "Rah-rah simply wallows in it. He loves a row. It's the only way he can blow off steam."

The two men crossed the floor in wordy contention, Florian gesticulating. "Don't try to teach me my business. Don't you suppose I know what shock is?"

"No, you don't," contradicted Roselius, belligerently. "You call it shock because you don't know what it really is—only that it's a collapse of the nerve centers. Well, I've found a ray that revitalizes 'em."

He grinned at Florian's look of incredulity.

"When I'm through playing with it I'll present the thing to the National Sawbones association, and all you tinkers can use it. I was making some atomic experiments—only discovered its effect on body-tissue by accident. It'll bring back to life a rabbit that has been what you, in your ignorance, would call dead for three hours."

The baroness reached for her cane and tattooed with it on the floor.

"Roselius," she exclaimed, "for heaven's sake stop quarreling about rabbits! What have the poor little things done to you? I'm cross with you, Roselius. You've left us women alone again a whole evening, and we're going to bed to punish you. At least I am, and I hope Miss Thorp is going, too, for I see she is sleepy. Rose, child, you ought to have been in bed an hour ago."

Miss Thorp rose with suppressed enthusiasm. She was a good soldier and no one would have guessed with what longing she had been thinking of her virgin couch for the last hour.

The old lady got up and tap-tapped to her host.

"Good night, Roselius," she said. "Don't let Prosper argue too much. It isn't good for him. It makes him always bad tempered the next day."

She went to Rose and kissed her.

"Good night, my dear. Don't forget the beauty sleep. Ah, youth, youth! What a thing it is, Roselius! If only one could always be twenty! When I was Rose's age, the men, ah, the men!"

"Be careful, Helene," cautioned Roselius, "or I shall be making love to you."

"No man over forty knows how to make love," she retorted. "And no woman forgets how till she is four hundred. But I wager you made love well when you were twenty, Roselius."

"I was a piker at it," he said. "I used to take lessons from Prosper. Do you remember Gretchen, Prosper, the barmaid at the White Hart? And Crab Apple Cheeks who used to bring us our kugelhupf at the Thiergarten?"

Florian reset his pince-nez and coughed. "Rather!" he said.

"Very soft on little Crab Apple Cheeks you used to be, Prosper! But, of course, after I'd taken a lesson or two it was me she was really in love with."

"No doubt, no doubt!" retorted Florian. "She developed a criminal tendency, I remember."

"Well," said Roselius, "I wouldn't wonder if we both discovered things about her that God hadn't much to do with."

"Roselius, Roselius, I'm ashamed of you!" said the baroness. "Really, I don't think I should leave you two here with such improper reminiscences! Come, Rose, with us. This is going to be no place for little pink ears like yours."

Rose leaned over and kissed her father on the cheek.

"Good night, my dear," he said, patting her hair, that was bright as a locust's wing, with his big hand. "Sleep well. I need you tomorrow for my inspiration you know."

Things New and Old About The Bible :

By W. P. KING

Cruelty in Nature.

I.

A PERPETUAL problem to the perplexed mind of man is the presence of the cruel aspects of nature.

W. P KING

The larger part of animal creation are at ceaseless warfare in which the strong devour the weak.

In the water the marine animals feed upon one another. They are equipped for battle with their poisonous stings and sharp lances.

John Stuart Mill is fierce in his arraignment of the cruelty of nature. He writes: "Killing, the most criminal act recognized by human law, Nature does once to every being that lives; and in a larger proportion of cases, after protracted torture such as only the monsters whom we read of ever purposely inflicted on their living fellow creatures." Mill contended that Nature seemed to have a grudge against man and treated him with indiscriminating spite. Huxley describes nature as "a vast gladiatorial body," "a dismal cockpit."

Are we able to harmonize this stern side of nature with a religious and spiritual interpretation of the world?

Alfred Russel Wallace writes: "On the whole, then, we conclude that the popular idea of the struggle for existence entailing misery and pain on the animal world is the very reverse of the truth. What it really brings about is the maximum of life and of the enjoyment of life with the minimum of suffering and pain." The verdict of Darwin was, "When we reflect on this struggle, we may console ourselves with the full belief that the war of nature is not incessant, that no fear is felt, that death is generally prompt, and that the vigorous, the healthy and the happy survive and multiply."

It is doubtless true that the suffering of the lower animal order is exaggerated. We are prone to make a wholesale kind of estimate when the fact is that there is no such thing as a sum total of wretchedness. Even in the realm of the human there is no more suffering than the utmost suffering that any one person endures.

But even with this explanation we can find no easy solution for the suffering that is in the world. Harry Emerson Fosdick writes: "Modern science has given terrific sweep and harrowing detail to Paul's assertion, 'The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.' Let one whose insight into misery's meaning is quickened by even a little imagination try to sum up the agony of drunkards' homes, of bereaved families, of hospitals, insane asylums, jails and prisons, of war with its unmentionable horrors, its blinded, deafened, maddened, raped, and no small palliatives can solve his problem."

The traditional interpretation was to relieve God of all responsibility and attribute all suffering even in the animal world to man. But we now know that for millions of years before man lived, the earth consisted of "the dragons of the prime that tore each other in their slime." The lower creatures were in ceaseless struggle with teeth and talons, and there was the reign of terror and torture.

Man was not responsible for that. Romaner raised the question: "For cold that freezes God's living creatures, for lightning that kills them, for volcanoes that burn them, for typhoons that crush them, is man responsible?"

Is it possible to harmonize the power that destroys through forces of nature and arms the animals for the carnage of conflict with the tender and infinite love of a heavenly father?

II.

While the entire problem presented is not an easy one, yet there are some considerations which relieve the tenseness of the problem.

1. A world of law is better than a world of caprice. Pope pertinently asks: "Shall gravitation cease when you go by?"

A world of law involves of necessity suffering.

A world of progress is better than a world of stagnation.

Whatever measured questions may remain as to the universality and continuity of pain, we do know that there has been the uniform and steady progress towards higher and more perfect forms of life.

An increase of happiness is better than a low order of pleasurable sensation. The joy of life has been increased by suffering. The poet sings: "Chords that vibrate sweetest pleasure thrill the deepest notes of woe."

We are told that the Perfect Man, "For the joy that was set before him, endured the cross despising the shame."

Dr. Newman Smyth says: "Comparing any later stage of the development of life with earlier stages of it, the gain is always on the side of happy sentiency. The true of life has its fairest blossoms at the top. The singing birds build their nests among the upper branches. Wider vistas of joy open ever as life ascends."

A world that is constituted for building and perfecting character is better than a world of ease and ignorance. Character cannot be achieved except through pain and struggle and resistance and opposition. To him that overcometh is given the crown of life. Struggle and adversity and antagonism are necessary to produce patience and courage and sympathy. Fosdick writes again: "If now we really want a world in which character is the end and aim, and no other world is worth God's making, we obviously may not demand the abolition of adversity. If one imagines a life from its beginning lapped in ease and utterly ignorant what words like hardship, sorrow and calamity imply, he must imagine a life lacking every virtue that makes human nature admirable. Character grows on struggle; without the overcoming of obstacles great quality in character is unthinkable. He who banishes hardship banishes hardihood; and out of the same door with calamity walk courage, fortitude, triumphant faith and sacrificial love. If we abolish the cross in the world we make impossible the Christian man. It becomes more clear, the more one ponders it, that while this is often a hard world in which to be happy, to men of insight and faith it may be a great world in which to build character."

With a true insight into the divine purpose we shall appreciate the sublimity of the words of Joyce Kilmer, the war poet:

"Thank God for the stress and pain of life,
And, oh, thank God for God."

to see her, that he wanted nothing more to do with her.

On the witness stand the beautiful defendant told her life story in low, soft tones. She kept her lovely brown eyes on the jury as she talked. There were tears in them as she told of mistreatment at the hands of the man she was charged with killing. He repeatedly beat her until she feared for her life, she testified.

Her Pitiful Tale.

"He dragged me to the lowest depths," she told her twelve judges. "He sold me because he wanted money and after he had spent the money that had been paid for me he

"Hunger and privations were the forces that played me into his hands. He sold me to Emil Strouss at a time when I didn't know where the next never rested until he got more.

meal was coming from. When I went to Europe with Mr. Strouss I was heartsick and heartbroken. I had found out what sort of creature the man I loved was. I had been hungry and cold so long that all there was left to me was to go along and make the best of things and try to forget.

"At the very last he tried to blackmail me. He told me he would withdraw his suit against Mr. Strouss if I would give him everything I had in the world, but I knew it was no use. I had bought him off so often and as soon as he got the money he would turn against me. So I refused and he spat in my face and he called me a name no woman can endure to hear —and the rest you know."

Under a scathing cross examination she kept her poise until letters from her to Patterson were read showing that subsequent to the occasions on which she declared he severely beat her she addressed him in endearing terms. She called him "Darling Pet" and signed herself "Your Soul Mate." Extracts read from Patterson's diary showed his growing bitterness toward her and his mistrust.

In one letter to his mother he wrote that to the outside world she was a charming woman but at home she was a "regular demon." In another letter he wrote that it was the annoyances and threats to which he had been subjected that had worn his strength and worried him into tuberculosis. He charged that sluggers had been hired to kill him but he had made no complaint for fear of staining his wife's good name.

His Days Numbered.

His mother, Mrs. Mary Patterson, testified that she had paid all the expenses of his illness, not the defendant. Once in Chicago, she said, her daughter-in-law had written her, threatening to send the sick man to a charitable institution if the mother did not send money.

Physicians who had attended Patterson at the sanitarium testified that he was dying from tuberculosis at the time he was shot and would have had only a short time to live had he not been killed. He was too weak, they declared, to harm any one.

Gertrude Patterson read Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Gaol" as she waited for the jury to decide her fate. When she heard the verdict of acquittal she danced with joy.

She left Denver soon after her acquittal. It was reported she went to Chicago to join Strouss. Later she sailed for Europe, and the last heard of her she was living in a chateau near Paris.

After her trial the two Gertrude Pattersons revealed by the testimony were summed up by Chick Patterson's attorney and brother, Harry Patterson.

"If my brother had met Gertrude before she met Strouss there would never have been a Strouss in her life. Strouss could offer the glowing baubles and Egyptian fleshpots that tempted her and the cough-racked consumptive who loved her could not offset the advantage enjoyed by the rich man.

"It was impossible for my brother and Gertrude to be happy. There was always a shadow between them—the shadow of the man who had a prior claim to Gertrude Patterson."

The Haunt of Blue River

me—what Uncle Roddy calls 'the conscious ego.' But suppose I am merely a conscious ego? I've never been in this place before—yet I know it. I think I know what Blue River is like. I've dreamed of it so often—I mean a place like this, exactly like . . . There was a man they talked to with their hands. I remember him. He made a doll for me out of a—a—what was it, I wonder? It rattled when you shook it. Perhaps it was a gourd. I wonder why I haven't thought of him before?"

Gabrielli did not leave her alone for long. He came dashing back, forgetful of her plea for solitude.

"O, I say, aren't you going to have a look at the launch? It's a jolly old tub. What a priceless life Straker must lead! There are two chaps in charge and one of 'em told me Straker goes all the way down to the 'keys' in it by the inland water route and that perhaps he'll take us if he likes us. Original sort of fellow, that boatman. The other's older—and he's a deaf mute."

"What?" Alison asked sharply.

"Deaf and dumb, talks with his fingers like this—see? You didn't know I knew the deaf and dumb alphabet, did you?"

"No," Alison replied, her voice shaking a little. "But I'm not surprised. Apparently there isn't much that you don't know."

II.

It seems that now Alison did not want to inspect Miles Straker's launch.

Instead, she clenched her hands and lips and by exercising every ounce of self-control managed to walk quietly by Gabrielli's side back to the hotel.

Professor Blount and Madame Duplessus had retired for the night, and Roderick Blair stood leaning against a pillar refilling his pipe. He listened while Gabrielli chattered about the launch and the boatmen, but he noticed that Alison was silent and that her face looked white and pinched.

"I think you'd better go to bed, my dear," when he could get a word in. "We make an early start tomorrow."

"Half past eight the fellow told me," Gabrielli informed him. "He wanted it to be seven, but I told him we'd never get the professor on the move so early."

Alison said, "Yes, I'll go in presently. There was something I wanted to ask you, Uncle Roddy."

Her voice held a timorous hesitating note which Gabrielli was quick enough to detect.

"Guess I'd better say good night, then. You've no idea how standoffish she's been, Mr. Blair. I can take a hint as well as anybody."

"Don't be cross," Alison said, gently. "Yes, I do want to see Uncle Roddy alone for a few minutes, if you don't mind."

Gabrielli did mind, but he had the sense to realize it would be absurd to pretend jealousy of old Blair, even to himself. Besides Alison had given him no right to be jealous.

She sat down on the steps, elbows on her knees, propping her face in her hands. Another long call from some forest animal set her to shaking as with a mortal chill.

"What is it you wanted, my dear?" Roderick Blair asked.

He seated himself beside her, and she felt comforted by his nearness.

"Uncle Roddy, when we die, do we always know it at once? I mean—well, you remember what you wrote in 'Memory and the Conscious Mind'?—that chapter on dreams and the stimulation of the senses through objects seen, touched or smelt in infancy, or—as you said—it might be possible even in some other existence."

"You've never been here before, have you, Uncle Roddy?"

"No, but I shall come again."

"I've been here before," Alison said, uncertainly. "Don't laugh, Uncle Roddy—but I have. That's why I wondered if I could have died, and you, too, because if you weren't dead and I was, we couldn't be sitting here talking together, would we? I'm a ghost, Uncle Roddy, and I must have died a long, long time ago, because I've forgotten so much that I ought to remember. One of the boatmen is a deaf mute. There was a man here in that other life of mine who talked by moving his fingers. He made a doll for me out of a gourd. He painted a face on it and pinned a red handkerchief around its neck."

Blair put another match to his pipe which persisted in going out.

"Uncle Roddy, you don't think I'm crazy, do you?" Alison added.

"I think you've been trying to grapple with subjects which only hard headed old fogies like Blount and me ought to be allowed to touch," he replied. "You've had a dream some time in which tropical scenery figured, and your conscious memory retains an impression of it. That's all. There's a little more accounting for dreams than for our various theories of life after death. Go to bed and take an old man's advice—don't dream."

She got up with a little sigh, bewildered, deeply distressed, so isolated that such loneliness of soul seemed impossible to bear.

"Good night, Uncle Roddy."

"Good night, my child."

Blair sat there for some time after she had gone in. A certain amount of solitude was necessary for him; in fact a great deal of it. He did not understand the meaning of the word "loneliness."

In the morning there was the pleasant bustle of departure, enlivened and a little obstructed by Victor Gabrielli who in the enthusiasm of snapshotting the Royal Palm and the bay and various other items, had forgotten to assemble his luggage until the last moment.

The launch had a cabin and a deck with an awning. It was not luxurious, but very spick and span and comfortable.

Madame Duplessus settled herself in the most commodious of the wicker chairs while Blair went to speed up Gabrielli and Professor Blount argued that quite reasonably the youth might be left behind.

In these few moments when no one was claiming her attention, Alison Morrow took stock of the launch's crew. The tall, freckled youth with the pole was waiting to push off.

Presently the laggard Gabrielli appeared perspiring under the weight of his suitcase and apologizing as profusely. Blair helped the boatman to push off and the little launch swung around, heading south.

Distance slipped away and it was high noon when Alison grasped Roderick Blair's arm and pointed to the stark skeleton of a pine tree which stood out all by itself almost at the water's edge.

"Blue River," she said.

The engineer saw her point, knew what she meant, and nodded with a smile.

At the same moment Gabrielli called back to them from his post of intelligence beside the man at the wheel:

"That's the mouth of Blue River—that's where we turn in—by that dead pine. You wouldn't guess there was a river there at all, would you?"

Madame Duplessus threw a puzzled look at Alison.

"How is it that you knew?" she asked.

"I thought it might be," Alison said slowly. "Somebody probably told me there was a landmark."

She avoided Roderick Blair's eyes, but she knew that he was staring at her and that very likely he, too, was puzzled.

From now on she meant to keep this curious thing to herself and make no more confidences, even to dear Uncle Roddy.

III.

From the mouth of Blue River the launch was propelled by poling, like a gondola, the youth at the bow and the deaf-mute engineer at the stern, through a fascinating wilderness, exotic in subtropical life. Alligators, snuggled in the cozy comfort of warm mud banks, slid reluctantly into the water at their stealthy approach; plumage birds took graceful flight; coveys of quail and rice birds disappeared with a whir of wings, and a flock of wild turkeys, headed by a dignified old cock, stalked off majestically through the underbrush. Here and there a magnolia tree, heavy with scented blossoms, bent to the surface of the little winding stream, and everywhere from every tree, bush, shrub, or tangle of wild grapevine hung the cloudy streamers of "Florida moss," gray and curly like an old man's beard.

Another bend of the river brought them into a wide, smooth stretch like a placid lake or lagoon, and this was "Straker's."

Here was a curious combination, a mixture of the wilderness with that species of art which occasionally intrigues patrons of the drama in small towns.

There was no pier, but a flight of marble steps flanked by urns of flowers led up from the lagoon, familiar objects in the richly painted scene of an old-fashioned drop curtain, a flight of steps that spread out gloriously fanwise, accompanied on either side by a curved marble rail.

Indeed, the scenery was a hopeless mixture. A fine road of powdered oyster shell bordered by an imposing double row of royal palms drew the eye toward a settlement of unpainted, weather-stained buildings resembling barns or huge sheds camped in a flat, open space which might be described as a meadow of wire grass springing from a waste of sand.

A flock of white peacocks ruffled their snowy plumage in the sand under a drooping live oak, and on the edge of the pine forest a herd of very small deer raised alert and curious eyes.

It looked as though the visitors were to get no reception at all except from the sun, whose warmth was cordial and unrestrained. They were thirsty, tired, and even hungry.

At this crisis Freckled Face blew a whistle and immediately the whole scene came to life.

A group of black boys sprang up from a palmetto grove to the right, digging midday sleep out of their eyes even as they raced barelegged through the whipping wire grass to fall upon the travelers' luggage.

And behind them strode a tall white man, amongst them, shaking hands, learning who was who, and explaining that he had expected them nearly two hours ago. He had thought they would have started from Fort Myers at seven.

His fine gray eyes darted from one to another.

Gabrielli, who was built on slender lines, noted the great muscular strength of this enigmatic genius of the backwoods and Roderick Blair caught the quick intelligence of the gray eyes. Madame Duplessus loved him instantly for the way he took possession of her arm and informed her that all he had ever learned about women which he could understand was through her translated lectures. She had at last made her sex reasonable to him. Professor Blount almost capered when Miles Straker told him that tomorrow he had promised himself—if the professor did not mind—a whole day in the glass furnaces in his company. There was so much that he, Miles Straker, had to learn from him, Josiah Blount.

Victor Gabrielli was a little out of the picture, but not completely. He had caught and held Straker's attention for a good moment on the subject of baths and food.

"We have a pumping system," Straker said. "But I expect you'd rather have something to eat first and a bath and siesta afterwards."

Alison Morrow was the only one left entirely out of it.

As far as she knew Miles Straker hadn't even seen her. In giving her the firm, crisp hand-clasp which he bestowed upon all of them he had kept up his warm reception of Professor Blount.

With Miles Straker, Alison's dreams came to a standstill. She had never even dreamed of Straker. He was a complete stranger to her.

IV.

It was Gabrielli who told Alison about the scandal in Miles Straker's family. Gabrielli had got details from the younger Whirtie and, with a few reservations due to her youth and sex, passed them on to Alison.

"It's ruined Straker's life," Gabrielli said complacently. "He's taken a vow never to look at a woman, so it must be a bit of a blow to him to have you here. Of course, old Duplessus doesn't count as a woman, really."

"Just because his father eloped with another man's wife!" Alison exclaimed dismally. She thought it a narrow-minded reason for such an inhuman vow.

"It was the rotten way they did it," Gabrielli replied. "Nobody dreamed they had the least intention of running away together. Old Straker fixed it up to go to Fort Myers that day on business and the woman pretended she was going on a visit to her sister; even sent a trunk on ahead the day before. They had to walk a couple of miles through the woods to meet the stage, she taking that poor little kid of hers with her, and then—if you please—abandoning it. Anything might have happened to the child. It's lucky for them they didn't have murder on their conscience. Whirtie says that Miles Straker has fits of getting quite queer over it at times. He was only fifteen when it happened."

Alison's eyes filled with tears and she sighed.

"I know," Gabrielli said with mournful resignation, "you're crazy about him like everybody else. There hasn't been a dog's chance for me since we struck this lonesome hole. Thank heaven, I can still live for my art! But you can't say he's looked at you yet, can you?"

Alison flushed and replied with proper indignation. Why, she demanded, should Miles Straker look at her? She wasn't here to be looked at, anyway, and Mr. Gabrielli would kindly attend to his own affairs if he possessed any of even trifling importance.

"I don't blame you for getting mad about it," observed the irrepressible one. "If I was a pretty girl it would make me wild to be snubbed like that."

Alison got up and left him.

It was too bitterly true. They had been at Blue River for two weeks now and their host had seemed all that while to be completely unaware of Alison Morrow's existence. From the moment her name was mentioned and he had acknowledged the introduction he had lost all consciousness of her.

Alison had been left out completely, and although she saw quite a lot of Straker, both at mealtimes and on the excursions he arranged for their entertainment, it was as Gabrielli had so pointedly remarked that Miles Straker behaved as though he were quite unaware of Alison Morrow's very existence.

Alison was left more or less to her typewriter with nothing much to type, and to such fleeting attentions as Gabrielli and Madame Duplessus found time to bestow upon her. In Straker's tacit ignoring of her she read a subtle rebuke to Uncle Roddy for presuming to bring her to Blue River. It was humiliating and the moment came when she felt she could bear it no longer. Whether he liked it or not Miles Straker must come out into the open with his rudeness and give her a reason for such treatment.

* * * *

Having determined to make an opportunity, one was soon discovered. Alison noted a moment when she could reasonably count upon Straker being alone—the hour of siesta after lunch—and went boldly to his bungalow to which she, alone, had never been invited. The bungalow had a veranda and was quite the most attractive building in the haphazard colony; cool and pleasantly inviting the living room looked as seen from the doorway, with its rows of comfortable masculine occupation.

Straker was sprawled half asleep in a long cane chair, and as he started up with an expression of vague dismay, Alison's courage failed her and she felt incredibly silly.

"I'm awfully sorry," she said faintly, "but I wondered if you would be so kind as to lend me a book. My name is Alison Morrow. I'm Mr. Blair's secretary."

Quite noticeably Miles Straker winced and poor Alison wondered if she was as bad to look at as all that.

"I know," he said. "Certainly—help yourself. What sort of a book would you like?"

"I didn't come for that, really," she forced herself to say.

Straker favored her with an inquiring look and they stood facing each other across a big writing table, littered with all sorts of fascinating odds and ends. Quite obviously he was waiting for her to proceed with her story and he did not ask her to be seated. Her feelings boiled up and over.

"You have been very unkind to me," she said angrily. "I can't help being here. It isn't my fault if Uncle Roddy didn't find out beforehand that you don't know how to be civil to a woman. I haven't said anything to him yet—but since my presence is so terribly distasteful to you, I'm going to ask a favor, that you'll send me back to Fort Myers tomorrow. I can wait there until Uncle Roddy and the others have had enough of you. In my country even the most swelled-headed, heaven-sent genius wouldn't be afraid of risking his dignity by giving an occasional kind word to such a worm as I."

"That's how it seemed to you—and I don't blame you!" he cried. "Please forgive me, if you can. There was a reason—"

"I know your reason," Alison sobbed. "But is it fair to punish a stranger for your father's fault?"

His hold on her tightened and she gave a gasp of pain.

"That's how little you really do know!" Straker exclaimed violently. "You are not a stranger, and I always felt that some day you would come back to torture me, perhaps in this very way."

Alison gasped again, but this time it was not because he held her wrist so tightly.

"My God, what do you mean!" she whispered.

For several days past her intense interest in Straker and his determined ignoring of her had thrust into the background those eerie feelings of herself as a ghost haunting old scenes and with sealed orders to perform some difficult task, but his extraordinary assertion recalled them to her with renewed urgence.

He dropped his hold of her and passed his hand across his eyes as though to rid himself of an unpleasant thought.

"Please forgive me. I oughtn't to have said that."

"But you did say it," Alison insisted. "You must have meant something."

Straker waved aside her fearful eagerness.

"Do you think I haven't seen you? Do you think I haven't been aware of you, day and night, every moment since you came? God—I could tell you! I'm not quite so 'swelled headed' as I've given you reason to imgine. But I always knew—I always knew! That's what makes it so infernally bitter—that I knew you would come back—Just as I—stayed here."

Suddenly he stopped in front of Alison, held her face in his hands and bending down kissed her full on the lips, a hungry, impassioned kiss that gave her his life, yet took hers in fair exchange.

A moment later, she was running blindly under the scorching heat of the sun across the shimmering sand and wiregrass to the guest house, where she found Madame Duplessus in a lawn wrapper fanning herself and drinking lemonade, disposed to complaints of the August weather one discovered in Florida in December.

V.

That night at supper in the big dining room Straker asked their pleasure as regarded a picnic for tomorrow, and Alison was specifically included in the conversation.

They would drive in a three-seated surrey drawn by the pair of Morgan horses Straker had imported from Kentucky, and young Angus Whirtie would be of the party to perform the objectionable tasks incident to picnic meals. It seemed a delightful prospect and Roderick Blair was much intrigued by the idea that they were to halt by a stream and catch trout for their breakfast while Freckled Face prepared coffee and biscuits.

The excitements of the day had left Alison pale but exalted. She wished she had the courage to go to Uncle Roddy again and explain her cruel perplexities. Uncle Roddy was a sort of "mind doctor" and ought to be able to help her, but she simply couldn't tell him about the kiss that had drawn her very life into the keeping of Miles Straker, and it was unfair to tell only a part of the strange experience and withhold the most important item.

She was glad that she had no opportunity of seeing Miles Straker again that evening, glad that she had abandoned her insistence for an explanation and run away, carrying with her all the rapture and ecstasy of the magic moment. She knew in her soul that Miles would never be able to go back on the promise of that kiss, that he would never want to go back on it. Soon—very soon—they would meet again, secretly as lovers, and he would clear away the mystery which lay so incomprehensively over them and this strangely familiar land.

As it was, however, Roderick Blair was able to make it the subject of a long chapter in his new book, and Professor Blount gave a lecture about it at the university, a lecture which had a slightly morbid success. Gabrielli, himself, expressed it in the form of a play so far unproduced, doubtless owing to the fact that the last act is still unfinished.

The picnic party was off at half past four in the morning. Gabrielli, who turned over in bed and closed his eyes again when he was first called, came very near to being left behind, and would have been if Professor Blount's advice had been followed.

Roderick Blair shared the front seat with the driver; in the second were Madame Duplessus, Alison and Gabrielli, with Professor Blount and Straker behind, and Freckled Face's cooking arrangements, the provender for man and beast and fishing tackle slung in a cradle under the body of the surrey.

They were all very hungry, for they had started without even a cup of tea or coffee to stay them and it was most welcome when Straker called a halt by the wayside not more than a couple of miles from Blue River.

The place was a natural picnic ground, carpeted thickly with pine needles, a gurgling stream running a few yards from the road, with a picturesque background of cacti all in rich red blossom enlivening a pool of gray sand.

Everybody was so busy and interested in the glorious progress breakfast was making that Alison's mood was perceived and enjoyed by nobody but herself.

It was the very goal which she, a poor, witless ghost, had been striving to reach all this time. The flaming cactus flowers, the rushing trout stream, the very tree against which she rested—here was the goal.

She was waiting now for what might happen next; waiting for her clouded consciousness to reveal it to her; something too terrible to be put into words had happened on this spot—yet what was it?

And then suddenly, to her own dismay and the utter consternation of everybody else, Alison was on her feet uttering piercing screams.

"Come back—come back!" she cried, wringing her hands and livid with horror. "The ground will swallow you up if you go there—it buried them, buried them alive!"

Apparently Gabrielli had occasioned this insane outburst. He halted, poised like an alarmed butterfly just within a hover of the cactus plants, to pick a couple of the red blossoms his announced intention having been to decorate himself in tropical fashion. And as he halted his feet began to slip in the fine gray sand, and he, too, let out a shriek to match Alison's, while Miles Straker and Freckled Face lunched themselves at him as with a single thought. The sand was well above his knees before they succeeded in dragging him free of its clutches.

"Quicksand!" exclaimed Professor Blount, in stupefied accents. "My God, how did the girl know!"

Miles Straker showed them a face which for all of its tan looked at that moment as white as paper.

"She knew," he said, choking a little over his words, "because she was here before—the only living witness. O, now I understand! Give me a moment."

He dropped heavily to the ground and held his head in his hands, while the agitated Gabrielli gulped hard and mopped his own forehead with a gaudy silk handkerchief.

"Because," Roderick Blair explained, "as Straker says—Alison was here, a child of two years old when that same quicksand buried her mother and John Straker. I ought to tell you, Alison, that I promised your father I would bring you back to Blue River some day to see if your memory would reveal anything to you. Your father never believed that your mother ran away with John Straker, yet nearly everybody else thought so. Even Miles believed it, and when he heard your name and connected you so painfully with his tragedy, he wasn't any too pleased to have you at Blue River. Tell me, my child—how do you remember it all?"

"I remember I went to pick a red flower for my doll," she said slowly, "and the sand pulled me down and down. I screamed and they both—a man and a woman rushed to drag me out. They flung me clear of the sand but it caught and buried them. I ran crying into the woods. I don't remember any more."

She sank exhausted into Roderick Blair's arms.

There isn't much more to tell. The picnic party trailed back to Straker's, being in no mood at the moment to continue their excursion to the Sulphur Springs, and Prof. Blount occupied himself for the rest of the day in getting as accurate information as he could of the old story.

* * * *

And that is why Victor Gabrielle finds it difficult to write the last act of his play. Logically, he felt that he should be the hero, when actually he had to play second fiddle and be nothing better than a best man at the wedding of Miles Straker and Alison Morrow.

All the jungles in Brazil along the Amazon and all the heavily wooded forests in all of the United States and Europe could not yield an animal whose name started with "U," so finally, in despair, the Cross-Word Puzzle Zoo hunters journeyed to Africa where they found, not a four-legged beast, but a wading bird. He was so delighted when he heard of the zoo that he said he'd only be too happy to join the crowd, even if his playmates were all animals.

WEARING DOWN OBSTACLES.

Passing of the Buggy.

The buggy threatens to become a museum property even before the stuffed horse or the articulated skeleton of the last mule. Between 1923 and 1925 the nation's output of buggies slumped by 62 per cent. Just what the total value of that little two-passenger type of animal-drawn vehicle for 1925 was is not given apart from the carriage record, but the two together are placed by government statistics as only $1,245,000. Of these, buggies certainly were far short of the half. The most insignificant automobile manufactured would show a higher figure. But, more humiliating still, the total value of all horse-drawn carriages and buggies combined fell more than $500,000 behind the total value of the humble wheelbarrows manufactured in the United States. This, despite the fact that wheelbarrows are also on the down grade in production. In 1923 there were 505 establishments building carriages and buggies, but two years later the number had dwindled to 283. What will the next census show in this line of activity?—From The New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Famous Monuments — Tomb of the Queen of Sheba — By Hendrik Van Loon

Color Instructions

Abyssinia is a hot land and I would advise you to make your foliage and your foreground a brownish yellow. Not too brown, for then you will lose sight of the road which leads up to the monastery and which also has to be made brown.

As for the coloring of the temple, I might as well give you complete liberty for I have never been in Abyssinia and I have only seen photographs of this tomb. But as it seems to have been built of brick, you had better give it the color of brick and that particular color you can get by experimenting with your reds and yellows until you get something that looks like the brick walls of your own house.

The roof is covered with green grass and the little domes are once more of brick. This would make rather a dull picture, and so why not add a few touches of color according to your own taste and preference.

The sky in this case should be an even yellow. That would suggest heat, if nothing else.

It is a strange and rather fascinating little monument, this forlorn little monastery standing hundreds of miles away from what we sometimes call civilization.

Eventually, like all brick structures in hot climates, it will be destroyed by the rich vegetation of the tropics.

Meanwhile it has served to remind us that the world is rather a big place and that there are more things under the sun than we usually take the trouble to dream of.

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution.)

THE title of course is misleading. For the monastery which is said to contain the grave of the famous Abyssinian queen was built almost two thousand years after her famous visit to King Solomon took place. But it is part of a curious and interesting bit of history and it throws a strong light upon a point which I have already mentioned in the story of that gigantic monument to human emotion which was called Jerusalem.

It shows how that town was not only the Holy City of the Jews and the Christians but also of the Mohammedans and the mysterious race which we know as the Abyssinians.

Modern Abyssinia is a kingdom on the east coast of Africa. Recently, so it seems, oil has been discovered in the realm of the Negus (That is the name of the dusky kings of that vast empire) and its days of independence may shortly come to an end.

But when Solomon ruled the kingdom of the Jews, there was a prosperous Abyssinian country and when Solomon began to build his temple and ransacked the world for gold and silver and rare bits of wood, the fame of his riches spread throughout the ancient world and finally the great queen of the south (who seems also to have ruled over part of Arabia)decided to go and see for herself what sort of man this unknown monarch might be.

According to one of the many legends, the queen although very beautiful, was slightly lame and she hoped that Solomon, who was renowned all over the world for his wisdom, might be able to cure her.

Solomon from his side was so impressed by his visitor that he built her a large palace, made entirely of glass, and over the floor of which (probably to keep the building cool) there streamed a constant flow of water full of bright colored little fishes.

Of course, all this lacks historical confirmation. But as I have said before, it shows the veneration in which Jerusalem was held by practically all the people of that corner of Asia and Africa that was bounded by the River Jordan and the Nile.

Afterwards the Abyssinians became Christians, but they never quite forgot their early relations with their Hebrew neighbors and claimed that such venerable objects as the original stone tablets of Moses and the Ark of the Covenant were brought to their own country when they were no longer safe among the hills of Palestine and that even today they lie buried somewhere in the soil of this Ethiopian land.

After the downfall of Jerusalem the Abyssinians had no further direct intercourse with the western world until some ten centuries later when emissaries from the Negus made their appearance in Rome and started the strange myth of Prester John, the mythical Christian chieftain who ruled an empire of his own in the heart of Africa.

And it was partly in quest of this Prester John that the earliest navigators set forth upon those perilous voyages which finally landed them on the shores of the new world which is now our home.

The House in the Fog

An Adventure of the Good Losers Committee

By JANE TRUMBULL

SYNOPSIS.

Martie Sherwood is girl president of the sophomore class in Harristown High school, and very popular among her classmates. Mr. Caldwell, a wealthy man living between Harristown and Centerville, had offered a new gymnasium to the high school in the county which proved most worthy of receiving it. Contests in many sports and studies were arranged among all the schools, and finally the race became one between Centerville and Harristown. Centerville won by a narrow margin, and invited a committee from Harristown to attend their celebration. A "Good Losers" committee was composed of Martie, her brother, Jerry, and three of Martie's friends, and they start in Jerry's car to Centerville on a foggy afternoon. Forced onto a side road by a detour, they lose their way and stop at a house, where a mysterious voice bids them enter. Inside they find no one. Suddenly the lights are turned off, leaving them standing in the dimly lighted room.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

* * * *

INSTALLMENT II.

"I'm beginning to feel spooky," said Anne with a shiver, as she drew Martie closer to her.

At that moment the chugging of an auto could be heard outside.

"Someone is coming," cried Martie, and she hurried toward the door. Suddenly she turned with a frightened cry. "Jerry, someone has taken our car. Look! There it goes."

But Jerry looked too late. Already the automobile had gone out of sight. He ran to the roadside, calling with all his might, but there was no answer except the voice in the house which still said "Come in. Come right in."

Marjorie, Anne, Lelia and Martie stood looking at each other in dismay as Jerry came back to the fireside.

"I'm going to find out where that voice is coming from. Who is going with me?" Martie demanded. Then, as no one answered, she took her brother's hand.

"No, Jerry Sherwood! Don't you dare leave us!" his cousin Lelia said, imploringly. "Anne is right. This place is spooky and if you leave me I'll have an honest-to-goodness fit!" She was clutching at Jerry's other hand and there was a trembling tone in her voice.

"Then I'll go alone!" cried Martie. "You stay with the girls, Jerry. I never saw a spook and I want to know how one looks."

"So do I," said Anne. "I'll go with you." But her laugh was a trifle shaky and she slipped her arm through Martie's and they started in the direction from which the voice still occasionally called.

It was not a small house as they had at first thought. I had been barely visible in the fog, but there were large halls and a wide staircase leading to the rooms above.

"Whoever is calling wants us to come to them. Lelia always was a'fraid cat," said Martie.

"But it is strange. Why haven't they come to us? Such a queer hoarse voice, too. I don't like it, Martie. If it was not for you I'd—"

But Anne got no further. She had fallen over a half filled trunk as she turned from the staircase. As she rubbed her bruised shins Martie's eyes were darting quickly about in the gloomy upper hall.

Several large rooms opened on the hall and all looked to be untidy and muddled. Something was wrong. People did not usually leave drawers pulled out and the contents upset like this.

Suddenly the hoarse voice called again.

"Where are you? We are coming," Martie managed to answer, but her own voice did not sound natural. She was afraid to tell Anne her suspicions, but in her mind's eye she could see a woman tied and gagged. It was evident that someone had ransacked the house.

"We must go and help her, Anne," she gasped, and hand in hand they went from room to room searching for the voice. Each dark shuttered place they entered was as empty as the last and now the voice did not answer their calls. The only sound was the heavy rain beating on the roof.

"He held a shining revolver pointed straight at her brother"

The house showed every sign of wealth—lovely, rich, silky rugs and hangings, and beautiful furniture. Even the door knobs were of chased silver and the paneling of the walls looked like satin.

"I'm not so sure I want to meet a ghost," whispered Anne. "I wish we had never left our car. One thing is sure—it was no spook that took that. Spooks don't drive."

"No indeed. And if I don't hear a car in the distance this minute I'm willing to believe this place is haunted." Martie stood very still to listen and Anne nodded her head.

"Yes, I hear it. It's coming closer. If only it's ours coming back!" Anne led the way to a window and they stooped down to peer through the shutters.

"It's coming here," said Martie, as a car turned up the side drive that led to the door. But even in the fog they did not need to look twice to see that this was not their car. The handsome blue-gray coach showed every sign of luxury. A chauffeur was now opening the door and stood as though at attention while a lady covered from head to foot in a gorgeous fur coat alightd. She was followed by a well groomed man of middle age. The moment they reached the side entrance the lights were switched on in the upper hall.

"Thank goodness for the light," said Martie. Let's hurry down. It might be embarrassing to be caught up here." Hand in hand they hurried down the hall, their swiftly moving feet making no sound on the rich carpets.

There was a rumble of excitement downstairs, and the sound of voices all trying to talk at once. Less than half way down the padded stairs the two girls stopped and, holding their breath with excitement and fear, gazed down through the banisters.

The sight that met their eyes was enough to call for shrieks from them. Jerry held one hand high. His other was supporting Lelia, who seemed to be in a dead faint. Marjorie had both hands above her head and her big brown eyes were wide with terror. In the center of the floor a tall man stood with his back to Martie. He held a shining revolver, pointed straight at her brother.

"Keep your hands up, all of you," the man's voice ordered. "I'll keep them covered, mother, while you get Joe in here and find Judson." But you'd better phone for the police first. It looks as though we came just in time. Wonder where Judson is? I told him not to leave this place empty."

The lady whom he addressed as mother seemed very frightened. Martie watched her in fascinated silence as she took the telephone from its fancy covering. Her hands shook and her voice was frightened.

"We haven't been here five minutes," Jerry began. "Came in to ask a question. Some one stole our car and called to us to come in, and my sister—"

"Keep your explanations for the police. If they believe that story, tell it to them." The man's disagreeable tone showed Martie that if she was to help she must act quickly. He was not likely to believe her.

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

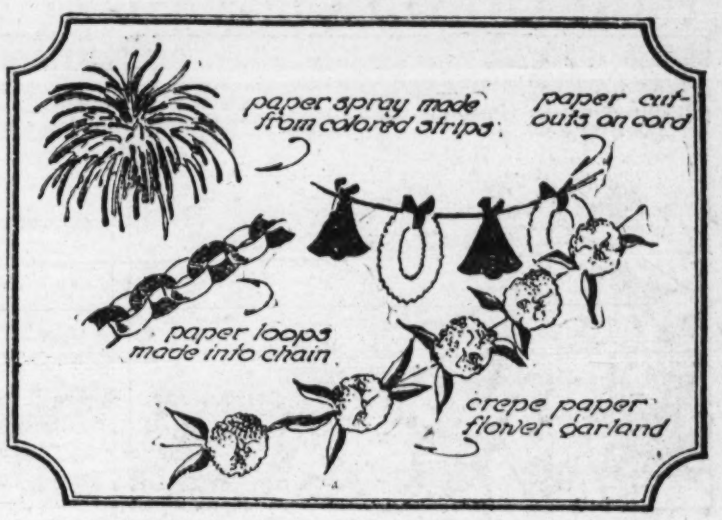

Many pretty things come from colored paper and a little effort. You can make all sorts of holiday decorations from some paper, a pot of paste and shears.

In the upper left-hand corner of the illustration is shown a flower made by twisting strips of vari-colored paper into cords and bringing them all together at the base, to be tied with string. This is then covered with green paper to resemble a bud.

You are familiar with the paper chain. This, if made from paper of several colors, will make a nice decoration.

Buds and flowers, with two or three green paper strips, cut to resemble leaves, can be strung up also.

Crepe paper will be best for your work, altogether you will need some which is smooth also. A clever novelty which is easy to make consists of a strip of crepe paper with a string run in and out at inch intervals through its length. As the paper is threaded, it is also twisted. The result—a thick cord about an inch in diameter—is someting unusual, to say the least.

"We got four cats," said the mountaineer.

"Why wouldn't one hole be sufficient?"

"Stranger," said the mountaineer, "when I say 'Scat' I mean SCAT!"

Whose life was all wheezy and sneezy,
When asked as to why,
